JOURNEY I.

From the West to the East End of the famous Roman Wall, and on Part of the great military Road.

UNDER the name of the Roman Wall are included three Præ-tenturæ or defences against the inroads of the Picts; viz. Hadrian's, computed to have been built Anno Christi 123; Severus's, Anno 210; and the last made by the provincial Britons conjunctly with the Romans under the third consulate of Ætius, A. U. C. 1198, Anno Christi, 444, or, according to Archbishop Usher, 446. Hadrian's is acknowledged by all the learned in antiquity to have been cespitious, or of turf, but they differ with respect to Severus's; and the Roman writers, Spartian, Eutropius, Aurelius Victor, Cassiodorus, and Paulus Diaconus, are not clear enough to decide the controversy with precision, whether it was of turf, or stone, only expressing it by the words Murus and Vallum (a).

Paul. Diacon. 1. 8.

Venerable Bede positively asserts, that Severus's Prætentura was originally no other than a ditch and rampart of earth, and that it was re-edified with stone by a Roman legion, and the associated strength and purse of the whole British nation, in the space of twelve months, after their second embassy to Rome for assistance. It is in length, sixty-eight English miles, and one hundred and sixty-nine paces, according to the survey of the ingenious Alexander Gordon (b), which are equal to seventy-three Roman miles, and nine-hundred and fifty-nine paces.

By Sir Henry Spelman's calculation, the Roman militia along the wall amounted to 13,800, allowing 600 to a cohort; besides a whole legion, and thirteen other detachments of horse and foot, stationed at other places, by the grand roads and passes, and attending on the emperor, or his lieutenant. A great officer, stiled, Comes spectabilis Litoris Saxonici, created by Constantine the Great, had under him seven companies of foot, two troops of horse, the second legion, and a cohort, to protect the sea-coasts from the Saxon rovers. The Roman army in Britain under Nero were 70,000 (c).

The notion of their having a brazen trumpet in the wall, between one Castellum and another, through the whole length, to give an alarm in cases of danger, on the strictest enquiry is groundless. Some of our ancestors, indeed, held their lands by cornage, by blowing a horn on the approach of an enemy, which custom was probably borrowed from them.

This famous wall (d) crosses the rivulet of Poltrofs, the boundary between the two counties of Cumberland and Northumberland, at a place, called The Crooks. About a quarter of a mile farther east, a breach was made in it by the Scots, which to this day bears the name of The Gap. From hence it goes for a quarter of a mile, nearly in a straight line, to

Thirlwall-Castle, the seat of the antient family of the Thirlwalls; of John de Thirlwall, son-in-law to Sir William de Swinburn, Knt. 7 K. Edward III, 1333; and of Robert de Thirlwall, 10 Q. Elizabeth (e). The last and sole heir was Eleanora Thirlwall, married, 1738, to Matthew Swinburn, a younger brother of the house of Cap-Heaton, Esq; who sold it to the late right honourable Henry Earl of Carlisle. The castle stands on the western banks of the brook Tippal, whose stream glides under it in a winding current, guarded by a Vallum, or wall, of a vast thickness, which with the brook, and a rocky slope, rendered it on that side inaccessible. At the entrance, part of an iron-gate is still remaining, within which, on removing the rubbish, the flooring of a room was discovered in 1759, consisting of three courses of flags one above another, a stratum of sand lying between each. The walls now remaining are in some parts three yards, and in others two yards and three quarters thick. The west end, for the sake of the stones, is entirely demolished. It has been large, and vaulted underneath, as most of the old castles are.

At a small distance, and in sight, from the south front of Thirlwall-Castle, is an encampment, with a cespitious rampier and fofs; the first pretty high to the north, now called, the black dykes, wherein, on digging turf or fuel, lead-bullets have been found. A quarter of a mile to the west of it, there is another encampment.

The Roman wall crosses the Tippal, under the south front of Thirlwall-Castle, and by a little cottage ascends the hill for a quarter of a mile to the Roman station.

Caer-vorran (f), so called from the British Caer, a town, and Vorwyn, a castle; i. e. a garrisoned town; Vorwyn being corruptly called Vorran by the Northern borderers. There is a notable specimen of their dialect in an instrument of truce made by the river Esk, near Salom, bearing date xv March, M. CCC. XX. IV; the right honourable Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, and Archibald Douglas, Lord of Galway, then governors of the borders. It is inserted in the Acta Regia (g). The poor people upon Esk, and on the wastes near this station, speak the same dialect at this day.

The station or fort is nearly in the form of a square, the grand wall making a flexure round it to the south, and then ascending the precipices; the ground within it four acres and a half, as measured by Mr. Waller, surveyor of the military road through Cumberland. At the east end of it, a Human skeleton was found by the workmen employed in digging up the foundations for making that road; the osseous parts, particularly the skull and teeth, fresh and fair, but on being exposed to the air, the whole turned to dust.

A small, but very fair Roman altar was found some years ago, inscribed, DEO VITERINO.

Also a small brass Lar. The Romans sacrificed to the Lares on May-day; the violet then in bloom; their altars fragrant with it and aromatic drugs.

The altars blaze with rich Arabian sweets. Warton.

They are both in the possession of Miss Fanny Bacon, of Newbrough.

* Brit. Rom.

Mr. Thoresby has given a good print of a Roman altar carried off from this station to Blekenfopp-Castle, from a drawing of Mr. Cay's; the stone neatly decorated, but the inscription a little injured (b). Mr. Horsley has figured it in the condition he probably saw it, in a less agreeable form (i).

A curious and beautiful sculpture of a Roman soldier, in stone, of the white-rag kind, within a nich, and in relief, was dug up in 1760; helmeted; a Pallium or light robe down to his feet, fastened at the breast with a Fibula; an Hasta or spear in his right hand; in his left, a Parma or shield, resting on a short pedestal; above his left shoulder, a lion recumbent, and a deer under it, kept down by the strength of the paws of that noble animal. It is fourteen inches and a half in length, and nine inches, in diameter.

It has been the work of an excellent artist. It was placed as a side-supporter in an aperture to let in the light in a new barn by Mr. Carrick, whose son was so kind, with his consent, to present it to me, 6th June, 1764.

An abundance of Stags horns have been dug up; also many small mill-stones, three of them now lying at the door of Mr. Carrick, owner of the station.

It is near the 38th mile-stone on the military road, at the head of the slope above Glenwhelt, to the north-east. It has a pretty vale and mountain prospect; the Orchard-house near Wardrew, and the castle of Thirlwall, in sight to the west; the castle of Blen-

In the south-west end of Haltwefel church is the stone-effigies of one of the family, recumbent, in armour, his legs a-crofs, and hands elevated; the habit and attitude of a Knight Templar, or fuch as made the Crufade; on which, and for the ranfom of our Cœur de Lion, K. Richard I, fo much money was fwep out of the kingdom, that not one genuine coin of his is said to be met with in the cabinets of the curious; his ransom alone costing one hundred thousand pounds in silver, equal to three hundred thousand pounds of our present money (n).

Garwen Blenkinsopp, D.D. is on record for being a benefactor to that renowned seminary of learning, Pembroke-Hall, in Cambridge, of which he was fellow (o).

The castle of Blenkensopp is about a mile to the south-east of Thirlwall-castle, on the southern banks of the Tippal; upon an eminence, and overlooked by another; the west and north-west side of it protected by a very high cespitious wall, and a deep foss; a vault going through it, north and south, thirty-three feet in length, and in breadth eighteen feet and an half; two lesser ones on the north side. The facing of the western wall has been down beyond the memory of any person now living in the neighbourhood. It has been a very strong building. It is now in the possession of John Blenkinsopp Coulson, of Jesmont, Esq.

We proceed with the wall from Caer-Vorran for half a mile, when we have the pleasure of seeing a piece of it standing of the height and breadth of nine feet. We only go half a mile farther, before we come to

Wall-Town, the lordship and seat of John Ridley, Esq; in the reign of K. Edward VI; of the antient house of Willemotswick, and brother to that exemplary and learned prelate, Nicholas Ridley, D. D. Bishop of London, whom his lordship mentions in his Farewell-letter with the warmest affection. A plain monument is erected over him on the north side of the chancel of Haltwessel-church. His seat was a castellated building, of which nothing now remains but a poor fragment, just sufficient to shew its former strength, as if designed to last for ages. Out of its ruins was built a small mansion by the late possessor, George Marshall, Esq; eminently beloved by his tenants, and the whole neighbourhood, for letting his lands at moderate rents; in which he was succeeded at his death by Mrs. Bacon, of Newbrough, and Mr. Hunter, of Dux-Field, in Hexhamshire.

To the east of the broken remains of the old tower, in an opening of the precipices, is the Well where Paulinus is said to have baptised King Egbert, and some thousands of his subjects. It seems to have been walled round; some dressed stones lying by it.

We pass on with the wall for a mile and a quarter, and then come to the Roman station of Great Chesters (p); the ruins of which appear at this time very fair, on a fine slope, large and spacious, nearly square, the angles obtuse or rounded. On the east side of it is an altar with a Patera sculptured on one side, the inscription entirely effaced by the weather. By its side is another stone, with the figure of a man in a nich, his head gone, his left hand resting upon his side, his right on a short column; no appearance of any inscription.

In digging up the foundations of a building in the upper part of the station, in the beginning of the year 1767, a very large stone was found with a long inscription, but imperfect by two fractures at each corner at the bottom, whereby half of four lines are wanting, besides some letters. Part of the second line is also injured. So much of it as is perfect runs thus.

The stone is of the fine rag, nearly square, with a handsome moulding.

About a quarter of a mile to the south of the station, near a mill, called, The Wall-Mill, is a funeral-stone fixed in the ground, with the figure of a child in a nich, and an inscription underneath, dim and obscure by being exposed to the weather, four feet and a half in height above ground. Hard by is another sepulchral memorial converted to a post for a gate to hang on, called Wall-Mill-Gate. The inscriptions on both are published by Mr. Horsley (q).

(q) No. 64. β. γ.

At

At a small distance from Wall-Mill, and very near the 35th Mile-Stone on the military road, on a ridge of moor, are four tumuli, twenty yards asunder north and south, twenty-eight east and west; cut through by the late observing and curious Mr. Currey, a dissenting minister, who found both entire human bones and an urn with ashes and salt in it; the salt well preserved, white and fair.

The Romans were not very careful to separate the human ashes from the rest, but sometimes put coals and other things into the urn. Their urns were of gold, of silver, and other metal; of glass, of stone, and of marble, but most generally of potter's earth. This was of that kind. Trajan's was of gold. They were of all figures, but commonly round and bellied; those of metal generally embellished with sculpture and bas-reliefs. Urns for persons of distinction were either set under marble-monuments, or in niches of sepulchral chambers. Severus provided his before his death (r). It is said to have been of porphyry (s), or of alabaster (t). The ashes of persons of quality were usually sprinkled with wine, before they were collected into an urn.

Salt was used in their solemn sacrifices, as well as in urn-burial:

Dant fruges manibus falfas.—

Virg. Æn. xii. v. 173.

Urn-burial is not so antient as the present practice of interment. Burning the dead is first attributed to the Greeks, and Hercules is said to be the first of the Greeks who used it. This he did to free himself from the obligation of an oath. He had sworn to bring back a youth (u) to his father (v) from the siege of Troy, and he had no other way of doing it, but by presenting him with his ashes. From the Greeks this custom passed to the Romans, but it was not general among them. From the authority of Pliny (w), it appears, that it was not used by many families, and that Sylla the dictator was the first of the Cornelii whose body was burnt; which is the reason assigned by Antiquaries why we find Roman bones both burnt and unburnt. It was the choice of some, because they would preserve their bodies from the resentment of their enemies. This was probably Sylla's motive. It is supposed the Gauls had it from the Romans; the Celtics or antient Britons from the Gauls; but it is not so easily accounted for how the Danes, and other nations, called Juti and Angli, Saxons and Germans, came by it. It is believed they had it from the Grecian customs and learning, and that they all laid it aside on the introduction of Christianity.

To distinguish which are Roman, British, or Danish tumuli, has been observed to be difficult. Some antiquaries pretend to fix them from their shape. But that is reckoned guess-work, unless inscriptions, arms, or coins, be found in them; the latter of gold, silver, or copper, but neither of them of brass; instruments and coins of that metal belonging to the northern nations, and where they are found in tumuli unquestionably Roman, they are supposed to have been taken from the enemy, and thrown into it in honour of the deceased. The Roman tumuli were cespititious, or mounts of earth, like those here. Such was Hector's, viridi cespite (x); such was Dercennus's, terreno ex aggere bustum (y). Such was that made by Æneas.

— Pius Æneas ingenti mole sepulchrum
Imponit, suaquæ arma viro, remumquæ, tubamquæ, Monte sub ærio. Virg. Æn. v. ver. 232, &c.

No greater misfortune could happen to a Roman, than to be denied the bonos tumuli, the solamen humandi. The atheist, Mezentius, could not die in peace, without begging it of his enemy with his last breath.

Corpus humo patiare tegi—
Et me confortem nati concede sepulchro. Virg. Æn. x.

Hall, past which is a road leading by a pleasant and easy descent to the villa of Haltwessel, which was plundered by the Scotch-outlaws in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; for which they received severe correction from the lord warden of the middle marches, Sir Robert Cary, created Baron of Leppington by K. James I, 1621; and Earl of Monmouth by K. Charles I, youngest of ten sons of Henry Lord Hunsdon, warden of the east marches; his Lordship's son-in-law, Thomas Lord Scrope, knight of the garter, being warden of the west marches; both likewise famous for their courage, conduct, and abilities, in defending the borders (2). It hath an inconsiderable weekly market on Thursdays. There is a manufactory in it of coarse bays, belonging to two worthy Quakers; their fulling-mill finished, and approved of by trial, 17th September, 1762; pleasure and chearfulness appearing in every face on the occasion; giving a prospect of better bread to the industrious poor. It is situated on a rising ground on the north side of the river Tyne, the church and vicarage-house to the south of it; the church-yard forming a terrace, and giving a prospect of the vale, and the winding course of the river; the church consisting of three isles, pewed with oak, the roof lofty, as is the acute arch into the chancel, the window above the altar gothic and stately.

By the river Tyne is a piece of ground, now part of the vicarage-glebe, called The Church-yard, where it is supposed the church antiently stood; grave-stones and bones being frequently dugged up.

On an eminence, called Castle-Banks, east from the church, is the vestiges of a fort, guarded by a cespititious wall on all sides, except the south, where it is open, and has a pretty steep slope, and a large spring towards the middle, now a bog; a fine vale, river, wood, and moor-prospect before it; the villas of Haltwessel, Redpeth, Widen, Bellest-Castle, Plenneller, and Untbank, all visible from every part of it; the sight of the river lost under hanging woods; the meadows and corn-fields between it and the river forming a spacious area or amphitheatre, projecting to the streams like a peninsula; these last belonging to Mrs. Cuthbertson, widow of the late George Cuthbertson, of Newcastle, Esq; who was Lord of the manour.

Sir Albany Fetherstonhaugh, Knight, high sheriff of Northumberland, 2 Q. Elizabeth (k); of Alexander Fetherstonhaugh, also high sheriff, 32 of the same reign (l). In later times, the manour was sold to the right honourable the Earl of Carlisle; and the castle and estate came into the possession of Matthew Fetherstonhaugh, of Newcastle upon Tyne, Esq; father of the present possessor, Sir Matthew Fetherstonhaugh, of Up-Park, in Suffex, Bart. a representative in parliament for Portsmouth, in Hampshire.

Caer-vorran. A corpse of the twentieth legion, called, Valens Victrix, repaired it, as attested by a centurial stone, inscribed,

VEXILATIO LEGIONIS VICESSIMÆ
V. V. REFECIT.

The third cohort of the Nervii was quartered at it, as mentioned in the Notitia (w), attested by two inscriptions on altars, inscribed to the Emperor Caracalla; the latter holding forth a long train of titles. There is a beautiful print of it in Dean Gale's Antoninus. They are all among Mr. Horsley's Romana.

Alione is thought to have been garrisoned by the Romans to the last. Mr. Warburton has placed it in his map of this county at Old Town, by Catton Beacon, near the union of the two rivulets, East and West Allen: of which hereafter. The ruins here are large, the ditches and ramparts still conspicuous. The Maiden Way is continued from it to Whellog-Castle, or Kirby-Thore, in Westmorland.

Notice is taken by Mr. Horsley of an altar in the church-yard at Kirk-baugh, on the other side of the Tyne, inscribed, DEÆ MINERVÆ, ET HERCULI VICTORI.

We now continue our course from the bridge over Haltwessel-burn on the military road for near a quarter of a mile, when on the left hand, on the ridge of a hill, we have a view of three upright pillars of whin-stone, two of them broken off towards the middle. Some persons imagine they were set up for rubbing-stones for cattle, but they stand too close together for that end; and, besides, the setting up more than a single stone in one place for that use is not known to have been ever practised. As those at Little Salkeld, in Cumberland, are called Long Meg and her Daughters, so these here are called the The Mare and her two Foals. The former are acknowledged to be British. The latter are most likely of the same origin, religious and funeral memorials.

From a rising hill, a little beyond the 32d mile-stone, we have a slight view of Willimotefwick (x), i. e. the Mote, or Keep, and Villa of William; built, as usual, on a rising ground, to observe the motions of an enemy. It was the ancient seat of the Ridleys; of Sir Nicholas Ridley, high sheriff of Northumberland, 1, 2, 3, 23 K. Henry VII; and 1, 2, 3 K. Henry VIII (y); ancestor to Nicholas Ridley, Bishop of London (z).

The bishop was the ornament of the house of Willimotefwicke, and of Northumberland. He suffered at Caerlud with Bishop Latimer, 16 October, 1555, on the act de Heretico comburendo, made in the reign of King Henry VII. 1410, against Wickliff's followers; William Sautre being the first who suffered (a); the next being John Bodby, who was burnt alive in parliament-time, and in the face of the whole house, in contempt of the commons, who had petitioned the king for the repeal or mitigation of that cruel statute.

There was another eminent divine of this family at the reformation, Lancelot Ridley, D. D. He was fellow of King's-Hall, in Cambridge, about the year 1532. one of the six preachers of Canterbury, and author of a Commentary on St. Paul's Epistles (b).

That great civilian, Sir Thomas Ridley, Knt. L. L. D. derived his descent also from this antient stock. He was born at Ely (c); educated at Eaton-school, of which he was afterwards a school-master, and fellow of King's College, in Cambridge. For his juridical erudition, and other liberal accomplishments, he was promoted to a mastership in chancery, to the honour of knight-hood, to the Chancellorship of Winchester, and the high station of vicar general to Dr. George Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury. He was member of parliament for Wycombe, in Buckinghamshire, 28 Q. Elizabeth. He was author of a treatise on the Eucharist, and of a book, intitled, A view of the civil and ecclesiastical law. He died, 22 January, 5 K. Charles I. 1629 (d); and was interred in St. Bennet's church, near St. Paul's wharf, London.

The Ridleys of Willimotefwicke seem to have been a family of Literati and divines. Three of them were rectors of the parish of Simonburn, in Northumberland; viz. Robert Ridley, D. D. nominated, 1510; John Ridley, 1532; Cuthbert Ridley, 1635 (e).

Willimotefwicke was the feat of Sir Nicholas Ridley, Knt. 12 Q. Elizabeth; then high sheriff of Northumberland, and possessed of a considerable property (f); also of Richard Ridley, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 27th of the same reign (g). In the reign of *K. A little higher up from the military road we have a view of the Roman station of square, containing about an acre and an half; the wall round it of earth and stone, very fair; a pleasant flowing rill, called Bardon-Burn, washing its eastern skirts, in its course to Bardon-mill, overlooked by Barkham-hills: a deep ditch or hollow, called in this country a clugh, to the south; one of the natural harbours large, composed of white thorn, birch, oak, and nut-bushes, giving a pleasant shade.

The Via Vacinalis from Caer-vorran to Walwick-Chesters comes close up to the north side of it, on which a Roman military stone is still standing, by a gate called Caudley-gate, near the brink of Bardon-streamlet; also another a mile west from it, in a straight line; the road very fair; the mile-stones in fine preservation, of white rag, six feet, four inches, in diameter, and near as much in height above ground, of a round figure, like large rollers.

Some Roman shoes and sandals were digged up by Mr. Warburton, the late Somerfet-herald, which he gave to the royal society. A winged image, wanting the head and feet, about three inches long, was found and presented to Dr. Hunter. A Roman Hypocaustum or sudatory has been also discovered, of which the last mentioned inquisitive and industrious antiquary gives this account. “Some years ago, on the west side of this place, about “fifty yards from the walls thereof, there was discovered under a “heap of rubbish a square room strongly vaulted above, and paved “with large square stones set in lime, and under this a lower room, “whose roof was supported by rows of square pillars of about “half a yard high: the upper room had two niches, like (and “perhaps in the nature of) chimneys on each side of every corner
 “or square, which in all made the number sixteen; the pavement “of this room, as also its roof, were tinged black with smoak.
 “The stones used in vaulting the upper room have been marked

“as our joiners do the deals for chambers; those I saw were “numbered thus x. xi. xiii” (1).

Roman baths were first introduced in Britain by Agricola, to give the natives an agreeable picture of a polite and well civilized community.

Fornix——et uncta popina

Incutiunt urbis desiderium.—Hor. Epist. Lib. i. 14.

A sculpture in stone of Mercury, the Custos Manium, and god of the highways, was found here; an engraving of which, with some others, may be seen in the Britannia Romana. The mercantile part of Britain held a solemn festival to Mercury, 15 October.

Camden gives us an altar, found at this place, of A. Licinius Clemens præfectus cohortis primæ Hamiorum, dedicated to the Syrian goddess, Astarte; the reading scrupled by Mr. Horſley, but confirmed by the Greek altar to Astarte at Corbridge, in the judgment of Dr. Stukely (m).

In digging up the foundations of a Castellum or milliary turret, in the wall, in an opening of the precipice by Crag-Lake, called, Lough-End-Crag, or Milking-Gap, for stones, for building a farmhouse, belonging to William Lowes, of Newcastle, Esq; to the north-east of this station, a centurial stone was found by the masons, very large, inscribed,

IMP CAES TRAIAN

A PLATORIO NEPOTE LEG P R P R

(1) Magna. Camden.

(m) Caraus. Vol. ii. p. 160.

A large stone, in the altar-form, was lately dug up at this station, with the sculpture of a red deer in the center, leaning against a tree, and two fawns at the bottom, in relief. It is now standing in a field on the north side of the house of Hugh Ridley, at Archy-flat, adjoining to the station, who placed it there to answer the use of a rubbing stone for cattle. It was two feet thick, when it was turned out of the ground, but he split it nearly in the middle downwards, to make it easier to remove. It is of the fine white rag, adorned with moldings.

Many stags horns have been dug up; some of an unusual size; one, presented to me, measures round at the base nine inches; striated lengthways, and fludded with small irregular tubercles. The festival of the Roman hunters, sacred to Diana, was 13th August, when stags were sacrificed (n). A temple, perhaps built in honour of her, was discovered by some masons in digging for stones, some years ago, adorned with doric pilasters and capitals, which perished under the strokes of their tools, being unacquainted with the value of such a curiosity. It was at the west end of the station.

Urns, of various sizes, with ashes in them, were found in digging by the above-mentioned Hugh Ridley, on the north side of his house; both of fine and coarse pottery, incautiously broken by his spade; one of them as small as a pint-mug.

In the south-west end of the Well-House, belonging to William Smith, built about twelve years ago, at the west end of the station, by the suburbs, is an altar inscribed, (n) Stukeley's Richard of Cirencester, p 43.

MARTI VICTORI
PRAELECT I CANINVS

It is thirty-four inches long, and twelve inches and an half broad, the under part hammered off by the incurious masons; the inscription within a neat molding or raised border, much injured by the weather, though cut upon that durable stone, the fine white rag, found plentifully on the neighbouring moors. The festival of Mars, was 1st March. In the cabinet of the Revd. Mr. Walton, vicar of Corbridge, is a brass coin struck in honour of it, Marti pacifero; the deity in armour, helmeted; a Parma or shield on his left arm; a sprig of olive held forth in his right (o).

He is sometimes on coins in armour, dancing. The Saltatio armata of the Roman militia on their festival Armilustrium, celebrated 19th October, is still practised by the country people in this neighbourhood, on the annual festivity of Christmas, the Yule-Tide of the Druids. Young men march from village to village, and from house to house, with music before them, dressed in an antic attire, and before the Vestibulum or entrance of every house entertain the family with the Motus incompositus, the antic dance (p), or Chorus armatus, with swords or spears in their hands, erect, and shining. This they call, The sword-dance. For their pains they are presented with a small gratuity in money, more or less, according to every householder's ability. Their gratitude is expressed by firing a gun. One of the company is distinguished from the rest by a more antic dress; a fox's skin generally serving him for a covering and ornament to his head, the tail hanging down his back. This droll figure is their chief or leader. He does not mingle in the dance. Like the frantic Bacchinalian Aruspex,— Nunciet Orgya BACCHI.

This Chorus armatus is prettily described by Claudian.

Armatus hic sæpe choros, certaue vagandī
Textas lege fugas, inconfusosque recursus,
Et pulchros errorum artes, jucundaue martis
Cernimus: insonuit cum verbere signa magister.
Mutatosque edunt paritur tot pectora motus,
In latus allisis Clypeis, aut rursus in altum:

Murmure, et umbonum pulsu modulante resultans;
Ferreus alterno concentus clauditur ense.

Claud. de vi. Consul. Honor.

Here have I seen the armed rings revolve,
In artful flights, in order then advance;
Attack, retire, in all the forms of war,
Their eye still on the signal of the chief.
Then face about, ringing their brazen shields
Against their corslets, or uplifted high
Threaten the echoing skies, whilst steely blades
Harsh murmur, and the clanging trumpets found:
Alternate struck, the martial consort close.

The unlettered Roman called this festal chorus, The Phyrric dance; the better sort, The Trojan game (q).

Some other festival-entertainments of the Romans were observable among the same people some years ago. Their youth ushered in the new year by taking their rounds in the neighbouring villages from house to house; one of the most sprightly and ingenious among them being their bard, who recited some verses, composed in honour of the season, with a chorus, in which all the rest joined, in giving their congratulations. Thus the Romans.

Our British youth being rewarded for their new year's compliment of poetry to their neighbours, retired to the molliæ Prata, the soft meadows, spent the festal hours in wrestling, leaping, and other exercises. So the Romans.

The present owner of this station is Mr. William Lowes; his house behind it, within the manour of Henstree, belonging to Sir Edward Blacket, of West Matfen, Bart.

On the other side of the Tyne, by the confluence of the brook Allen into that river, is Ridley-Hall, antiently belonging to the Ridleys of Willim testwicke, and in later times to the antient family of Lowes; a local name, from the neighbouring forest of Lowes; now the seat and Lordship of William Lowes, of Newcastle, Esq; whose ancestor, Robert Lowes, was one of the gentlemen who had the direction of the watch at Thorngraston, 6 K. Edward VI (r). The seat-house is on a rising ground, built by its present owner; the south-front of brick; a pleasant garden before it; a winding terrace leading from it southward above the banks of the Allen, running north-streams, under a hanging wood; and near its termination a precipice of broken rocks, called, The Raven-Crag, from its being the resort of those birds; yews and hollies growing in the clefts and crevices; one yew affording an agreeable shade and verdure; at a small distance the woody banks of Kingswood, which close this romantic scene.

From a hillock on the west side of the house, the chapel of Beltingham, the castle of Willmotefwicke, the new bridge over the Tyne, the sloping fields, woods, and little dwellings on its opposite banks, and the villa of Hayden-bridge, are agreeable objects.

Opposite to Kingswood, and a mile and an half from the Raven-Cragg, on the eastern banks of the Allen, is the ruin of Staward le Peel, or Staward Castle. It stands on the ridge of a rocky peninsula or promontory, between the Allen and Harfingdale-Burn, a small rill; entered to the east by a narrow, lofty terrace, whose sides are clothed with trees; rocks and precipices appearing through them; under it is a triangular area in tillage, with a hut in the midst of some scattered trees, the Allen passing by in broken murmurs, enlarged by the streamlet of Kingswood, the northern boundary of the Lordship of Whitfield; a semicircular hanging wood adorning its western margin; the rocks of Shewing-sheels, and the villa of Thorngraston, in view to the north. A fragment of the gateway is still standing, where was a draw-bridge, an iron-gate, and port-cullice. There are also nine courses of it standing at the west end, of the white rag-stone, and hewn work; the cement so strong, that one stone can hardly be separated from another without breaking them; guarded by a Foss, and a Vallum of earth and stone. It belonged to the friers Eremites of Hexham; granted, with its demesnes, by Edward Duke of York; to hold by the annual payment of five marks (s). It is in sight from High, but not from Low, Staward; as are many of the beauties of the Allen, whose banks from its Ostium to its association and union with East Allen, present us with such groups of rural imagery, as are not to be surpassed by any spot in this county, for the like space. Among others, is a crag, called, Judas's-Crag, well known to hunters, for giving protection to foxes, in their distress by the chace.

The two Starwards, and the Peel, were in the possession of the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth (r), and are now the property of John William Bacon, of Etherston, Esq; *

About half a mile from High Staward, under a hill, the two Allens pass in a pleasant stream, immediately after their junction, through a handsome new bridge of three arches, of white free-stone †. At the ostium of West Allen is a lead-refining mill, called The Cupilo, belonging to a wealthy company of quakers. On the western, shady margin of that rivulet, is a handsome road, about two miles and a quarter in length, leading to

The seat-house is at a small distance from the villa, on a rising ground, by the streams of West Allen, the eastern boundary between this manour, and the manour of Hexhamshire. Before the east front is a hanging bank of wood, called Monk, remarkable for its beautiful holties. There is a water-fall from a limestone-rock, about a mile to the south, by a precipice of a prodigious height, nearly perpendicular.

At Limestone-Crofs, in the manour of Whitfield, there was formerly a lead-mine.

On Whitfield-Fell is a chalibeat spring, called Redmires.

About a mile from the Cupilo, is Old Town, situated partly on an eminence, and partly on a slope, extending to East Allen; the house next the moor, called Stony-Law, from a little craggy mount, composed of earth, and large single masses of coarse rag-stone, streaked with red and white. There is not the least memorial of its being a Roman station, as supposed by Mr. Horsley, either by funeral-stones, altars, inscriptions, coins, or foundations of buildings; not even a tradition from any body on the spot of its being of Roman original. A quarter of a mile to the east of it, upon the moor, is a hillock of stones whereon about fourteen years ago stood an upright piece of timber or pole, called Catton-Beacon, to which was affixed a vessel with fire in it, to alarm the country on any public danger. The alarm was communicated from it to another beacon on Whitfield-Fell, called Whitfield-Law, visible both from it, and from the mount of Stony-Law; from which last place we have a fine view of the hanging wood leading to Whitfield by West Allen, of the rivulet of East Allen, of the lead-smelting-mill belonging to John William Bacon, of Etherston, Esq; of the capital town of Allen-dale, called,

Allen-dale-town, situated on the banks of East Allen, on an eminence, and overlooked by others on both sides of that rapid brook. It is inhabited chiefly by miners; the church small, consisting of one isle; near the altar, a flat sepulchral stone to the memory of John Bacon, Esq; and his wife Cicilia.

At Bride's Hill, near this town, is a free-school; founded by Mr. Christopher Wilkinson, of Chapel-House, who by will, dated 27th February, 1700, gave 250*l.* for its endowment.

Mrs. Cicilia Bacon, of Catton-Lee, widow of John Bacon, Esq; by will gave to it 50*l.*

Mr. William Hutchinson, of Port-Gate, in the same parish, by will gave a house and garth in Allendale-town, called the Tinker-house, valued at 24*l.*

The school-house was built, 1704. It cost 50*l.*

A road leads by a gradual ascent from this town, southward, over a moor, to the villa of

Allen-Heads, inhabited also by miners ; both belonging to Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. the alpine country round it reputed rich in veins of lead-ore.

To this villa, Mr. Burnand, a Cumberland-clergyman, retired, on his being silenced for nonconformity at the restoration, and employed himself in a little farm, till by the favour of Sir William Blacket, Bart. he was appointed minister of the chapel here, built for the conveniency of the miners, with a salary of 30 l. per annum; the mines then prosperous and rich (w). Sir William gave also 10 l. per annum to a schoolmaster, for teaching the miners children to read and write.

To the east of, and only half a mile from, this mineral villa, is the mountain, called Shorn-Gate, over which the Scots made a road by paring the moss, and tumbling in stones, (to which it owes its name) in their precipitate retreat homewards from Stanhope-Park, 1 K. Edward III. 1327 ; in fear of correction from the English army, commanded by the king in person, after they had made themselves merry at the regimental trim and mien of his soldiers, their cloathing being coats and hoods, embroidered with flowers and branches, very prettily, and their beards uncut, it being the fashion then for the soldiery to wear them.

The boundary-line, called The Scotch-Dike, extends from this place northwards by Catton-Beacon, and crosses the Roman wall at (w) Bishop Kennet's Hist. Regist. p. 891.

Busy Gap ; between which and Housesteads, from a rocky eminence, called The King's Crag, a little to the north, it is in view.

There is nothing more remarkable by the streams of the two Allens.

We now continue our journey from the ascent between the 32 and 31 mile-stone on the military road, for about two miles, till we come to an exploratory mount, with a cut through it, on the right hand, midway between the 30th and 29th mile-stone, when we have a near view, on the left hand, of the Roman station of Housesteads (x), easily distinguished by the ruins and foundations of buildings ; garrisoned by the first cohort of the Tungri, or Belgic Gauls, as attested by no fewer than six inscriptions in the Britannia Romana. It is on a large slope ; the Picts-wall behind it, on a lofty precipice ; Grundon-Lake in sight before it.

Those two celebrated antiquaries, the late Roger Gale, Esq; and Dr. Stukeley, were both at this station in August, 1725 ; of which we have an account by the latter in his Caracausius (y), who had transcripts and drawings of an incredible number of altars, inscriptions, and sculptures, in large letters, and excellent work, taken on the spot by himself, and unpublished ; many of them engraved by Mr. Gordon and Mr. Horsley, but, in his opinion, inferior to the originals. The three females, Deæ Matres, on one stone, with globes in their hands, and short pallia down to their knees, are still remaining ; their heads broken off. They were the tutelary deities of the chace or forest of Lowes. Both Venus Venatrix, and Venus Paphia, are represented as attired in a short robe, nuda genu (z). These here with globes in their hands, and in short coats, are supposed to have been made by a corpse of Thracian or Syrian auxiliaries, expert in the chace, and excellent horsemen; their horses remarkable for their beauty (a).

The globes in the hands of their deities may intimate not only the universal empire of the Romans, but their reliance even in their pleasures on the protection and guidance of heaven. They had a temple on a hillock, now called, The Chapel-Hill. It was of the Doric order; a large fragment of a Doric capital lying prostrate by it some years ago, consisting of two Torus's, plain; also many broken columns. These deities were worshipped in open temples, and in groves. Hard by is a wet meadow, which might then have been a grove, now over-run with brushwood, particularly with the sweet-scented willow, whose foliage, after the morning and evening dew, yield a most grateful fragrance.

Through an opening of a ridge of limestone rocks, a little on this side of the 28th mile-stone, on the right hand, fourth from, and almost opposite to, Shewingheels (b), is a good view of

Langley-Castle, the seat of the barons of Tynedale; of the two Adams de Tynedale, father and son, in the reign of K. Henry III. (c);

For the use of this school, and the relief of poor house-keepers within the chapelry of Hayden, the Revd. Mr. Shaftoe, vicar of Netherwarden, left his estate of Mousen, near Belford, by a deed of gift, bearing date 17 June, 1 James II, 1685; afterwards confirmed in chancery, on account of a subsequent will, bearing date 13 May, 5 William and Mary, 1693; the deed being uncanceled (n); the estate now lett for upwards of 150 l. per annum; the grammar-master to be of the degree of master of arts in one of our universities; his salary at present upwards of 50 l. and the usher's 15 l. per annum.

On the right hand of the military road, by the 25th milestone, in an opening between two rising hills, giving a view of part of the vale of South Tyne, is,

Carraw-Brough, the Roman station Procolitia, garrisoned by the first cohort of the Batavi, as attested by an altar found near it, inscribed,

FORTVNAE
COH. I BATAVOR.
CVI PRAEEST
MARCELLVS PRAE.

The first notice taken of it was by Dr. Cay, by whom a copy of it was presented to Mr. Thorby, and published in the Philosophical Transactions (o). It was then in fine preservation, the stone handsome, and the inscription fair; in the possession of Mr. Forster at Carraw, 1697; and removed to the library at Durham, by the late Mr. Warburton.

Carraw-Brough has its name from the Saxon Burgos or Brough, and the Emperor Carausius who repaired it; of British descent, and a noble and graceful person, as represented on coins.

In crasso jvares Ære natum.—HOR.

To him is attributed the origin of the British empire by sea. He had the high post of Comes Litoris Saxonici, instituted by Constantine, for the correction of the Saxon rovers, whose visits were then bold and frequent. He was also an admiral in the Roman navy under Maximian. On his defection, that Emperor, and his associate Dioclesian, came with their whole naval power on the British coast to destroy him. He saw them, beat them, and made them acknowledge his sovereignty over his countrymen and friends, the Britons; maintaining it ever after in full splendour, both by sea and land, against the whole Roman power. That celebrated Sea-victory over the two emperors was gained on the coast of the Isle of Wight, near Cariſbrook-caſtle, ſo named in honour of the victor, Carauſius. That Carauſius, whom the Roman arms could not ſubdue, fell a ſacrifice to private envy. He was killed in his imperial palace at York by an inſidious friend, Allectus; who ſurvived him but three years, before he met with the like fate.

Among the coins of Carauſius in the collection of the Revd. Mr. Walton, of Corbridge, there is one of braſs, which exhibits a galley, with Felicitas Aug. ſtruck on the feſtival-day of Neptune, 5th November.

A curious ſculpture of Neptune, down to the knees, in a reclining attitude, with his trident by him, in ſtone, of the fine white rag, was digged up at this ſtation, and built up in the eaſtern gable of a cottage at Carrarw, belonging to Ralph Soulsby, of Halyton, Eſq.

From an aſcent by the 23d mile-ſtone, we have a diſtant proſpect of Tone, the ſeat of Alan Hodſhon, Eſq; grandſon to Sir Alan Swinburn, Knt. a younger brother of the houſe of Cap-Heaton; who hath made great improvements at it by repairs and additions, by encloſures, hedge-rows, and good roads, and raiſing plantations about it for ſhade and ſhelter.

From the ſame place we have a full view of

Chip-

Chipchace-Castle (p), the seat of Peter de Insula, 1 K. Edward I (q) ; and afterwards of a branch of the noble family of the Hérons, of Ford-Castle, by the river Till. In the reign of K. Henry VIII, it was in the possession of Sir John Heron, Knt. whose daughter, Urfilla, married Roger Fenwick, Esq; of Bitchfield, in the parish of Stamfordham, second son of Sir John Fenwick, of Wallington, Knt. by Margery the daughter and heir of John Harbotell, Esq; (r). In the next reign it belonged to Sir George Heron, Knt. then keeper of Tynedale ; high sheriff of Northumberland, 13 of Q. Elizabeth (s). He was killed in a fray with the Scotch borderers in July, 1575, in company with Sir John Forster, Lord warden of the middle marches, and his son-in-law, the Lord Ruffel, who were taken prisoners, but released, and the regent of Scotland, Murrey, obliged to make satisfaction by the best offices in his power. Northumberland, 1625; created a baronet, 12 K. Charles II, 1662, for his loyalty to K. Charles I; in whose service his brother, Colonel George Heron, was slain at the battle of Marston-moor. In the 19th of K. James I, he built on to the old castle a very handsome structure; the initial letters of his name, C. H. cut in stone, on each side of his coat of arms, with the date of the year, 1621, above the south entrance. He married Elizabeth, the third daughter of Sir Richard Graham, of Netherby, in Cumberland, Bart. master of the horse to K. Charles I, and afterwards Lord Preston, by whom he had three sons, viz. Cuthbert, John and Charles; the two last of whom lived to succeed him in honour and estate. His grandson, Sir Harry, only son to Sir Charles, sold Chipchace to George Allgood, Esq; of whom it was purchased by the late John Reed, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 1732; descended from a younger branch of the antient family of the Reeds of Troughend, by the river Reed. Mr. Reed added much to its beauty by fashing the whole building, making gardens, plantations, and enclosures, rebuilding the chapel, and finishing it neatly at his own expence. He died, 20th March, 1754, and was interred in his own chapel. He was succeeded by his nephew, Christopher Szulby, now Christopher Reed, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 1764. He married the eldest daughter of Francis Blake, of Twisel, Esq; great granddaughter by the mother's side to Sir Francis Blake, Knt. of Ford-Castle, by the river Till. He hath given many embellishments to Chipchace, by buildings; by laying it open to groves and plantations, and casting the fields before it into a park-like form. It has a very lovely situation, on a declining eminence, to the east of the river of North Tyne; a prospect from it of Nunwick, and of Simonburn-Castle, diversified with the sight of woods, of moors, of rocks, and of the winding motions and meanders of the Tyne, which opposite to the house forms under a hanging bank of wood a large and deep canal; a shady, projecting cliff on the other side.

Under the hill, a little beyond the 23d mile-stone, on the left hand, a road branches off to Nunwick (u), formerly a village, as its name imports, but now the seat of Sir Lancelot Allgood, Knt. It belonged to the Heros of Chipchace, and was sold by Sir Harry Heron to Robert Allgood, Esq; whose only daughter and heir married its present owner, son and heir of Isaac Allgood, Esq; of Brandon-White-House, by the rivulet of Bramish. Sir Lancelot was high sheriff of Northumberland in 1746; one of its representatives in parliament on the death of John Fenwick, of Bywell, Esq; and on the accession of his present Majesty received the honour of knighthood. His seat at Nunwick is of his own erection, after a genteel design; of white free-stone, and hewn work. It stands on a rising plain, which to the east has the appearance of a park. The offices are to the north, a grove to the west, a grass-lawn to the south, and a terraced gravel-walk to the east, which commands a view of Chipchace at one end, and a variety of prospects on the other. Two brooks unite their loquacious streams to give beauty and ornament to a neat garden, and render it an entertaining, as well as useful recess; and thence take their course by another grove, on a declining hill, to the south front of the house, and fall two or three fields below into the river of North Tyne.

In an adjoining field, called, Nunwick-east-field, were five upright stone-pillars, in a circular order; four of them perfect and entire in 1714, the other broken; the perfect ones eight feet high, and nine feet and an half over; the circumference of the area in which they stood, ninety feet. Mention is made of them by Bishop Gibson in his Camden (v). In such kind of cirques, the Britons held their public assemblies, both civil and religious*.

Sir Lancelot has given a new face, as it were, to the country about Nunwick, within the space of a very few years, by making plantations, enclosures, and good roads, one of which leads to the villa of Simonburn, at the distance only of half a mile from his seat, and in sight. It is situated on a rising ground, by a pleasant brook, from which, and the dedication of the church to St. Simon, it takes its name. It is remarkable for being the largest parish in the diocese, extending northward from Chollerford-bridge to Liddesdale, in Scotland; a space of 23 computed, or 32 measured, miles; in which are only two chapels of ease, Bellingham, and Falstone; the last of which had Queen Anne's bounty, by a donation of 200 l. from the late rector, the Revd. Mr. Stainsforth, one of the proctors for the clergy of this county in the house of convocation in 1717; prebendary of the collegiate church of Southwell, in Nottinghamshire; and father-in-law to the Right Revd. Dr. Terrick, the present Bishop of London.

The patronage of this rectory was taken from the See of Durham by K. Edward I, together with the Lordship of Wark upon North Tyne, and the patronage of the living of Penreth, in Cumberland, in resentment of some undutiful behaviour from Anthony

Beck, then Bishop (w). We find it afterwards in the possession of the Darcys. In the reign of K. Edward III, John Darcy left it at his death to that king's amiable consort, Queen Philippa, who gave it to the college of Windfor (x). The Ratcliffs of Dilston, Earls of Derwentwater, had it in later times. By the attainder of the last earl it reverted to the crown; on whose presentation Mr. Stainsforth was succeeded at his death, 1719, by the present rector, the Revd. Mr. Henry Waskell, A. M. Fellow of Peter-House, in Cambridge; to whom the rectory-house, garden, and little glebe, owe their neatness and culture; the south front being entirely built Nunc mea, mox hujus, sed postea nescio cujus.

The church was repaired in 1763; the walls of the side-issles raised; three sash-lights put in, on each side; and another at each end, to the east.

By the pulpit and window at the east end of the south isle, is the effigies in stone of one of the antient family of the Ridley's, the Revd. Mr. Cuthbert Ridley, rector of this parish, in a suppliant attitude, on his knees, venerable with years; a ruff about his neck, the dress of that age. Near him are three of his family sculptured in stone likewise; one at the south corner of the window, in the same attitude; his dress a straight-bodied coat, a sword, and a cloke loosely cast over his shoulders; the head broken off; before him, the following inscription under the bottom of the window.

Above this stone figure, is another of a child on the south side of the window, in the devout posture of prayer, kneeling. The effigies of one of somewhat riper age is in the bottom of the window, recumbent, with this mural inscription underneath.

DEFECTUS MEMORIÆ.

In making a grave in the pew under the next window, 1762, for Mrs. Robley, relict of the late Revd. Mr. Robley, formerly curate of this place, a very remarkable skull was turned up with the spade; on the back part of it, the figure of a large scallop-shell; at one of the auditories, the figure of a torcular shell, like a skrew.

Within iron-rails, on the north side of the chancel, is the burial-place of the family of Sir Lancelot Allgood, Knt. above it a mural monument of marble, with the following inscription.

this place lieth the body of the body of LANCELOT, 2d son of LANCELOT aged two years and nine months.

On the south side of the chancel, within the communion-rails, is a flat funeral-stone to the memory of Giles Heron, of Wark, in this parish, interred 1684; who by industry and extreme parcimony acquired the sum of 800*l.* which he left by will, dated 23d September, 1679, for the relief of the poor of this parish, the maintenance of a schoolmaster at Wark, and the binding out the poor children apprentices; his trustees purchasing after his death the estate of Tocket, adjoining to the rectory-glebe, now let for 72*l.* per annum (y).

In a grave in the church-yard, about three feet below the surface, a small, bright, silver coin of K. Edward II. was found in 1756; now in my possession. On the obverse is the profile of that king; on the reverse, civitas Lincoln, the place of mintage;

the arms of England and France not being on the reverses of our common silver coins till the reign of K. Henry VII.

About half a mile north-west from the village of Simonburn, is Simonburn-Castle, which belonged to the Heros of Chipchace (z), and was sold with its manour and demesnes by Sir Charles Heron, Bart. to Robert Allgood, Esq; now possessed by his son-in-law, Sir Lancelot Allgood, Kt. It is situated upon a shady eminence of tall fir and beach, with a small stream, carrying the name of Castle-burn, gliding under it, between two hanging woods. It was pulled down to satisfy a violent curiosity the country people had for searching, like King John at Corbridge (a), and Nero at Carthage, for hidden treasure; where they succeeded no better than those two royal money-hunters, who got nothing but rubbish for their pains. Part of the west end was rebuilt, 1766, with two small turrets at the angles. It is a pleasing object from Nunwick, and other places, in view at a considerable distance.

Three miles north from Simonburn, on the western banks of North Tyne, is

Wark, the manour of which was part of the possessions of the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth (b); granted to Sir Theophilus Howard, Earl of Suffolk, 1 K. James I; afterwards sold to Sir Francis Ratcliff, of Dilston, Earl of Derwentwater, and by his son's attainder reverting to the crown again, was given to Greenwich-hospital. An extensive common belongs to it, carrying the marks of the plow, for the division of which an act of parliament passed 1765. By the river is a hill, called Mote-Hill, exploratory, for observing the motions of an enemy; on which was a mansion-house belonging to the Ratcliffs; under it, on the north side, is the school founded by Giles Heron; the master's salary, 12 l. per annum.

About four miles north from Wark, on the eastern banks of North Tyne, is Bellingham, two parts of the manour of which belonged to the archbishop of York, 3 K. Henry V (c), and the villa and lands to a family of the same name; to Robert de Bellingham, 2 K. Richard II (d), 3 K. Henry IV (e); to Richard de Bellingham, 33 K. Henry VI (f); their feat an antient castle, hard by, now in ruins; their arms, are 3 hunters horns, fable, fringed, gules.

It hath a weekly market on Saturdays, and two annual fairs.

It is a small, but pretty well built town, belonging chiefly to Christopher Reed, of Chipchace, and the heir of Edward Charleton, of Reedsmouth, Esqrs. the manour claimed by his Grace the Duke of Northumberland; the situation pleasant, on the slope of a hill; the church-yard forming a fine terrace above the river; the church small, but antient, dedicated to St. Cuthbert; the roof of the body of it arched with stone, of rib-work, not a stick of timber in it; many gravestones in the pavement, sculptured with swords; no inscriptions upon them. In the chancel, on the north side, is a mural monument, of blue and white marble, erected by the late John Reed, of Chipchace, Esq; to the memory of his father.

A mile from Bellingham, on the western banks of North Tyne, is Hezley-side, the seat of the antient family of the Charletons; of William Charleton, Esq; in the reigns of K. Edward VI, Q. Mary, and 10 Q. Elizabeth (g); of another William in the reign of K. Charles I, who married Jane, daughter to William Swinburn, of Cap-Heaton, Esq; (h); of Edward Charleton, Esq; created a baronet, 21st of the same reign, 6th March, 1645; son-in-law to Sir Edward Widdrington, of Cartington, Bart. (i); his estate sequestred by the parliament for his dutiful affection to his sovereign, November 8th, 1652; his title extinct at his death: of William Charleton, Esq; 1722 (k); father of Edward Charleton, Esq; the present possessor, who married Teresa, sister to Sir Edward Swinburn, of Cap-Heaton, Bart. like that also had the misfortune to suffer greatly by fire. It stands on the top of a gentle declivity, under a hanging bank of wood; the town of Bellingham in sight; an avenue extending from it through shady enclosures to the river Tyne; a varied prospect to the north; woods, rocks, and moors; the latter pleasant in summer by a moving scenery, the sheep and cattle grazing on them.

About four miles north-east from Hexley-side, on the eastern banks of the river Reed, is Risingham, i. e. the hamlet on a rising ground; of note for being the Roman station Habitancum, by their famous road, called Watlingstreet (1); on which, a mile to the southward of it, was standing some years ago one of their milliary stones, like that by their station at Little Chesters. Brass coins and medals of Roman mintage, of the Antonines, are frequently turned out of the ground by that industrious pioneer, the mole; one of the latter found, 1701; the emperor's name on the obverse worn out, Aug. Pius very legible; on the reverse, a wolf, without any inscription. Mention is made of it by Dr. Hunter, in the Philosophical Transactions, to whom it was presented (m).

This station is not mentioned by Antonine in his Itinerary, yet it must have been a Roman garrison in the time of Aurelius Antoninus, as appears from inscriptions on altars found at it, mentioning his name (n). Some take this Aurelius to be the philosopher An- vine, and that it might have been deserted before the reign of Caracalla, the reputed author of that Itinerary. It must be antient, as shewn by Camden (o), and others (p), from an imperfect inscription discovered and published by them, mentioning a public edifice—Vetustate conlapsum,—gone to decay through age.

At Elisbarw, a small village on the same side of the river, are foundations of large buildings; the river crossed by Watlingstreet, by a bridge of arches; some of the stones still to be seen, with iron-cramps in them, and melted lead. Elisbarw belonged to the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth (q); a chapel at it, now in ruins.

Near two miles east from Watlingstreet, is Elfdon (r), a town of great antiquity; supposed to have been a Roman town in the time of M. Aurelius Antoninus; two Roman altars, with inscriptions found at it, in a hill, called The Mote-Hill; one of them inscribed to the tutelar deity, Matunus; mention made of both in the Britannia Romana, with engravings (s). This hill is trenched round, ten yards deep; a breast-work to the north for its defence. Jaw-bones of beasts, a large stag's head, and a small urn, with ashes of burnt bones in it, were dug up by the late Mr. Warburton, and some imperfect Roman altars observed by him about the hill. It has been sepulchral and exploratory.

The Lordship of Elfden was in the possession of Luke Clenell, of Clenell, Esq; 18 K. Edward I; in which, and in his Lordship of Clenell, he then had a grant of Free Warren (t). In the reign of K. Edward VI, it was in the possession of Sir Ralph Grey, of Chillingham, and of his son, Thomas Grey, 10 Q. Elizabeth, then a minor (u); and lately of Charles Howard, Esq; of Overacres, whose son sold it, with the patronage of the rectory of Elfden, and his paternal seat and estate of Overacres, to the present possessor, the Duke of Northumberland.

The church is small, on the west side of the village; an old tower at a small distance, which is the rectory-house; the arms of the Humfravils upon it; argent, a fess, between six cinquefoils, gules; an inscription underneath, not legible.

At Berrenes, is the ruin of an old chapel; a British temple near it, on Berrene's-Knowl; the stones numerous, of various sizes, in a circular order.

On a green hillock, on a moor, called The Todd-Law, north of the river Reed, are three large stones in a triangular order, twelve feet distant from each other, and each as many feet in diameter; sepulchral, in memory of the like number of valiant chieftains slain in battle.

Near a small village, called the Paunch-Ford, is a hill of indurated argillaceous earth, resembling Roman mortar, used with success in husbandry.

On the west side of the river Reed, is Trough-end, the seat of the antient family of the Reeds; of John Reed, Esq; in the reigns of K. Edward VI, Q. Mary, and 10 Q. Elizabeth (v); great improvements made at it by enclosures and planting by the late Mr. Reed, father of Mr. Elrington Reed, who sold it to his near relation, Christopher Reed, Esq; of Chipchace.

About

About a mile from Troughend, is

Otter-burn, so called from its situation by the brook Otter; remarkable for the bloody battle fought at it between the English and Scots 5th August, 12 K. Richard II, 1388, by moon-light; the former commanded by the Earl of Northumberland, and his two sons, Henry and Ralph Percy, young noblemen of distinguished bravery and courage; the latter, by Earl Douglas, who being desirous of achieving glory by encountering Henry Lord Percy singly, reputed the bravest man in England (w), surnamed Hotspur, for his martial prowess, was overmatched with strength, though equal in courage, and slain. Intimidated by the fall of their chieftain, the Scots were on the point of yielding the victory, but a large body of forces arriving to their assistance, under the leading of the Earl of Dunbar, the English were in their turn forced to give way, and, at length, after a glorious struggle, to give up the laurels; 1800 of them being slain; among the prisoners were Lord Percy, and his brother, Sir Robert Heron, Sir Robert Ogle, Sir John Lilburn, Sir John Colwell, and other knights of Northumberland; the Durham-militia not arriving till after the battle, when they were frightened home again by a manœuvre of the Scotch General, who on their approach caused every man in his army to blow a horn as loud as he could, the sound of which from so many mouths being multiplied in the echo from the hills, made them seem more numerous and formidable than they were (x).

The encampments of the two armies are still conspicuous, also tumuli or sepultures of the slain.

The manour and villa of Otterburn were part of the estate of the noble family of Humfravil (y); and belonged to the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth (z).

Four miles from Otterburn, and eight miles from Risingham, is Rocheſter, the Roman ſtation Bremenium (a), on the brow of a ſteep rocky hill, as its name imports—quasi caſtrum in rupe—near the head of the river Reed, by Watlingſtreet, the courſe of the fiſt Iter of Antoninus; reputed the ſtrongeſt garrifon of any the Romans had in the north (b); the capital of the Ottodini, and ſependiary (c). There is nothing more worthy of remark by the alpine streams of Reed and North Tyne.

From the sloping eminence, where the road branches off to Nunwick, we are presented with a fine view of

In the reign of K. Edward II, it was the seat and manour of Adam de Swinburn, on whose death it came to Sir John de Woodrington, of Woodrington-Castle, Knt. by marrying Christian, his daughter and coheir (h). It continued in that antient house for many generations (i).

rick of Durham, and the parks, wastes, and coal-mines belonging to them, said by Dr. Craddock, Archdeacon of Northumberland, to be then worth 56000 l. per annum (o). Sir William's feat was the abbey of St. Edmund, in Gateshead.

Sir Thomas Ridell, Knt. seated at Fenham, was a representative in parliament for Newcastle upon Tyne, 18 K. James I, 1620; also, 3 K. Charles I, 1628, with Sir Peter Ridell, Knt. Sir Thomas, by his active zeal, and steady loyalty to his distressed sovereign, King Charles I, so provoked the Oliverians, that they offered by proclamation 1000 l. for taking him. He narrowly escaped their vengeance by retiring beyond sea from Berwick upon Tweed. His great, great grandson, Mr. Ridell, the present possessor of Swinburn-Castle, married the daughter and sole heir of the late Horsley Widdrington, of Felton, Esq. His feat at Swinburn is of his own erection, out of the ruins of the old castle, after a very neat design. It stands on the southern banks of a rivulet, whose streams after heavy rains pass in rude majesty, loud and sonorous, between rocks and precipices, on whose eastern summits the mountain-pink displays its modest bloom in June and July, alike fearless of the tumultuous torrent, and blustering winds. It is sheltered with a few tall forest-trees to the east and west, and before it is a spacious field, sloping and verdant, in the neighbourhood of a wood; the range of rocks at Shewing-sheels, and the Roman station of House-steeds, the mountains of Cross-Fell, and of Kilhope, the moors and cultivated plains of Hexhamshire, so fatal to the royal Rose of Lancaster, are in full view on a clear day.

From the same sloping eminence on the military road we have a slight prospect of Haughton-Castle, on the western banks of North Tyne, shaded with trees; remarkable for its strength, a neat little bed-chamber being cut out of the walls, holding two or three chairs, a table, with a fire-place; one fash-light in it. It has been a large, as well as a strong, building; most of it now uncovered; the entrance by a flight of steps; a stable near it without any timber in the roof, arched with stone; also a domestic chapel, now in ruins; belonging formerly to the Swinburns, and the Widdringtons (p); and now to Mr. William Smith, Gent.

We continue our journey down the hill to Walwick, i. e. the village on the wall; which is here in better preservation than it is any where through its whole length in Northumberland, except at Wall-Town. The villa belongs chiefly to Thomas Dixon, Esq; whose seat was lately repaired, with handsome additions; commanding a variety of agreeable prospects; the castles of Haughton and Swinburn, the town of Hexham, the fine river of North Tyne, the bridge over it at Chollerford, the villages of Humshaugh and Chollerton, being in view.

A little below Walwick, on the right hand, is Walwick-Chesters, the Roman station Cilurnum, garrisoned by the Cohors prima Vangionum (q). The ruins are still visible, covering a spacious area, with a slope to the south, beautifully diverging to the trout-streams of North Tyne. The Romans chose such pleasant situations whenever they could have them, and the heights only from necessity.

A consular medallion of Hadrian, of the old mixed brass, was found near this station by some labourers in making the military road, now in my possession. It is four inches in circumference; his bust in bold relief on the obverse; the legend round it, Hadriano Aug. Caesari; within a laureated border, or civic garland---

 OPTIMO PRINCIPI,
 S. C.

It was struck on the first of January, a day sacred to Janus, observed with great solemnity, as presaging the felicity of the new year. The consuls entering on their high office on that day, their coins were then minted, with S. C. in area, i. e. ob Cives servatos.

The Romans crossed the Tyne at this station by a bridge of arches; some of the stones of which may be seen when the river is low.

A little farther down the river, and in sight, is Walwick-Grange, the seat of Anthony Errington, Esq; 6 Edward VI. (r); a younger branch of the ancient family of the Erringtons, of Errington; ancestor of the late William Errington, Esq; high

sheriff of Northumberland, 1739; father of the present possessor, John Errington, Esq. His feat is a modern structure, built on to an old tower, in a low situation, on the brink of North Tyne, upon a rock.

The large funeral-stone, in memory of a Roman lady, with her effigies; the altar, with a female deity, supposed to be Cybele, and the figure of a lion gently raising up the head of a man, prostrate, at full length; the effigies of a soldier on horseback; described and engraved by Mr. Horsley, in his Romana (s), are still at the Grange, in the face of a wall, on the right hand, in going to it; brought from Walwick-Chesters.

In a field south-west of the Grange, by the road to Nether-warden, is part of a stone-cross, or upright pillar, in a square pedestal; upon one side of it, the figure of a sword, in relief, sheathed.

About a mile south-east from the Grange, by the 21 mile-stone, we cross the Tyne, by a stone-bridge of four arches, called, Chollerford-bridge. A release from pennance for thirteen days was granted by Walter Skirlawe, Bishop of Durham, to all such as should contribute by labour or money to the repair of it, 17 K. Richard II; as attested by the following instrument, to which is an old seal appendant, of white wax.

“ To all Christian people, to whom these presents shall come, “ Walter, Bishop of Durham, health in our Lord everlasting.
 “ Whereas the bridge of Chollerford, as we hear, is decayed by the

“inundation of the waters, by which there used to be a frequent passage, and now wants repair, whereby the inhabitants in the neighbourhood are in great danger. We therefore confiding in the mercy of Almighty God, and the sufferings of his Holy Mother, and all the Saints, do release unto all our parishioners, and those in other dioceses where this indulgence shall be received, 13 days of their enjoined penance, upon condition they lend a helping hand to the repairing of the said bridge, or contribute their pious charity thereto. These presents after three years nothing availing. Given at Chester the 8th Kalends of August, of our pontificate the 7th year.”

A mile and a half above the bridge, is Chollerton, i. e. the town by Chollerford; a pleasant villa on the eastern banks of the river, belonging to Sir Edward Swinburn, of Cap-Heaton, Bart.

The parish is large; the chancel of the church lately rebuilt; the roof sealed; a handsome new tower at the west-end. The vicarage-house is a neat structure, built, with all other conveniences, by the present incumbent, the Rev. Mr. Stoddart, father-in-law of John Errington, of Wallwick-Grange, Esq.

From the bridge we ascend the hill, cross the Hexham-road, by Brunton, to the turnpike-gate; opposite to which, on the right hand, is a flight of terraces, on a bank, called,

Hanging-Show, of the same use as the Mote-Hills, exploratory, for the militia to retreat to on any sudden alarm, to observe the motions of, and shew themselves to, an enemy, rank above rank.

We

We continue our course up the hill by St. Oswald's chapel to the 19th mile-stone, a little beyond which we are presented with a fine view of Hexham, situated chiefly on an eminence, by the little brook Hextold, and near the united streams of South and North Tyne, giving its name to a large tract of country, called, Hexhamshire. It is a town of great antiquity. The most learned antiquaries believe it to be Roman, and all, except Mr. Horsley, give it the name of Axelodunum, or Uxelodunum, importing the same thing as the Celtic or ancient British word Uchelodunum, i. e. a high situation. Mr. Horsley will have it to be the Roman Epiacum or Ebchester of Camden (t), and that Brough on the Solway-fands in Cumberland, was their Axelodunum, and the station of their Cohors prima Hispanorum (u).

In the year 1726, Roger Gale, Esq; and Dr. Stukeley, antiquaries of great name, were in this country in search of antiquities, and at Hexham. In a vault at Hexham-church, the burial-place of the late Rev. Mr. Andrews, A. M. they discovered two inscriptions, both Roman; and both, in their opinion, curious. Mr. Gale, in his letter to Baron Clerk, inserted in Mr. Gordon's Appendix, observes, that the first is of very ill work, but what makes it curious is, it contains a new name of a Legatus Augusti, viz. Q. Calpurnius Concessinius, and that of a body of horse at Corchester, called Equites Cæsarienses, or Cæsariani Coronatæ, not mentioned either in the Notitia Imperii, or any where else. The other is of Lucius Septimius Severus, of the best sculpture, the letters large, but very imperfect. The curiosity of it consists in its having so distinctly the name of that emperor, and its being the only genuine one found.

so near the wall with his name upon it. They are both published by Mr. Gordon, with his own, and Baron Clerk's, and Mr. Gale's Observations upon them (v). To his, Mr. Gale hath farther added this, That the whole vault, and the long winding subterraneous passages to it, are all built out of the Roman ruins; carved stones and fragments of other inscriptions appearing every where in the walls; and he supposes them to have been brought from the neighbouring Roman station at Corchester, on the first foundation of the church.

Hexham in the Saxon times was called Hextoldeſham, and Hagustald. In the reign of Egfrid, King of Northumberland, 674, it was erected into an episcopal ſee by St. Wilfrid (w), Archbishop of York, and afterwards confirmed by Theodore Archbishop of Canterbury (x). As Theodore was the first who assumed a jurisdiction over the northern bishops and churches, it will not be amiss to enter a little into his history, before we proceed to give an account of the bishops of this ſee.

He was born at the city of Tarſus in Cilicia (y), a famous university in the days of St. Paul, wherein that apostle had his education (z). Here he also had his learning, and took on him the monastic habit. Being at Rome on the death of Deusdedit, Archbishop of Canterbury, he was chosen by the Pope to succeed him at the age of 76. This was done on the recommendation of his learned friend Adrian, who out of modesty and humility declined accepting it himself. Adrian came over with him. Another of his learned attendants was Benedict Biscop. These three, on their arrival in England, found learning and the arts at a very low ebb. They united their endeavours to make them flourish. Schools were founded under their patronage for the education of youth in Latin and Greek. Music and painting met with particular encouragement. Artists of all kinds were sent for from Rome. Benedict made five journeys to that city, and founded two monasteries himself, Girwy and Weermouth, both in the Bishoprick of Durham. But the Archbishop's principal labour and study was to extend the splendour of the See of Canterbury, by subjecting the northern churches to its jurisdiction. In this he met with much opposition, especially from St. Wilfrid. The easier to effect his purpose, he divided the kingdom of Northumberland, by leave from King Egfrid, into more dioceses. It now consisted of York, Lindisfarn, and Hexham.

The first Bishop of Hexham, after the founder, was

Eata, An. 678. He was succeeded by Tumbert, 680. Tumbert not liking that the See of Canterbury should have any jurisdiction over his, and the other dioceses, openly censured Archbishop Theodore's ambition. Theodore, to punish him for being so bold, took a journey on purpose into Northumberland. He called a council of bishops at Twisford, near the river Aln, 684, at which was present King Egfrid himself. Tumbert was cited to appear before them, and deposed. They proceeded to a new election. The person agreed on was Cuthbert, a monk of Lindisfarn, better known afterwards by the name of St. Cuthbert. It was not without a sort of violence that Cuthbert could be prevailed on to be a bishop. At length, through the forcible persuasions of the king, and the importunity of the bishops, he complied to be bishop of Lindisfarn, and Eata, who had it, was translated to Hexham, which he had before held with Lindisfarn. He was succeeded by John of Beverley, 685, a Saxon of quality, born at *Harpham, in Yorkshire; first a scholar of St. Hilda's, abbess of Whitby, and afterwards of Archbishop Theodore's, and a student at Oxford, where he completed his education. The humility, piety, and learning, for which he was remarkable, made him much caressed. The See of York being vacant, by the death of Archbishop Bosa, he was translated thither, 687 (a). He there lived in high reputation and love for upwards of 33 years. Finding age come upon him, and episcopal cares weighty, he resigned 718. He retired to the monastery of Beverley, of which he was abbot. There he spent the remainder of his days in devotion, and in educating his soul for the glories of another life. When he was at Hexham, all the leisure he could get, he used to spend this way. It was his custom to retire, on every opportunity that offered, particularly in Lent, to his country vill, or episcopal seat, where he had a little chapel or oratory, dedicated to St. Michael. This place is on the north banks of the Tyne, a mile and a half north-west from Hexham. Both Bede and Prior Richard speak of it. Bede says, it stood among a few shady trees, enclosed with a rampier (b). The Prior calls it Mons Aquile, Mount-Eagle, and Ernesbrow (c). It is supposed to be the present village of Nether Warden. The dedication of the church, the distance from Hexham, and the situation, under a hill, on a peninsula, by the union of the two rivers of North and South Tyne, all correspond to fix it there.

* Browne Willis makes him to be a native of Beverley.

In this sweet recess, Bishop John and his chaplains spent their leisure whilst at Hexham, never weary of spending it well, in acts of devotion, of charity, and in reading. Exemplary men! worthy of imitation! The bishop died in 721, and was buried in his own monastery. For his piety and good works he was canonized after his death, and became celebrated by the name of St. John of Beverly. He was succeeded in the see of York by his chaplain, Wilfrid the younger, and in this of Hexham by

St. Wilfrid, or Wilfrid the elder. In the disputes above mentioned with archbishop Theodore, he was overmatched, and on the loss of the see of York, given to Bosa, in his absence at Rome, he was glad on his return to be re-instated in this his favourite one, of his own foundation. In the height of his archiepiscopal grandeur he obtained a grant from King Egfrid, by the favour of his Queen, Etheldreda, of the town of Hexham, and the large tract of country, called Hexhamshire, with the regalities, giving other lands in exchange for them. He annexed them to this bishoprick. The fine church in Hexham, dedicated to St. Andrew, so much extolled by Prior Richard, Heddius, Hovedon, Malmfbury, and others (d), was of his erection. The workmen were brought from Rome. The model, finishing, and decoration, were then above any in England, or on this side the Alps. He also built three other churches, of two of which there are now no remains. One was dedicated to St. Mary. It stood in the place now called St. Mary's Chare; part of the foundations of which have been discovered in digging, and raising buildings upon it. The other was dedicated to St. Peter. It is uncertain where it stood. The third was his predecessor's favourite church of St. Michael at Nether Warden. This has been in the cathedral-form, or in the form of a cross, and long reduced almost to a mere ruin, to the great regret of that parish, who in 1760, obtained a brief for its being rebuilt. The monastery of Hexham, which is incautiously assigned by Cressy (e) to St. Oswald, was of his foundation (f). He died Oct. 12, 709, and was buried in the monastery of Rippon, of which he was likewise abbot; and was removed to Canterbury by Archbishop Odo, 940. His successor in his see and abbey here was,

Acca, his chaplain, companion and friend. Acca's education was under Bishop Bosa, till his admission into his friendship and favour. He attended him in his worst fortunes, and was with him at Rome. There he learned to chaunt and sing well in the Roman choir, and at his return was one of the best voices, the most musical and graceful, in the church of Hagustald. He was so charmed with church-music, that after his election to this see, he engaged one Maban, an Italian, who taught the quire of Canterbury with great applause, to teach him, and detained him twelve years. He improved himself all that while, and with delight took the lead in the sacred chorus. He was a most heavenly man, Vir magnificus, a great soul, says Bede (g). He gilded the walls of his cathedral with silver and gold, and, to add to its splendour, presented it with rich coverings for the altars, with communion-plate, and candlesticks to illuminate the whole glorious dome; and, lastly, with a library, collected at no small pains and expence, consisting chiefly of sacred biography, and church-history. Bede loved him most dearly, dedicated many of his compositions to him, and gave him all the marks of respect and esteem in his power. How deserving soever he was of it, and how much soever he was liked and carested by all good men, and was as a guardian angel among them, to train them to glory, and fit them for heaven, there were those, as there ever will be, who could not bear the thoughts of either, who could not endure the light of his precepts and example, and turned him out of his bishoprick, after he had held it, with so much honour and dignity for 24 years. This was done in the year 732, or 733. He died Nov. 20, 740, and was interred in the confistory of his own cathedral, but was afterwards removed to Durham (h).

the Danes made him resign his see, and for the same reasons others declined accepting it. He died on a journey to Rome, about the year 821, as is supposed. His bishoprick, after a long vacancy, was united to the diocese of Lindisfarn at Chester-le-street, 883, by Bishop Eardulph. It continued in the possession of the Bishops of Durham till the reign of K. Henry I. That King being offended with Bishop Flamberd, gave it to the see of York. Thomas, Archbishop of York, the second of that name, coming to Hexham to visit the monastery, was so much moved with the sight of it, and the cathedral, its solemnity and grandeur, which presented to his mind the great prelates that adorned it by their piety, extensive charity and learning, that he resolved to become its friend and patron. He placed in the monastery a prior and regular canons of St. Austin, 1113, and generously endowed it. Besides other donations, very handsome and liberal, he gave it the cathedral and all its privileges, all the tithes within his manour, and the parish, of Hexham, both great and small (k). The parish was then a rectory, appropriated to the parish of Holm in the church of York, and in the possession of Richard de Maton, a canon of Beverley (l). His vicarius, or vicar, was named Eillan, junr. He had a house and a caracut* of land in Hexham, and six bovats† of land in Ainwick. The rector, Maton, for some consideration out of the common revenue of the chapter of York, resigned all his rights to the priory; but the vicar, Eillan, did not give up his till after the death of the first prior Aschtill, March 17th, 1130 (m).

All which donations were confirmed by royal charters, 27, 35 K. Edward I, on the loss of their title-deeds by their priory being burnt by the Scots; which occasioned the above inquisition to be taken.

Edward, Duke of York, granted them a lease of Le Peyle de Staworth, or Staward Peil, on the eastern banks of the river Allen, of which I have before taken notice. In the rental, or priory-register, called, The black book of Hexham by the vulgar, is an ample account of all their revenues. It has been so carefully gleaned by those two celebrated antiquaries Mr. Dodsworth and Sir William Dugdale, for the use of that elaborate and excellent work, the Monasticon Anglicanum, that nothing is left worthy of the public attention, either for curiosity or use, for others to transcribe.

They had the impropriation of the church of Aldston (q), and of the church of Renwick, dedicated to St. Benedict (r); and the impropriation of the church of Ifell, dedicated to St. Bridget (s); in the county of Cumberland.

They had also the impropriation of the church of Ilkley, dedicated to All Saints (t); and the impropriation of the church of Edleston (u); in the county of York.

Their conventual church of St. Andrew had the privilege of sanctuary for a mile round it, till 25 K. Henry VIII, 1534, when it was enacted, that groſs offenders againſt the laws taking ſanctuary at the altar, or any conſecrated place, ſhould be out of the protection of churches.

Their revenues at the diſſolution were valued at 122 l. 11 s. 1 d. per annum, Dugd. 138 l. 1 s. 9 d. Speed. There were then in the abbey fourteen religious ; the Prior's name, Edward Jay (v). The ſite of it, with ſome lands, was granted to Sir Reginald Carnaby (w).

They had an hoſpital for leprous perſons, of the foundation and patronage of the archbiſhops of York, as antient at leaſt as the reign of King John, dedicated to St. Giles, in the ſtreet, called, from him, Gilligate. It had revenues valued at four marks per annum. It was granted at the ſame time with the priory to Sir Reginald Carnaby (x).

They had alſo an hoſpital for the ſick, called, The Spital, about a mile weſt from the town on a pleaſant ſhady eminence by the Tyne, which glides paſt it in a flow and ſilent ſtream.

(y) In antient times, the Archbiſhop of York had a royalty, with great powers, belonging to his manour and county of Hexham. In the one and twentieth year of K. Edward I, his liberties and powers in Hextildeſham were affirmed by the King's Council in parliament. His caſe was of this nature. In an Iter of Hugh de Creſſingham and his companions, a writ of Quo Warranto was brought to warn the Archbiſhop of York, to ſhew by what warrant he claimeth to have all capitulas of the crown delivered to his bailiff, to be pleaded by his juſtices whom he will aſſign for that purpoſe, concerning all things emerging in his manour of which it was stripped, 2 K. Henry V., for being an asylum to outlaws and robbers (z). The tenants within the manour were exempt from the payment of the public subsidies (a). Under a vacancy of the See of York, a chancellor or guardian was appointed for the spiritualities of Hexham (b). Robert Holgate, Archbishop of York, within a month after his translation from the See of Landaff, 6th February, 36 K. Henry VIII., 1545, gave the manour of Hexham to the crown, in exchange for some impropriations and advowsons, parcels of abbey-lands, retaining nothing but the spiritual jurisdiction (c). It was united to the county of Northumberland, 14 Q. Elizabeth (d). In the 21st of her reign, it

The archbishop cometh by his attorney: and saith, that he claimeth all the said liberties from antient time: and that he and all his predecessors, from immemorial time, without any interruption, have used the said liberties; and this he is ready to verify.

was fold by the crown to Sir John Forster, knight-banneret, Lord warden of the middle marches; and on the 43d of the same reign, devolved to his son-in-law, Sir John Fenwick, Knt. whose grandson, Sir John Fenwick, Bart. fold it to Sir William Blacket, of Newcastle upon Tyne, Bart. in the reign of King William III. It is now in the possession of Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart.

The chief streets in Hexham are

Hen-cotes,	Cockshow,
Priest-pople,	Pudding-chare,
St. Mary-gate,	Hall-garth,
Cofteley-row,	Hall-stile-bank,
Meal-market,	East-burn or Bond-gate.
Gilly-gate.

Hencotes is the place where the poultry belonging to the priory were kept, to which it owes its name. It is a good street, through which is the road to Carlisle.

Priest-pople was the residence of the poor people maintained by the alms of the priory. It is a broad and pleasant street, at the entrance into the town from Newcastle.

St. Mary-Gate leads from the market-place to Priest-pople. It is well built, and regular.

Cofteley-Row goes from the Market-place to the head of Priest-pople. It is a good street.

Meal-Market is between St. Mary-Gate, and Cofteley-Row. It is a narrow street, but regular.

Gilley-Gate, or St. Giles's gate, is a good street, uniform, and furnished with many good houses.

Cockshew is chiefly inhabited by tanners. It is an irregular street.

Pudding-Chare is between the head of Gilley-Gate, and the summit of the Hall-Stile-Bank. It is a small street.

Hall-Garth, or Hall-Court, consists of several small, irregular streets; so named from the town-hall, or town-court.

Hall-Stile-Bank is contiguous to Hall-Garth. It is the entrance into the town from Morpeth.

East-Burn, or Bond-gate, is a narrow, confined street, as the name of Bond-gate imports. It has the name of East-Burn to distinguish it from a streamlet at the west end of the town. It is the entrance from Hexhamshire.

The Market-Place is in the center of the town, large, square, well built, and paved. On the south side, is a market-house on piazzas, or stone-pilasters, lately built for the use of the town by Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. In the middle is a large fountain, with a reservoir under it, of freestone, and hewn work. It was erected at the charge of the inhabitants of that part of the town. The water which supplies it is brought, for near a mile, in pipes. Here are two weekly markets, on Tuesday and Saturday. The first is of chief note. Every Tuesday-fortnight, from the tenth of March, to the tenth of December, is a market for horned-cattle. On the 25th of July, and on St. Simon and St. Jude, are two annual fairs.

The

The want of a bridge over the Tyne is often the occasion of thin markets and fairs. The floods after rains and sudden thaws of snow sometimes come down so hastily, that they surprize and drown the passenger in an instant, or else, which sometimes happens, force him to take refuge on an islet, where he is at leisure to lament his situation, till the danger is over. There are two boats, it is true, for the convenience of passengers; one below the Hermitage, called, The East boat; and another by Nether-Wairden, and the West Wood, called, The West boat. But these, at such times, either cannot pass, or are in danger of perishing, with many useful and valuable lives. On this account, the inhabitants on the north side of the Tyne for ten, fifteen, and sometimes twenty miles, prudently consult their own safety by staying at home, under the want of many necessaries for themselves and families, as well as the town and neighbourhood, by their absence. A good bridge would, therefore, be the greatest benefaction and blessing that could be bestowed on this antient town*; the trade of which is so inconsiderable, that many of the inhabitants have been under the disagreeable necessity of taking up with other employments, besides their own callings, for their decent support; as appears by the following petition presented by them to their patron, the Lord of the manour, Sir John Fenwick, Bart. in the reign of King William III.

‘The humble petition of the inhabitants of the town of Hexham.

‘Humbly sheweth,

‘That the said town of Hexham, or the greatest part thereof, consisteth of mechanics, handicraftsmen, or tradesmen, who for

* Since this was written, the first stone for a bridge was laid by Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. 15th October, 1767.

‘ the better support and maintenance of themselves and fami‘ lies have, time whereof the memory of man is not to the con‘ trary, kept shops, and traded in buying and selling of groce‘ ries, and all other sorts of merchandise, whereby they made a ‘ very good shift to live very creditably and honestly, and dis‘ charged the merchants of Newcastle, and others they dealt and ‘ traded with, from time to time, to the great comfort and satis‘ faction of their friends and relations, and benefit and advan‘ tage to themselves and families, and never troubled or molested ‘ for so doing, until now of late some wicked and malicious per‘ sons envying the happy estate and condition of the said trades‘ men, out of a peevish and perverse humour, and self interest, ‘ go about and endeavour to foment and set up suits against the ‘ said tradesmen and shopkeepers of the said town, and threaten ‘ to indict them in the crown-office, and at the assizes and sessions ‘ upon the statute of the fifth of Elizabeth, and for following ‘ more trades than one, which will be a very great loss and preju‘ dice to the said tradesmen, and to the impoverishing, undoing,
 ‘ and ruining of them and their posterities, and in a manner de‘ populating of the said town, some tradesmen being so nume‘ rous there, viz. tanners, glovers, and shoemakers, that they ‘ are scarce able to maintain their families by one of these single ‘ trades, without making malt, keeping shop, or following some ‘ other employment, which if they continue to do, they are ‘ threatened to be indicted, and if so, they must be forced to ‘ look for a livelihood some where else for themselves, and leave ‘ part of their children to the town to be maintained, which will ‘ be a great and insupportable burden for the said inhabitants to ‘ undergo.

‘ May it therefore please your honour to take the premises into ‘ your serious and judicious consideration, and not to give any en-‘ cou-

“couragement to any such promoters and informers, but rather ‘to aid and assist your petitioners in making their just defence to ‘such hard and vexatious dealings and pleadings, and your peti‘tioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.’ (b)

On the west side of the market-place, are the remains of that celebrated and admired structure, the priory-church or old cathedral. The best view of it is from the north-east. In the center, on four strong pillars, is a square tower; in which were six musical bells, dedicated to

The Blessed Virgin Mary,
 St. Andrew,
 St. John, and other saints.

St. Mary’s bell was the largest. It was commonly called, The Fray-bell, being never rung alone, but on occasion of fire, the approach of an enemy, to raise the Posse Comitatus, or Fray, as it was styled.

St. Andrew’s bell was the next in size. It was called, The Haly bell, being used for funerals.

Eight new bells have for some time supplied their place.

The roof of the middle isle is lofty. It is lined with oak-panels within, and covered with lead without. The side isles are arched with stone. The nave and cross-isles are supported by pillars. In the walls are two rows of galleries, one above the other. At the entrance into the quire is a gallery, in which stood the organ. The portraitures of our Blessed Lord, and his Apostles, and the Virgin Mary, are painted on the pannels. The quire is a fine fabric, the altar large, with a good light. The latter was repaired by the late Sir William Blackett; as was the whole church by a brief, 1725, towards which 1040*l.* was collected. It still calls for farther assistance, and implores the charity of some benevolent and good patron. The floor is mostly covered with antient grave-stones. Many have been inlaid with brass, and others with croziers. They are very intire, after they have been trod under foot for so many ages.

By the north door, at the entrance into the cross-isle, on the left hand, is the effigies in stone of Henry Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, a Knight Templar, taken prisoner and beheaded at Hexham by K. Edward IV. He is habited as usual, in a coat of mail, with a sword and 'scutcheon of arms, viz. or on a fez. az. three garbs proper. At his feet is a dog couched, an emblem of watchfulness. It has no inscription.

Near the same door, on the right hand, is a flat funeral-stone, very antient. It has a crozier upon it, and this inscription.

HIC JACET THOMAS DE DIVILSTONE.

On the pavement of the same floor, near the nave of the church, is a stone-coffin, with a stone-cover.

Under an arch, at the entrance of the north isle of the quire is an antient funeral monument, said to be the sepulture of Alfwold, King of Northumberland, assassinated by Sigga, a factious Lord of his court, at Cilchester, now Walwick-Chesters, Sept. 23. 788. (c)

At the upper end of the north-east isle of the quire, near the altar-table, is a tomb with the effigies of a Religious, recumbent, and veiled; the arms of the priory at the top, viz. argent. a saltier, gules. Contiguous to it is a pillar on which is a helmet fixed. It is supposed that the person here interred had been of the military, before he was of the religious, order. By the arms, it is thought, he was the prior.

Opposite to it, on the other side of the quire, is another sepulchral memorial of a Knight Templar, with his effigies, and the usual symbols of his order, cut in stone. By the shield, it appears to have been one of the baronial-family of the Umfravils, eminent benefactors to the priory; their arms, gules, a cinquefoil between eight crosses mollins, 3. 2. 3.

On the same side of the quire, a little lower down, is a monument to the memory of Sir Robert Ogle, of Ogle-castle, with this inscription in a brass-plate, on black-marble.

Hic jacet Robertus Ogle, filius Eleanoræ Bertram, filiæ Roberti Bertram, militis, qui obiit in vigilia omnium sanctorum, Anno Domini, 1404. Cujus animæ propitiatur deus.

In another brass-plate, are sculptured the arms of the two baronial houses of Bertram and Ogle, quartered; first, argent. a fess. between three crescents. gules. second, Or. an orle. az. the third as the second, the fourth as the first.

In the quire, near the reading-desk, is a flat funeral-stone of blue marble to the memory of the Rev. and learned George Ritchel, a Bohemian by birth, lecturer of Hunham, with this inscription.

The book here alluded to, concerning the defence of the ceremonies of the church of England, is taken notice of by Bishop Kennet in his Historical Register. It is intitled,

*Dissertatio de Ceremoniis Ecclesiæ ANGLICANÆ, quâ usus earum licitus ostenditur, et a Superstitionis et Idolatræ crimine vindicatur. Authore GEORGIO RITSCHEL, HEXHAMIÆ, in NORTHUMBRIA, Ministro.
 LONDON. 1661.*

This

This work of Mr. Ritſchel's procured him the love and friendſhip of that eminently learned and good prelate, Biſhop Cofins. He was both miniſter and lecturer of Hexham.

The lectureſhip was founded by the Mercer's company in London, who alſo founded another at Berwick upon Tweed. For the maintenance of the lecturers they purchaſed ſeveral tithes, according to the tenour of the will of Richard Fiſhborn, Eſq; dated 30th March, 1625, which is as follows.

“ Item, I give and bequeath to the wardens and commonalty “ of the myſtery of mercers, of the city of London, the ſum of “ 2800 l. therewith to buy and purchaſe two or more parſonages, “ rectories, or church-livings, antiently appropriated to ſome “ abbey, monaſtry, or religious-houſe, or houſes, and now com“ monly called impropriations, the ſame to be in Lincolnſhire, “ Yorkſhire, or ſome other northern county or counties of this land, “ where the ſaid company of mercers ſhall beſt fit themſelves “ with ſuch a purchaſe, and find moſt want of preaching of the “ word of God to be. And the ſaid church-livings and impro-“ priations ſo purchaſed and had, my will is, ſhall be from time “ to time, ſucceſſively, for ever, by the ſaid wardens and com“ monalty of the myſtery of the mercers of London after their “ wonted cuſtom of election by moſt votes at their general courts “ conferred, beſtowed, and conveyed upon two or more miniſters “ reſpectively for and during ſuch term or terms, and in ſuch “ manner and form, and with ſuch cautil and proviſion, that if “ they, or any of them, ſhall prove non-reſident, or have any “ other benefice or church-living with cure of ſouls, then the “ ſaid wardens and commonalty, and their ſucceſſors, from time “ to time, for ever, ſhall and may remove diſplace, diſmiſs, de“ prive,

“prive, and eject them, or any of them, out of the said impro-“priations, or any of them, and elect and place another, or “others, in his or their room, according to their good discre“tion. And I heartily intreat the said wardens and commonalty,
 “for God’s sake, that they will be very careful from time to time “to make choice of such as be well known to be honest, discreet, “learned men, fearing God, and painful in their ministry, that
 “by their life and doctrine they may win many souls to Christ
 “Jesus.”

In 1628, the mercers company purchased of Sir John Fenwick, Bart. a messuage and an orchard in Hexham, all the great tithes arising in the town, parish, or fields of Little Swinburn, in Kepwick, Errington, Bingfield, and Colwell. In 1631, they purchased the great tithes of Chollerton and Barwesford. They also purchased a moiety of the great tithes of Woodborn, Widdrington, two Steeds, North Seaton, Cresswell, Horton, Horton-Demesnes, Hirst, Hutton, Ellington, Lyn-ton, and Lynmouth, all in this county.

They lately took off from the lectureship of Hexham 50 l. per annum, and applied it to the support of an alternate lectureship in the parish-church of Chollerton, and the chapels of St. Oswald and Bingfield, belonging to the church of St. John-lee.

In 1759, Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. gave 380 l. towards the augmentation of the living of Hexham, which generous donation was attended by another of 100 l. for the same end, from Sir Edward Blacket, Bart.

Mable Ord, a widow-gentlewoman, gave, 1634, a double gilt chalice and patin, weighing 32 ounces, to this church; also the altar-table cloath, and a cloath or pall for funerals. She also gave

100 l. to the poor of Hexham; who had also the following benefactors.

John Tyfson, of Hexham, yeoman, by his last will, dated 25th September, 1673, gave 10 l. to the poor of the parish of Hexham, the interest to be distributed amongst them at Christmas and Easter, annually, for ever.

James Creffwell of Hexham, tanner, by his last will, dated 28th October, 1675, gave an acre of land in Hexham-haugh, commonly called Reab's acre, the annual rent to be distributed to the poor of the town of Hexham, on the 3d of October, his birth-day.

Robert Farbridge, of Hackforth, in Hexhamshire, by his last will, dated 9th of March, 1677, gave 10 l. to the poor of the high and middle quarters of Hexhamshire; the interest to be distributed annually at Whitley-chapel upon All Saints day.

Madam Mary Fenwick, daughter of Sir George Selby, of Newcastle upon Tyne, Kt. and widow of Colonel John Fenwick of Hexham-abbey, slain at the battle of Marston-moor, July 2d 1644, by her last will, dated December 25th, 1679, gave 100 l. to the town of Hexham, to bind poor children apprentices.

Mrs. Ursula Mountney, of Stonecroft, widow, by her last will, dated July 16th, 1680, gave an annuity of 12 l. per annum to different parishes; 3 l. per annum of which to be distributed to the poor of the parish of Hexham.

Thomas Craig, of Hexham, skinner and glover, by his last will, dated 28th December, 1681, gave 20 l. the interest to be distributed buted annually to poor widows and orphans of Hexham, on St. Thomas's day.

Robert Forster, of the upper Eshells, in Hexhamshire, by will, dated 14th July, 1684, gave 10 l. to the poor of Hexhamshire; the interest to be distributed annually at Easter.

Henry Simpson, of the hole-house, in the low quarter of Hexhamshire, by will, dated 1684, gave 10 l. to the poor of Hexhamshire, and 10 l. to the poor of the parish of Slealey, but dying before it was executed, his son-in-law, Thomas Wadeson, of Thimbley-hill, in the Bishoprick of Durham, gave 10 l. to the free-school of Hexham.

Thomas Gibson, of Hexham, cordwainer, by will, 1686, gave 20 l. to the poor, out of a certain close in Hexham-fields.

Madam Elizabeth Ratcliff widow of Sir Edward Ratcliff, of Dilston, Bart. by her last will, dated 18th December, 1688, gave 4 l. per annum to the poor Roman Catholics in Hexham, to be distributed on St. Luke's day, or thereabout.

Anthony Farbridge, of Newcastle upon Tyne, born at Hackforth, in Hexhamshire, by will, dated 3d November, 1690, gave 14 l. to the poor of the high and middle quarters of Hexhamshire; the interest to be distributed annually on Good Friday at Whitley-church.

John Coulson, of Hexham, tanner, by will, dated 26th September, 1692, gave 20 l. to the free-school, and 20 l. to the poor of the town of Hexham.

Margaret Broadley, of Hexham, widow, by will, dated 30th October, 1693, gave 10 l. to the poor; the interest to be distributed annually; 11th November; provided it was not claimed by the friends of one William Wilkinson, within the term of seven years, which it was not.

Richard Walton, of Peacock-house in Hexhamshire, by will, dated 18th April, 1695, gave 3 l. towards the having a minister at Whitley-chapel, and in case a minister could not be had, the interest to be distributed to the poor in the high quarter of Hexhamshire.

Henry Dixon, of the Staples, gave 20 l. to the poor of the high, low, and middle quarters of Hexhamshire, 10th October, 1700; the interest to be distributed annually at Christmas.

Madam Anne Ratcliff, of Dilston, sister to the Earl of Derwentwater, by will, gave 10 l. per annum to the poor in the parish of Hexham, to be distributed 13th of June.

Mrs. Margaret Allgood, widow of Lancelot Allgood, of Newcastle upon Tyne, attorney at law, by will, dated 8th June, 1707, gave 100 l. to the poor of the town of Hexham, of which her husband was a native; the interest to be distributed annually on Christmas-day, after evening service by the principal inhabitants, with the advice of the minister.

Mrs. Mary Allgood, daughter of Mr. Thomas Allgood, bailiff of Hexham, by a nuncupative will, (a little before her death, which happened, 5th November, 1709) gave 40 l. to the poor of the town of Hexham; the interest whereof hath since been distributed amongst them. Her brother, the Rev. Mr. James Allgood, rector of Ingram, her administrator, promised to confirm and make it perpetual.

Nicholas Ridley, of Newcastle upon Tyne, Esq; and an alderman of that corporation, by will, dated 7th December, 1710, gave 20*l.* to the poor of the town of Hexham; the interest to be distributed annually to the more aged and infirm, eight days before Christmas.

Mrs. Dorothy Allgood, eldest daughter of the above-mentioned Mr. Thomas Allgood, bailiff of Hexham (who died 6th September, 1712), some time before her death assigned and made over her fortune to her brother, the Rev. Mr. James Allgood, before mentioned, on condition that if she died unmarried, the interest of 40*l.* should be annually distributed to the poor of the town of Hexham, which he agreed to perform.

Elizabeth Gibson, of Hexham, widow, by will, dated 29th December, 1712, gave 20*l.* to the poor of the town of Hexham; the interest to be distributed annually (d).

At the west end of the church of St. Andrew, are the remains of the antient Priory. It has been a spacious and noble building, quadrangular, with a large cloister; the ambulatories very conspicuous on the west side of the garden a few years ago; also an oratory at the south-east corner of the garden, the roof vaulted with stone, and supported with four Ionic columns.

It was burnt by the Scots, 24 K. Edward I. 1296, together with the west end of the church, and the school-house. In another hostile visit the year following, they lodged in the town, and mal-treated the religious, after letters of protection granted for one whole year to the prior and his convent, with liberty to pass and repass at pleasure for one canon, one squire, and two servants; signed by their leaders, the Earl of Murrey, and Sir William Wallace. They burnt the town of Ryton in their way eastward. Newcastle was too strong for them (e).

It was pillaged by David, King of Scots, 20 K. Edward III. 1346. He entered the borders by Liddel-castle, with 40,000 men. They marched to the abbey of Lanercost, Naward-castle, and Redpeth, to this town. They stayed three days. They had determined not to burn this, and three other towns, viz. Corbridge, Durham, and Darlington. They saved them for their convenience, to lay up stores and provisions, for their support. They marched from hence to Ebchester, and after committing many ravages and barbarities, were defeated by the English at Nevil's cross, near Durham (f).

John de Hexham, and Richard de Hexham, two eminent historians, both presided over this monastery. Prior John made an addition of twenty-five years to the history of Simeon of Durham; from the 9th of K. Henry II. to the 1st of K. Richard.

Prior Richard drew up a short chronicle from Adam to Henry the Emperor. He also wrote the history of K. Stephen and Henry III. But the chief of his historical writings is, An Account of the State and Bishops of the church of Hexham, which make a part of the valuable edition of the Decem Scriptores.

Part of the priory was repaired by Sir Reginald Carnaby, whose coat armorial is over the coach-house, built by him. It was lately repaired by the present lord of the manour, Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. who made a handsome gravel-walk round a large field, on the west side, watered by Hextold's little stream, and on the higher part of it planted small clumps of forest-trees, at agreeable distances.

On the east side of the Market-place, is an ancient stone-building, with a clock in it, which was the town-hall, or town-court belonging to the bishops and priors of Hexham. It is still put to the same use. The lord of the manour holds his court in it. It is also the sessions-hall.

Some have imagined, that it was the palace of the Bishops of Hexham, which is a mistake. The Bishops lived in the monastery, over which they presided.

At a small distance from it is an old tower. It was antiently the town-jail. It is still used for the same purpose.

A little farther eastward is a grammar-school, founded by Q. Elizabeth; her letters patent dated 25th June, in the 41st year of her reign, 1598 (g). The master's salary is 20 l. and the usher's 4 l. per annum. The school, and a convenient dwelling for the master, were built at the expence of the town and neighbourhood, 1684. They cost 150 l. They stand upon the brink of an eminence, which forms a fine natural terrace, commanding a most agreeable prospect of the river Tyne, and the neighbouring seats and villas upon its banks.

The

The civil government of the town is by a Bailiff. He is appointed by the lord of the manour, and is commonly continued for life. He is an officer of great antiquity. He has the same power within his jurisdiction, as the mayor of a city, or a justice of peace, within the county.

In Hexhamshire, on the plains, called the Levels, by the rivulet of Divil (b), a bloody battle was fought between the two houses of Lancaster and York, 1463; and a decisive victory obtained by the General of the latter, the Marquis of Montacute, who forced the intrenchments. Of the victorious party, were the Ogle's, and the Manners's, of this county. Of the vanquished were the Percy's, the Roos's, the Newill's, the Tailboys's and the Grey's. The unfortunate K. Henry rode full speed out of the field. His attendants were many of them taken in the pursuit; the furniture of their horses of blue velvet. Upon one of them was found the high cap of state called Abacot, adorned with two rich crowns, which was presented to the victorious Edward at York, May 4. His competitors, Henry and his Queen, and some of their partizans, were abandoned to extreme misery. Single and alone, the Queen wandered with her little son in her arms, exposed to dangers, and the assaults of robbers, till she reached France, her native land. The duke of Exeter, their friend, became an exile in Burgundy, where he had neither shoes or stockings to put on, and begged his bread from door to door (i). The Duke of Somerfet was

(i) During the civil wars between the two houses of Lancaster and York, were fought in England seven or eight cruel battles, and in them slain three or fourscore princes and lords of the blood royal. The rest that escaped being all young lords, whose fathers died in these battles above was instantaneously executed at Hexham, after the battle; being a changling and a deserter from Edward. His tomb is in Hexham-church, as before-mentioned. A field near the scene of action, called Dux-field, is supposed to take its name from him. Sir William Tailboys, Sir Humphry Nevil, and Sir Ralph Grey, knight of the most noble order of the garter, and captain of the castles of Roxborough and Bambrough, were all three beheaded; Sir Ralph being first degraded of his high honour, by cutting off his gilt spurs, mentioned, lived as banished men in the Duke of Burgundy's court, who received them as his kinsmen of the house of Lancaster, before his marriage with King Edward's sister. I have seen them in so great misery before they came to the Duke's knowledge, that those that beg from door to door were not in poorer state than they: for I once saw the Duke of Exeter ("Henry Holland") run on foot and bare legged after the Duke of Burgundy's train, begging his bread for God's sake, but he uttered not his name. He was the nearest of the house of Lancaster, and had married King Edward's sister, but when he was known, the Duke gave him a small pension to maintain his estate. They of the house of Somerset, and divers others, were there in like manner, who died all afterwards in the wars.

There were three things that contributed to K. Edward IVth's success: First the gentlemen that were in the sanctuaries, and the new born prince: The second, the great debts the king owed in the metropolis; in respect whereof the merchants, to whom he was indebted, thought it their best way to take part with him: The third, a great many women of honour, and rich merchants wives, with whom in times past he had been familiar, persuaded their husbands and friends to incline to him.

After he was quiet in his realm, he received yearly out of France fifty thousand crowns, paid him in the Tower of London, and was grown so rich, that richer he could not be.

He was the beautifullest prince in the world. He gave himself wholly to pleasures, as to dames, feasting, banquetting, and hunting, after he had vanquished his enemies. He feared no man, but fed marvellously fat, by means whereof in the flower of his age diseases grew upon him, so that he died in a manner suddenly of an apoplexy.

Opposite to Hexham, on the north margin of the Tyne, is the Hermitage, formerly belonging to the priory of that town. It was then called Hameſhalg (k), i. e. the hamlet in the Halg, haugh, or vale. It was furrounded with wood, and was the favourite recess of St. John of Beverley, to whom the church on the hill behind it is dedicated. On the dissolution of that monastery, it came to the crown, and was not granted away to Q. Elizabeth (l). It was in the possession of John Coatsworth, Esq; 1724; then high sheriff of Northumberland, on whose death it descended to his eldest son, Edward, who, dying some years after, left it by will to his brother Michael and his heirs, and failing them to Dr. Jurin and his heirs. Michael dying without heirs, 1754, it came to James Jurin, Esq; son and heir of Dr. James Jurin, fellow of Trinity College, in Cambridge, 1711, and afterwards an eminent physician in London, well known and esteemed in the learned world for his curious experiments and indefatigable pains in promoting natural knowledge. His dissertation de Potentia Cordis, in No. 358, and a reply in defence of it, in No. 362, both addressed to Dr. Mead, written in an elegant Latin stile, and his conduct towards his principal adversary, Dr. Keil, is genteel and handsome, wherein he showed the fermum bonus, and virux gratia, so much desired in every contents (n). He was fellow of the College of Physicians of the Royal Society, also their secretary on the resignation of Dr. Halley, 1721, and their president some months before he was physician of Guy's hospital, governor of St. Thomas's, and mentioned by Voltaire, in the Journal de Sçavans, the famous Jurin. He died, 22 March, 1749-50, in the 66th year of his age. His son, James Jurin, Esq; was educated at the same college, in Cambridge, and in the latter end of the year 1756, was chosen fellow of the Royal Society. In September, 1757, he married the daughter of John Simpson, Esq; and alderman of Newcastle upon Tyne, whose mother was one of the daughters and coheirs of the ancient family of the Anderfons, merchants of, and representatives in parliament for, that corporation, from the 7th of K. Edward VI, 1552-3, to the 16th of K. Charles I, 1640; two of whom, Sir Henry and Sir Francis, were knights; their country seat was at Bradley, in the bishoprick of Durham, now in the possession of Mr. Simpson, and lately rebuilt by him after a handsome manner.

Mr. Jurin died in July, 1762. His seat of the Hermitage is now in the possession of his widow, Mrs. Jurin. The front of it was built by the late Mr. Coatfworth; of white freestone, and hewn-work; the back-part and the offices by Mr. Jurin, to whom the whole place is indebted for its present genteel appearance. the east of the house is a small, but neat garden, sheltered by a clump of tall forest-trees. Before it is a grass-lawn, adorned with small clumps of young trees, and extending to a terraced road by the margin of the trout-streams of the river Tyne. To the north-west is a small pendant copse, or natural grove, thro' which is a terrace-walk, and at the top of it a seat to rest on. Here the melody and harmony of the birds, the whistling winds through the trees, the voice of falling waters, and the sight of the town of Hexham, and of that venerable dome, the church of St. Andrew, form a most beautiful scene.

At the termination of the terrace-walk, is the church of St. John-lee, consisting at present only of one isle, in the jurisdiction of the see of York.

A little farther eastward, on the brow of a hill, shaded with wood, is Beau-front, i. e. bellus Locus, the seat of David Carnaby, Esq; 10 Q. Elizabeth (c); and lately of Thomas Errington, Esq; and now of his son, John Errington, Esq; of the antient house of the Erringtons, of Errington, by Erring-Burn, on the north side of the Roman wall, from which he derives his name. His ancestor, William de Errington, was high sheriff of Northumberland, 47 K. Edward III (p). de Errington, Knt. was of the party of K. Edward IV, against the house of Lancaster; by whom, and Sir John Manners, of Etall, at the head of 400 men, Queen Margaret, of Anjou, was hindered from landing with her company at Bambrough, and forced to take shelter at Berwick upon Tweed. Nicholas de Errington died in the beginning of the reign of Q. Elizabeth, possessed of Errington, &c. The situation of Beaufront is generally admired, having both sun and shade, and a delightful vale and river prospect.

From the 18th mile-stone on the military road, on the left hand, we have a fine view of Holy-den, i. e. the Holy Den or Vale, famous for the victory obtained by Oswald, King of Northumberland, over the British usurper, Cedwall, who had slain his apostate brother, Anfred, King of Bernicia, in a pitched battle, and made a terrible slaughter of his little army. Oswald, to revenge his brother's death, and save his country from destruction, boldly marched at the head of a few brave troops to oppose the tyrant. He chose a convenient camp which he fortified, and relying not on his own arm or his own strength, but on the goodness of his cause, and the protection of heaven, erected a cross before it. Then he and his army on their knees implored a blessing on their arms. The enemy trusting to their numbers, advanced in full confidence of victory. Cedwall in imagination reckoning the day his own, and transported with the thought of having full vengeance on the humble Oswald, in person attacked his intrenchments. An arrow met him, and struck him dead. Terrified at his fall, his men in confusion began to retire. King Oswald seizing the happy moment, rushed upon them in their fright with his brave followers, and put them entirely to the rout. His success was so much above all human expectation, that the field of battle was called Hefenfelth, i. e. Heaven's Field (r), and Halyden (s). It is watered by Erring-burn, called by Bede, Denisburne, i. e. the Burn in the Den or Valley, on whose banks, he assures us, the battle was fought. A church was afterwards built by the convent of Hexham, and dedicated to St. Oswald, on the top of the hill by the public road, to commemorate the blessings of that day, and to put passengers and others in mind of it, and of their own particular obligations to heaven for the daily mercies they receive. It is still standing, and was lately repaired, being an appendage to the church of St. John-lee. A large silver coin of St. Oswald's was found near the place where it was built. His head is represented on one side, sceptered, and the cross on the other. It was for a long time used by the convent at Durham as their common seal, in honour of him. There is a good print of it in the appendix of the learned Dr. Smith's edition of Bede's Church-History (t). A little below Port-gate, we come to the Hermen-street, so called from Hermes, Mercurius, the god of the high ways, and Custos Manium. It is more generally known by the name of Watlingstreet (c). It crosses the Tyne at the Roman station, Cor-chester (d) by the ostium of the streamlet Cor, famous for the Roman curiosities and antiquities found at it. It is not mentioned in the Notitia, and therefore is thought to have been abandoned before that description of the Roman empire was penned. It contains several acres. A small space within it is called Corbow, supposed to have been the Prætorium.

The Romans had a bridge of arches over the Tyne at this station, as well as at Cilchester, the fabric of which must have been very curious, where the current is rapid and formidable after heavy rains, and sudden thaws of snow from the mountains and hills. The arches of their bridges were usually wide over such rivers, formed with the greatest geometrical nicety, the pillars multangular, the base of each secured by horizontal arches gradually contracted, every stone in them of a vast length and wedge-like,

The Curia or Coria Ottadinorum of Ptolomey assigned to this station by Camden, is referred to Scotland, to the Gadeni, by the Hon. Baron Clerk, the ornament of his country, and of learning. His judgment is confirmed by the monastic antiquary, Rich. of Cirencester, and by Dr. Stukely, the latter placing it at Corston-law in Lothian,—the Coria of the Gadeni, their metropolis.

laid level with the water. Such stones are now lying in the river by both these stations, with iron-cramps in them. In the upper part of the pillars were apertures or openings to give a passage to impetuous and raging floods (e).

An abundance of Roman coins of the later empire have been turned up by the plow; now in the cabinet of the Rev. Mr. Walton, vicar of Corbridge.

The Roman moneys were often notoriously adulterated, as appears from some coining molds of their's found about the year 1697, in delving a field near Thorp on the hill, by Wakefield, in Yorkshire, and described by Mr. Thoresby (f). In later times there have been counterfeits, for the sake of the high price they bore.

Many seals of Roman work are in the possession of Mr. Walton, found at this and the neighbouring stations; but none of them antiques; all of the lower empire, engraved on carnelians, and stones of the lower class. They are all entaglios, not one cameo among them. Greek and Roman antiques were always of the most exquisite workmanship; engravings on gems, pebbles, and stones of the first order for beauty and lustre. The beril, the chalcidony, the emerald, hyacinth, the topaz or modern chrysolite, and the garnet, were favourites. The chrystal pebble, and the amethyst, were also esteemed. They also used the onyx, the sardonx, the agate-onyx, the jasper, the hæmachates, or blood-stone, which they valued for cameos. Other kinds were not used by the Romans till the lower empire, when the arts were upon the decline. Then carnelians, and stones of an inferior class, were introduced. Of this order and species are the intaglios, found at our Roman stations, hardly worthy of a description, having neither crudition, good workmanship, beauty and politure, which constitute the merit of antiques, and recommend them to the notice and esteem of the curious.

The Greek masters excelled the Romans in the art of sculpture and engraving, who resigned their genius more to oeconomical and political refinements. This is allowed by a great Roman.

About

About a quarter of a mile east from Cor-chester, is

Cor-bridge, an antient borough on the north banks of the Tyne, crossed by a bridge of seven arches; the manour of which was granted by the crown, 6 K. John, to Robert, son of Roger de Clavering, baron of Warkworth, to hold, with all its regalities, in fee-farm, by the annual service of 40*l.* with the privilege of a weekly market, and an annual fair on the eve, day, and day after the festival of St. John the Baptist (g). It had also the privilege of sending two members to parliament, which privilege was disused on the account of the burthen of the members expenses; the names of two of whom are on record, viz. Adam Fitz-Alan, and Hugh Fitz-Hugh, 23 K. Edward I (h). John, the last Baron Clavering, granted the reversion of his honour of Warkworth, and of this and his other manours in this county, to the crown, 6 K. Edward I (i); which were given by K. Edward III. to Henry Lord Percy (k); and are now in the possession of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland.

Cor-bridge is a large, populous, well-built-village. The church is an antient structure, dedicated to St. Andrew. Under an arch, at the end of the north isle, is a grave-stone with the following inscription.

hic IACET IN TERRIS ASLINI FILIUS hugo.

K. Henry I. gave the impropriation and advowson of this church and of the churches of Warkworth, Whittingham, and Rothbury, to his chaplain, Richard de Aurea Valle, and after his death to the church and canons of St. Mary in Carlisle (1).

To the poor of this parish, Madam Elizabeth Ratcliff, widow of Sir Edward Ratcliff, of Dilston, Bart. and mother of Francis, Earl of Derwentwater, by will, dated, 18th December, 1668, gave, out of an annuity or rent-charge of 20 l. per annum, which she then had of Mr. Francis Sutton of Green-Croft, 10 l. to the poor of this parish; to be distributed annually on St. Luci's day, or thereabout.

Mrs. Ursula Mountney left 20 s. per annum, for the same use.

Mrs. Anne Swinburn, of Dilston, by will, gave 46 l. to the poor of this parish, to be distributed at Dilston, upon St. Thomas's day before Christmas.

Madam

Madam Ann Ratcliff, of Dilston, Sister to Francis Earl of Derwentwater, gave to the poor of this parish 10 l. per annum; also 30 l. per annum, to bind apprentices.

The Rev. Mr. Robert Troutbeck, vicar of this parish, by will, without date, made in the time of health, and declared and published to be his will, 12th May, 1706, gave to the poor of the parish of Corbridge and chapelry of Halton, a certain messuage and lands in Corbridge which cost him 100 l. the annual rent to be distributed to them by one of the name of Troutbeck, or by the minister and churchwardens for the time being. He also gave 50 l. to the poor of the parish of Dacre in Cumberland, where he was born; and another 50 l. to the parish of Bowness in the same county.

On the south side of the church, is an old tower, which was the town-gaol; and near it is the market-cross, now dissused.

A large piece of Roman plate was found in the bottom of an enclosure on the south side of the town, by the river Tyne, in March, 1735. It was found in a boggy place by a little girl belonging to a Smith, as she was at play with two or three other children. The close belonged to Richard Carnaby. The fine raised work, and sculptures upon it, induced the children to carry it home to the Smith's to play with. The Smith soon discovered it to be worth his care. He took it privately to Newcastle, and sold it to Mr. Cookson, a Goldsmith, in that town; with whom it did not remain long, before it came to the knowledge of his Grace the Duke of Somerset, who claiming it as Lord of the manour, it was sent to him; and is now in the possession of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland. It weighs 148 ounces. It is in shape like a tea-board, twenty inches long, and fifteen broad, hollowed about an inch deep, with a flat brim an inch and a quarter broad, neatly flowered with a vine full of grapes, &c. Under the middle of it was a low frame, about seven inches long, four broad, and one and a half deep. This was broken off by the Smith. The following curious account of the sculptures, and of the use of it, was given in a letter to Mr. Cay of Newcastle, by that learned and eminent antiquary, Roger Gale, Esq.

“ I shall begin from the right hand of the plate as you look at
 “ it, where Apollo, the principal figure in the whole plate, is “ placed under a small Temple, or Fanum, supported by two “ wreathed columns with flowered capitals, almost naked, hav“ ing only a Pallium hanging down from his left shoulder over “ his back: In the same hand is his bow, which he holds up to“ wards the top of the column on that side; his right is extended “ downwards with a branch in it, perhaps of laurel, cross the “ other pillar; against which rises a pyrimidical pile of eleven “ pieces, beside the top; for what it is intended I must confess
 “ my ignorance. Against the basis of the left hand-column rests
 “ a Lyre, whose form is truly antique: beneath it grows a plant “ with three spreading flowers upon its three extremities, de“ signed, as I believe, for a Heliotrope, and close by it couches a “ Griffin with its wings elevated over its back. The antients had “ a high opinion of the sagacity of this fictitious animal, and “ therefore consecrated it to their God of Wisdom. In Bergerus's “ Thesaurus Palatin. is a medal of Commodus, the reverse whereof “ is Apollo drawn in a chariot by two Griffins, and the poet Clau- “ dian alludes to his manner of riding thus in the following “ distich.

“ At

“ At si Phœbus adest, et frenis Gryphâ jugalem “ Riphæo, Tripodos repetens, detorsit ab exis, &c.

“ Close to the right hand column, and this pyramidal pile, “ sits a woman upon a square four-footed stool, though no more “ than two of its legs are visible; she looks backwards over her “ left shoulder towards Apollo, is wrapt up in a long garment,
 “ or Stola, from head to foot, and veiled: by this dress and attire,
 “ and an altar with the eternal fire burning upon it just by her,
 “ which was brought with her from Troy, I take her to be Vesta.

“ — Manibus vittas, vestamque potentem, “ Æternumque Adytis effert penetralibus ignem. Virg.

“ Et vos virgineâ lucentis semper in arâ “ Laomidontiæ Trojana Altaria flammæ. Sil. Ital.

“ The next is a woman erect, her hair gathered up, and tied “ with a knot behind; upon her forehead rises a Tutulus, and she “ is habited in a Stola from the shoulders to the ground. Her “ right arm is wrapt up cross her breast in her garb, only the “ hand appearing out of it; in her left she holds a spear, the “ shaft twisted, the iron of it something obtuse. This seems to “ be the only human figure in the company; but a very learned “ gentleman of my acquaintance thinks it may be designed for “ Juno, who is often thus accoutred with a spear. If so, it must “ be the effigies of the Juno Curis, or Juno hastata; we have it from “ Ovid,

“ — Quod hasta curis prisca est dicta Sabinis.

“ She was the same with Juno Pronuba. “ Celebri hasta nubentis

 “other attributes of her divinity attending her, and her appear“ance no ways majestic, nor adequate to the “ — Divum Regina, Jovisque

“I cannot be entirely of his opinion, especially as she follows, “and seems to be an attendant of the next figure, which is “Pallas, Galea effulgens et Gorgone sævâ, the head of that monster, “as usually, being fixt upon her breast. In her left hand she “holds a sharp pointed spear, her right is extended towards “Diana, with whom she seems engaged in a very earnest dis“course, to which also that other Goddess is very attentive.

 “She is

“The last figure of the group, (though called a man in all the “accounts I have seen of this table) and represented here as the “Diana Venatrix by the feminine dress of her head, tucked up “with a knot behind like the hair of the third figure; by the
 “which reaches down a little more than to the middle of her “thighs, and her buskins that come up no higher than the calf
 “of her leg, have occasioned this mistake of her sex; but Ovid “tells us,

“Talia succincta pinguntur crura Dianæ

“Cum sequiter fortes, fortior ipsa, feras.

“Between the two figures of Pallas and Diana rises a tall slender “tree, with a crooked waving stem, the branches of which are “displayed

“ displayed at the top almost over $\frac{2}{3}$ of the plate. On the main “ branch is perched an Eagle, with one wing expanded. This is “ of raised solid work like the rest of the figures, but there are “ several small birds sitting among the boughs that are only “ punched, or cut in with a tool, as are also several festoons hang“ ing down from the tree, and other little shrubs and flowers in“ terspersed all over the area of the table. The great bird sitting “ directly over the head of Pallas, and the attendance of the little “ birds about it, made me think it was her Owl, till I had seen the “ original, which convinced me, that it can be designed for no“ thing but an Eagle.

“ Under this tree stands an Altar, and so close to Diana, that she “ holds her left hand and bow over it. It is but a small one, and “ has nothing upon it but a small globular body, perhaps a “ mass of the Libamina ex Farre, Melle, et Oleo.

“ I should have told you, that below the feet of Pallas grows a “ plant that seems to bear two ears of corn upon the stalk, but “ cannot say what it is, or how it belongs to her: beneath the “ tree, and the little altar, stands a thin-gutted dog, like a Grey- “ hound, his nose turned up in a howling or barking posture, as “ often exhibited with this goddess on medals, and in other “ representations of her, some

“ Aut substricta gerens Sicyonius Ilia Ludon.—— Ovid.

“ Under her, in the very corner of the plate, rises a Rock, upon “ which she sets her left foot, and against the side of it lies an “ Urn, with its mouth downwards, discharging a plentiful stream

“ of water. As she stands upon this rock, or hill, and so near to “ this spreading tree, I cannot but think of Horace's address to “ her——

“ The whole table is encompassed with a border, raised near “ an inch high, and ornamented with a creeping vine; the grape “ and leaves are in relievo, but the stalk only tooled.

“ The work of this curious piece is neither of the best nor “ worst of times; the figure of Vesta particularly is extremely “ well executed, the posture very free, the drapery soft and easy;
 “ and what is very remarkable, the Instita or border, an orna“ ment of the Stola appropriated to the Roman ladies of quality, “ Quarum subsuta talos tegit instituta veste, Hor.

“ is neatly worked all round this our Vesta: nor is the next figure “ much inferior. I cannot, nor any body else that has seen it, “ discover that the plan has any relation to any story in the Hea“ then Mythology, but seems only an assemblage of the Deities “ it represents. This may be some argument of its antiquity, for “ had a modern workman had the designing of it, he would, in “ all probability, have taken some known piece of history for his “ subject: to which I may add, that all the symbols are genuine,
 “ and truly adapted to their owners.

“ I once thought it might have been the cover of an Acerra,
 “ but the foot, which supports it, puts an end to that surmise.
 “ We do not well know what the Anclabris was; the definition of
“ An-

“Anclabria et Anclabris, ab anculare, quod erat ministrare.”
 “This is big enough to contain the Exta of a sheep, and other “small victims, which seems to me the likeliest employment for “it: and that it was one of those sacrificing utensils that Virgil
 “more than once calls Lances.

“——— Lancesquē et liba feremus.

“Dona ferunt, cumulantque oneratis lancibus aras.

“The Lances were both round and square; the Discus, used in “sacrifices for the same purpose, seems to have been always “round.”

A print of it was published by Mr. William Shaftoe.

Two famous altars, with Greek inscriptions, were found in dicated to Diodora the priestess; large, hollow at the top, as usual

Marcus Eforast, the son of Acherm, dedicates this altar to Astarte. He supposes these names to be Syrian, Arabic, or Punic: Marcus, the Prenomen to be adoptive, to romanize him; and that he is the priest, who set up the altar.

That of Hercules was published by Mr. Horsley, who reputed it one of the greatest curiosities of the kind in Britain. It is now in the possession of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland. The other is in the possession of Mr. *Walton. The honourable Mr. Baron Legge gave the inscription to the Royal Society, and it has been elaborately explained by one of their learned members, Mr. Bowman.

Hercules was the symbol of the Sun. Julian informs us (m), that magnificent sports were celebrated at the conclusion of the year ἡλίου ἀνικητός, to the invincible Sun. And the inscription, Soli invicto, is found upon the medals of many of the Roman Emperors.

Divine honours were paid to him in open temples and groves, the institution of which is very antient.

Potitius first, his gratitude to prove,
 Ador'd Alcides in the sacred grove ;
 And, with the old Pinarian sacred line,
 These altars rais'd, and paid the rites divine,
 Rites, which our sons for ever shall maintain ;
 And ever sacred shall the grove remain. Pitt.

Astarte was the symbol of the Moon, being worshipped by moon-light in open temples and groves, first with pure, and afterwards with impure, rites. In the sacred writings she is stiled Astartoth, also the Deity and abomination of the Sidonians (n) ; a mercantile people, to whom a curious author ascribes the first invention of building long ships of war, and the contrivance of filling them with oars, in such a manner that no void spaces might be left (o). The Prophet complains, that Solomon went after Astartoth, the Goddess of the Sidonians. Jezabel first paid her divine honours in Israel ; the most antient Temple that of Ascalon ; 400 Prophets attending her.

Her altar here is thought to have been made by a marine legion, raised by Hadrian in Syria, called, The Ulpian legion ; which in Maximian's time followed the fortunes of Carausius.

She is represented on coins as cloathed in a short garment, nuda genu. On the reverse of a medal of Antoninus Pius, struck at Orothofia, a maritime town in Syria, we have her treading on a river (p). That antient city and Corbridge have in one respect a similar situation, being both built on a rising ground, and on the northern banks of a river (q).

Charles II. 1652; and whose son and heir, Sir Francis Ratcliff, Bart. married the Lady Mary Tudor, natural daughter of that King, by Mrs. Mary Davis, and was created Baron of Dillston, Viscount Langley, and Earl of Derwentwater, 3 K. James II, 1687. He was succeeded by his son, James Earl of Derwentwater, who married Mary-Anne, the daughter of Sir John Webb, of Dorsetshire, Bart. His Lordship being under attainder, 1715, this and his other estates (x) were forfeited to the crown, and given to Greenwich-hospital. His relict, Lady Derwentwater, died on the 19th of August, 1723, of the small pox at Brussels, aged about 30 years. Her corpse was carried the day after she died to Louvain, to be interred there in the church of the English regular canonesses of St. Austin. In December 1731, the young Lord Derwentwater died; whose sister, a fortune of 30,000, married the Lord Petre, 2d May, 1732.

Half a mile east of the 16th mile-stone on the military road, on the right hand, by a small cottage, is the Roman station, Hunnum, or Halton-Chesters, at the head of a pleasant slope (y). As some labourers were turning up its foundations for the sake of the stones to mend the road, they met with a centurial stone with the following inscription, within a civic garland, the crest of the imperial eagle at each end.

They found another centurial stone, broken off at one corner, inscribed,

This legion performed an annual solemn sacrifice of a hog or boar to Ops, the Earth, and to Ceres, after harvest, in grateful return for it (a).

An abundance of stag's horns, lying by heaps of muscle-shells, were dugged up at the same time ; also some small copper-coins of Constantine, and his two sons, and of the two usurpers, Magnentius and Decentius (b).

A silver coin of Nero's was found at or near this station, which came into the possession of Mr. Walton.

kind, of a round form, and adorned with studs of brass. Mars Bellator or Gradivus, not Quirinus, is usually described with such a shield. It was part of the Armatura Equitum, and carried in the left hand. The ingenious and humane antiquary, Mr. Ralph Thoresby, of Leeds, was possessed of one, of which he published a description, and a neat print, with a learned dissertation (m).

At the time that this country was infested with those thieves, called Moss-Troopers, one of this family had a commission to apprehend and try them. Whilst he was deeply engaged on the trial of some of them, a very notorious and desperate villain was seized by his son, who asked his father what he should do with him; Do with him, said the father! Why, hang him. As soon as the trial was ended, he ordered the man to be brought before him, but was told he was hanged instantly, according to his order. On complaint being made to the crown, a fine of 4*l.* per ann. was laid upon Halton-estate, which is still paid.

It was purchased by John Douglas, of Newcastle upon Tyne, Esq; who, 1706, set forward the rebuilding of the old parochial-chapel, towards which he gave 146*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.* and the freeholders of Whittington gave 78*l.* 1*s.* 1*d.*. It stands at a small distance from the tower, on the east side. Divine service is performed at it every third Sunday in the forenoon by the minister of Corbridge.

John Douglas, Esq; was succeeded in this and his other estates by his son, Oley Douglas, Esq; a representative in parliament for Morpeth, 1713, whose only daughter and heir marrying Sir Edward Blacket, Bart. they are now in his possession.

Halton-Tower is small, and square, having four speculating turrets at top, and is covered with lead. It stands on the east side of a small stream, above a bank of tall forest-trees. About a mile south from it, is Ayden-Castle, so called from its situation on the brink of a high or steep den or gill; the borderers pronouncing high, Ay. It was the feat of Emma de Ayden, a rich heiress, 1 K. Edward I, who was disposed of in marriage by that King to Peter de Walles (n), who had it for the term of his own life. He also had Burneton, i. e. the town by the burn, or brook, and Little Whittington, for the same term (o). His name was local, from Walles in France, the castle and vill of Sir Richard de Walles, 34 K. Henry II, 1187, situated between Erie and Gisors; whose son, Ralph de Walles, was slain, and many of his father's servants wounded, in an encounter with Henry Vere, constable of Gisors, under the English general, William Earl of Albermarle, in the defence of his workmen, fortifying his castle of Walles. One of the three itinerant judges appointed by K. Henry I, 1176, for the northern counties, was Robert de Walles (p). The orthography of the name of the celebrated Scotch patriot, Sir William de Walles, or Wallase, and that of Peter and Robert de Walles, are alike in our old annals (q); and it is not improbable, but that Sir William was derived from the same stock; and that their ancestors came into Britain at the Norman conquest.

The manour, castle, and half of the village of Ayden, came afterwards to the antient family of the Raymes's, of Bolham; and were in the possession of William de Raymes, 43 K. Edward III (r), high sheriff of Northumberland, 16 K. Richard II (s); alive, 3 K. Henry IV (t); of Edward de Raymes, 35 K. Henry VI (u). We find a mediety of them possessed by Robert de Raymes, 10 Q. Elizabeth (v), high sheriff of Northumberland the year following (w); and by Henry de Raymes, in the reign of K. Charles I (x); the other mediety of the manour and castle of Ayden being in the possession of the Carnaby's of Halton (y).

Ayden-Castle, with the manour of Ayden, was purchased by John Douglas, Esq; and is now in the possession of Sir Edward Blacket, Bart. It is encompassed with a high stone-wall, pierced with arrow-holes; within which is a stable built entirely of stone, without any timber, the roof of arch-work, and the mangers of stone. It has a fine prospect of Hexham, of Beaufront, and the river Tyne.

Between the 14th and 13th mile-stones, on the military road, a neat road branches off from a handsome gate on the left hand to West Matfen, which in the reigns of K. John and Henry III. was the manour of Philip de Ulcote, who held it by grand Sergancy, by the service of keeping the pleas of the crown (z). He was joined in commission with Hugh de Baliol, 17 K. John, 1216, to hold the castle and town of Berwick upon Tweed against the barons (a). He was high sheriff of Northumberland, 16, 17 *K. In 10 Q. Elizabeth, this manour was in the possession of Sir Ralph Lawson, of Biker (p); who was succeeded by his nephew and heir, Henry Lawson, Esq; ancestor of the present Sir Harry Lawson, of Brough, near Richmond, in Yorkshire, Bart.

It was afterwards in the possession of a branch of the Fenwicks, of Fenwick-tower; also of John and Oley Douglas, Esq; and now of Sir Edward Blacket, Bart. high sheriff of Northumberland, 1757. Sir Edward's seat is a neat stone-building, on a rising ground; a grass-slope before it by the rivulet of Pont, crossed by a small bridge; a vista extending from it for two miles to the military road; tall forest-trees on each side of the slope for shelter and ornament; a walk of a considerable length to the east, with borders of flowers and flowering shrubs.

In a field, on the east side of the vista, about three quarters of mile from the house, is a circular mount, with a round cavity in the middle, of the form of the Celtic tumuli, or temples; an upright stone pillar standing by it, of a great size, nine feet high above ground, with flat sides, three feet broad, and a foot and a half thick. This stone now bears the name of the Stob-stone, and gives its name to a farm-house hard by. The mount is composed of earth and numerous masses of stone of the coarse rag-kind, many of which have been dugged up for the use of this farm, and among them were discovered two stone-chests or coffins, consisting of four flags set edge-ways, with a bottom-stone, and a stone-cover, containing the ashes of the dead, appearing like a white dust.

the most antient of any in the world, were raised in Judea, and all over the Holy Land, by the eastern princes and patriarchs, by whom they were called Bethels, and Elbethels. The manner of consecration was with oil poured on the pillar. One of these pillars was erected by Jacob, and he called it the House of God. ---“ Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oyl upon the top of it. And he called the name of that place Bethel: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first. And he said, this stone which I have set up for a pillar, shall be God’s House (p).---Jacob came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan (that is, Bethel) he and all the people that were with him. And he built there an altar, and called the place Elbethel (q).---And Jacob set up a pillar in the place where he talked with God, even a pillar of stone, and he poured a drink-offering thereon, and he poured oyl thereon. And Jacob called the name of the place where God spake with him Bethel (r).”

The making of the altars of earth, or of natural stone as formed in the earth, was by the direction of God to Moses.---“ An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me. And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it (s).”

These temples were generally erected on the higher ground, such as were most conspicuous and obvious to sight. Thus one was built by Moses (t), and another by Joshua, on mount Ebal, composed of whole natural stones, or pillars plaistered with plaister, whereon they wrote the divine laws, in a great and general assembly of all Israel, of all the princes, great officers, judges, and people of every rank and quality, strangers and others, old and young (u).

Single pillars were also erected by these holy men over the graves of the illustrious dead by some public and much frequented road, to have their memories preserved, and to put the traveller in mind of their exemplary virtue and piety, of his own short continuance on the stage of life, and to fit and make himself worthy of such another honourable memorial at his death, and of an eternal diadem. Thus Jacob buried Rachel, the solace and partner of his cares, who died with the birth of their son Benjamin.----“Rachel died and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehem. And Jacob set a pillar on her grave: that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day (v).”

Persons of inferior condition and figure were buried under the shady oaks that flourished at the bottom of the mounts on which the Bethels or temples stood. They were called the Oaks of Weeping.----“Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, died, and she was buried beneath Bethel, under an oak: and the name of it was called Al-lon-backuth (w).”

Heaps of stones, rudely cast together, were the tombs they assigned to infidel-enemies after execution, even crowned heads, in avenues and places of great concourse, to be warnings to the rest of mankind, how they rose up against the God of Israel, dis-honoured his Bethel, or holy temple. Such a memorial had the king of Ai, executed by Jofhuah.—"As soon as the fun was down, Jofhuah commanded that they should take his carcase down from the tree, and caft it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raife thereon a great heap of ftones, that remaineth unto this day (x)."

Such a memorial likewise had Achan and his family, whose bodies were firft burnt to afhes, with all their treasure and wealth (y).

Hence the open temples, the pillars, the obelifks, the confecrated groves of oak, the heaps of ftones, reared by the pagans to their falfe gods, and to the memory of the dead. Hence the Ægyptian pyramid. of Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, slain at the siege of Orleans in France, 7 K. Henry VI. 1428; lamented throughout England, the glory of its arms declining in France from that period; favouring the prediction of K. Henry V. in the 9th year of his reign, at the siege of St. Maur in France, That Henry of Windsor should lose all that Henry of Monmouth had won, alluding to his own, and his son's, nativity. This Richard, whose feat was at the castle of Middleham, in Yorkshire, was created Earl of Salisbury, in right of his lady, by whom he had three sons, Richard, John, and George. Richard married Ann, sister and heir of Henry Beauchamp, Earl, and afterwards Duke, of Berwick, in whose right he was created Earl of Warwick. John was the famous Marquis of Montacute, who commanded the forces of the house of York at the battle of Hexham, before mentioned. George was Archbishop of York, famous for his installation-feast.

The old Earl of Westmorland, their grandfather, was living in the glorious reign of K. Henry V. and was then high warden of the marches towards Scotland, and eminently distinguished by his eloquence in the British senate (f). He had his education in Italy. His successors, Earls of Westmorland, were all named Ralph, in honour of him, till the time of Henry, Earl of Westmorland, summoned to parliament, 1 Q. Mary, 1553; and 1 Q. Elizabeth, 1558; one of the lords who, 2 Q. Mary, carried before her, and her consort, Philip of Spain, one of the swords of state to the parliament, in their robes of state, on horseback.

of English ordinations, 9 Q. Elizabeth, 1566. He was in arms against the Queen, 12th of her reign, 1569, for which his honour of Bywell, and all his other honours and lands, his seat of Bramspeth-castle, near Durham, where his followers resorted to him, were forfeited by a bill of attainder, 15 May, 1571. He escaped beyond sea, where he died (g).

The following survey was taken, among his other honours and estates, of the baronies of Bywell and Bolbeck, by Edmond Hall, and William Homberston, by her majesty's commission, bearing date 18th March, 1569, and 12th of her reign.

“ Bywell and Bolbeck are two antient baronies, and are situate in “ the extreme south part of Northumberland, between the rivers of “ Tyne and Derwent; and albeit they be joined and mixed toge“ ther, yet are the rents and tenants severed and known the one
 “ from the others. And to the barony of Bywell belongeth a fo“ rest of red deer, well replenished with game, which extendeth
 “ also into the barony of Bolbeck, and the said two baronies or “ lordships are thus abuttaled. That is to say, the lordship of “ Hexham on the west, and the lordships of Prudhow and Chipwell “ on the east, the river of Tyne for the most part on the north, and “ the river of Derwent on the south, and containeth in compass “ twenty two miles; that is to say, in length from the east to the “ west six miles, and in breadth from the river of Tyne to the ri“ ver of Derwent five miles; within which two baronies are many “ gentlemen and freeholders who hold their lands of the said “ baronies by several services, and are always attendant upon “ the lords of the said baronies in time of service, when

(g) Camden in Kennet.

“ they fhall be thereto commanded : And the farms and tenements “ in the faid baronies are well planted with coppice woods for the “ prefervation of the red deer ; and in the wafes are divers woods, “ and very fair courfing with greyhounds ; whereof one wood is “ called Higbley wood, growing difperfed one mile and a half “ from the town of Bywell towards the weft, planted with oaks,
 “ and part old birches of 80 and 100 years growing, containeth “ 100 acres. One other wood, called Bailiff wood, on the fouth “ part of the town of Bywell, and well fet with birches of 50 and “ 60 years growth, difpofed in divers parts, containeth 80 acres.
 “ And one other wood, called Through-Deane, in Eastwood, which “ was a large wood, containing by eftimation 140 acres, and was “ all old birch and fallen about 30 years paff, and never inclofed, “ by reafon whereof the fpring was utterly destroyed ; yet is “ there birch fprung up again, of the very nature of the foil, in “ great plenty, fo as in the procefs of time there will be a wood “ of birch again.

“ The town of Bywell is builded in length all of one ftreet upon
 “ the river or water of Tyne, on the north and weft part of the “ fame ; and is divided into two feveral parifhes, and inhabited “ with handicraftfmen, whose trade is all in iron-work for the “ horfemen and borderers of that country, as in making bitts, “ flirrups, buckles, and fuch others, wherein they are very ex“ pert and cunning, and are fubject to the incurfions of the thieves
 “ of Tynedale, and compelled winter and fummer to bring all “ their cattle and fheep into the ftreet in the night-feafon, and “ watch both ends of the ftreet, and when the enemy approach-“ eth to raife huy and cry, whereupon all the town prepareth for “ refcue of their goods, which is very populous, by reafon of “ their trade, and flout and hardy by continual practice againft

“ To

“ To the barony of Bywell belongeth the fishing of Salmon of “ the water of Tyne, in length three miles, which is a great “ commodity, and great plenty of salmon taken, and a dam or “ bay over the river, made very strong of late years for the pre“ servation of the said fishing.

“ Also in Bywell town, on the north side of the river of Tyne, “ the ancestors of the Earl of Westmorland builded a fair tower or “ gate-house, all of stone, and covered with lead, meaning to “ have proceeded farther, as the foundations declare, being the “ height of a man above the ground, which were never finished,
 “ and the said tower is a good defence for the town, and will “ soon decay, if it be not maintained.

“ The barony of Bywell extendeth into the towns and hamlets “ of Bywell St. Peter, Bywell St. Andrew, Accomb, Nuton, Ovington, “ Mickleby, Bromley, Newlands, Ridley nowa, Styfard, Sbyryden, and Eyfs“ singhope; and the barony of Bolbeck extendeth into the towns “ and hamlets of Brome-baugh, Ryding, Heley, Sbatley, Slaley, Myn-“ streacers; all which towns and hamlets are inhabited with men “ of good service, and have very good farms, and able to keep “ much cattle, and get plenty of corn and hay, were it not for the “ continual robberies and incursions of the thieves of Tynedale, “ which so continually assault them in the night, as they can “ keep no more cattle than they are able to lodge either in house “ or like safety in the night; and all the tenants hold their lands “ by indenture for term of years, which are very fineable when “ their leases are expired.

“ The lord of the said baronies hath the leet within all the “ limits of the same, and all waifes, estrays, felons goods, and “ amer“amerciaments, and all other royalties, casualties, and profits,

“rising or growing by reason of the leet.” (b)

Bywell, after its forfeiture to the crown, was purchased by a branch of the ancient family of the Fenwicks, of Fenwick-Tower (i); and was in the possession of William Fenwick, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 12 Q. Anne, 1713; and of the late John Fenwick, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 2 K. George II. 1728; and a representative of it in several parliaments till the time of his death; father of the present possessor of Bywell, William Fenwick, Esq; who married Margaret, sister to John Bacon, of Newton-Cap, in the Bishoprick of Durham, Esq; (k); and was high sheriff of Northumberland, 1752.

His seat is at the west end of the village. It is a modern, genteel structure, after a design in Mr. Pain's architecture, of white freestone, and hewn work. It is in a bounded, low, but delightful situation, beautifully rural, by the banks of the river Tyne, having a grass-lawn before it to the south, with a dwarf-wall, and a high road between it and the river, the south borders of which are adorned with flately oaks, and other forest-trees, and some pieces of statuary, which on a funny day are finely imaged by the water. To the east it has in view not only a pleasant garden, noted for early productions, but also two churches within so small a distance almost as a stone's-cast from each other, a salmon-weir, two pillars of stone in the river which formerly supported a bridge, the ruin of the old baronial-castle, and another of the domestic chapel, facing it, on the southern margin of the river.

A perspective view was published of this villa some years ago, before Mr. Fenwick rebuilt his seat, and made all the other agreeable improvements about it.

One of the churches is dedicated to St. Peter, to the poor of which parish, Madam Elizabeth Ratcliff, of Dilston, widow, by will, dated 18 December, 1668, gave 4 l. per annum out of an annuity or rent-charge; to be distributed annually on St. Lucie's Day.

Joseph Teafdale, of Bromley, by will, dated 16th Feb. 1699, gave to the poor of the same parish, 1 l. per annum.

Mr. Thomas Brown, of Newton-Hall, by will, dated 13th September, 1703, gave 10 l. to the poor of the same parish.

The other church is dedicated to St. Andrew; to the poor of which parish, Mr. Thomas Brown, by will, gave 5 l. One of its vicars, the Rev. Mr. Hutton, afterwards vicar of Warden, augmented the vicarage by the donation of a tenement in Bywell, called, Three-Quarter-Land, which he had bought for the term of sixty years, of which about forty were then remaining. His successor in this parish, the Rev. Mr. Hall, made it perpetual, by purchasing the same tenement of Sir John Fenwick, of Wallington, Bart. the indenture bearing date, 5th July, 1651. In 1713, it was valued at 8 l. per annum (1).

In the year 1760, as one Robinson, a mason, was angling in the river Tyne at Bywell, after a fall of rain, he took up a small silver cup, as it was rolling on the waves, full of earth, of Roman fabric; the following inscription round the brim,— DESIDERI VIVAS.

He sold it to Mr. Longlands, a goldsmith in Newcastle upon Tyne, for 15 s. of whom it was claimed by William Fenwick, Esq; as Lord of the manour, who now has it. It was probably washed out of the banks about Corbridge, where other Roman vessels of silver are said to have been formerly turned out by the floods.

The Romans were very curious in their drinking-cups. Some of them had the portraits of their friends in enamel-painting at the bottom, which they used in the hours of good fellowship to drink to their memories. This cup seems to have been for festivals, and birth-days, when it was customary—Genio indulgere. Desideri is the name of the person to whom it is inscribed.

On the other side of the Tyne, near the river Derwent, is

It is a well-built town, of one long and wide street, on a slope; a covered market-cross, nearly in the center; on a square pinnacle at the top, on the east side, this inscription,— Erected by Sir John Swinburn, Bart. 1736. His coat armorial on the other side.

It has an annual fair, April 21; and another on Holy Thursday; also one the Thursday after the 26th day of August.

Opposite to the market-cross, on the south side, is a free-school, founded by Sir Thomas Widdrington, Knt. 1663, who endowed it with the land at the Hugh, pleasantly situated at the east end of the town; sloping to the river Pont, valued, at that time, at 10 l. and in 1727, at 40 l. and now at 80 l. per annum.

On the west side of the market-cross, is the church. It has three isles, and a gallery at the west end. In the north wall of the chancel, in a nich, is the effigies in stone of a knight templar, in the usual habit and attitude, said to have been one of the Fenwicks, of Fenwick-Tower (o).

To the poor of this parish, Henry Paston, of Black Heddon, Gent. by a deed made, 14th March, 1698, gave 12 l. per annum, out of the rents of his estate at Black Heddon and Wallridge; to be distributed by the minister and church-wardens at four several terms, viz. 1st May, 1st August, 11th November, and 2d February (p).

On the south side of the church, is the vicarage-house; lately repaired, with large additions, after an elegant manner, by the

ÆDES HASCE REFECIT THOMAS DOCKWRAY.
MDCCLXII.

The house and gardens contain about five acres; the latter cast into a new and genteel form by Dr. Dockwray; a flew-brick-wall in it of eighty feet; a fine terrace extending east and west before the house; a mount of flowers on an irregular grafs-lawn below it; with borders of flowers and flowering-shrubs; encompassed for about two parts by the Pont; with a variety of walks, some of them under an evergreen-shade, to the west; a little island, formed by the Pont, to the east, crossed by a new stone-bridge of two arches; a grove of tall forest-trees on its southern banks; the small villa of Hawkwell behind them, partly discerned through the trees: the western vale-prospect bounded at the distance of four or five miles by a semicircular ridge of hills; the villas of Ryal and Inghow visible through the clumps of trees in the meadows, both on eminences, the latter on limestone, with a chapel in it.

A short mile east from Stamfordham, on the south side of the Pont, is Cheesburn-Grange, the manour of which belonged to the priory of Hexham (q). It was the feat and estate of Gawen Swinburn, Esq; 10 Q. Elizabeth (r); and of Thomas Widdrington, Esq; of Grey's Inn,

He wrote the history of York, of the MS. copy of which the ingenious and learned Mr. Drake hath given us a particular account in the preface to his history and antiquities of that city (t). He left four daughters and coheirs, one of whom, Mary, married Sir Robert Markham, of Sedgebroke in Nottinghamshire, Bart. descended from the famous Judge Markham, displaced for his integrity by K. Edward IV. His estate and seat of Cheesburn-Grange are now in the possession of Ralph Riddel, Esq ; brother to Thomas Riddel, of Swinburn-Castle, Esq.

A mile and a half from Welton-burn, is Harlow-Hill, corruptly for Hare-low or Here-low, that is the hill or station of the army (u), a small village on an eminence ; at the south-west end of which a road branches off to son of Ovingham (v). At the dissolution, 26 K. Henry VIII, its annual revenues were valued at 11 l. 2 s. 8 d. Sancroft (w); 13 l. 4 s. 8 d. Speed. The situation is very pleasant, the river Tyne gliding under it, by a hanging garden, with three terraces, one above another, having the ruins of the castle of Prudhow, and of the chapel of our lady belonging to it, in full view. It came with the appropriated tithes, and the advowson, of Ovingham, with a fine glebe, into the possession of the Addisons, and was their seat for a long time. It now belongs, with the tithes, advowson, and glebe, to Thomas Charles Bigge, of Little Benton, Esq; the glebe of near the yearly value of 200 l. and with the tithes of Ovingham reputed worth 500 l. per annum.

Opposite to the house of Black canons, on the north side, is the church, in the cathedral-form, solemn and lofty within. In the tower are three bells, and near it a very neat vestry. On the north side of the chancel, is a beautiful tomb of black marble, whereon is cut the coat armorial of the Addisons, without any inscription.

On the south side of the chancel, is a flat sepulchral stone, of blue marble, with the following inscription.

Here lies the corpse of a rare man interr'd,
On whom both wit and learning God conferr'd
To his great good: for all his works did tend
To God the object of his acts and end.
His abstract was from a religious race,
To which his proper virtue added grace.

 Of sin's foul deeds, and vile contagion, free.

 Of high, of low, of all he well deserv'd.
 He could get wealth, but got, he cared not for it.

The castle is now in ruins; as is the chapel of our lady, at the foot of the hill.

Mr. Blacket hath made a handsome road for a mile in length on the west side of his house, leading from Ovingham, like a terrace, exceedingly pleasant and romantic, a bank of wood on one side, and the river Tyne on the other.

Vindobala (l), or Roucheſter (m). A ſculpture of Hercules, in ſtone, of the rag-kind, was digged up at it by ſome labourers a few years ago, by whoſe careleſſneſs it had the miſfortune to loſe both the head and feet. Mr. Brown, of Throckley-Fell, ſaved it from farther harm by having it carried to his houſe. In 1761, it was removed to London by a curious antiquary, Mr. Duane, a gentleman, ſays Dr. Stukeley, who judiciously indulges a taſte for the elegances of theſe learned curioſities, in the miſt of the confinement and buſineſs of the law (n).

The feſtival of Hercules and Bellona was obſerved, 3d June.

Two Roman Fibulæ have been alſo digged up, both of ſilver. One of them was in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. Mr. Walton, of Corbridge, and the other of the late Mrs. Roberts, of Hexham.

In paſſing by this ſtation, 11th December, 1761, I had a Roman brick and two coins from ſome labourers who turned them up from among the ruins the day before. The coins were of copper, and of the later empire. Upon the brick is the following inſcription done with a ſtamp, the letters large and fair.

found a large quantity of Roman coins in a small urn, which they disposed of to different people in and about Newcastle for their weight of our own money, which coming to the knowledge of the Lord of the manour, William Archdeacon, Esq; he claimed them as treasure-trove, and recovered near five hundred silver, and sixteen gold, coins; almost a compleat series of those of the higher empire; among them several Otho's; most of them in fine preservation.

In June, in the same year, a coffin hewn out of a rock was discovered in digging near the same place by some labourers, about twelve feet long, four broad, and two deep; a hole close to the bottom at one end; a transverse partition of stone and lime about three feet from the other end; many decayed bones, teeth, and vertebræ in it; supposed by their shape and size to be the remains of some animal, sacrificed, perhaps, to Hercules.

It stands on the side of a shady hill, having an ancient chapel at the east end, and a tower at the other. Before it is a sloping lawn, and near it an islet with two or three tall oaks upon it. The river Tyne, the inclosures, the clumps of trees prettily dispersed, the handsome seat of John Simpson, Esq; at Bradley, the villa and church of Newburn, are all in sight; but the greatest beauty in view, is a flexure in the river, above which the spire of Ryton-church appears like a stately gothic column or obelisk.

It is a small village, inhabited chiefly by persons employed in coal-works, and in carrying timber and goods down the river in boats; the tides flowing a little above it.

The church is at the north-west end, on a rising ground, in the form of a cross, with a small tower. Copsi, one of the favourite Lords of K. William I., was slain as he entered this church, by Osulf, his competitor for the government of Northumberland, who was soon after run through with a spear and killed by a thief, as he was endeavouring to seize him; which shews how speedily murder is often punished by a just providence, and by the meanest instruments (u).

The living of this parish being represented to Dr. Smith, Bishop of Carlisle after the restoration, as an insufficient maintenance for a minister, his Lordship, among his other excellent charities, augmented it 25*l. per annum* (v).

At this village, Lord Conway, at the head of 1200 horse and 2000 foot, opposed the passage of the Scots over the river Tyne under General Lesley, 27th August, 16 K. Charles I., 1640. The foot by a smart fire from under a breast-work forced 300 Scotch troopers to repass the river, but on the playing of nine pieces of ordnance, concealed the night before by Lesley in some brush-wood, they cast down their arms, and ran away, leaving the horse under commissary-general Wilmot, and many gentlemen of rank with him, exposed to the fury of the enemy's cannon and cavalry, who flood their ground, firm and intrepid, till the impetuosity of numbers forced them to a precipitate retreat, with the loss of 300 killed or taken prisoners. Lord Clarendon calls this defeat of Conway's an irreparable rout. Whitlock says, "his conduct was enquired into on his return to York, to tell the story of his defeat to the king, where he was accused of cowardice or treachery, that he used his best art and flourishes to vindicate himself: yet something stuck upon him (t)."

Near the 2d mile-stone, on the right hand, is the Roman station

Condercum, or Benwell (u). A Roman fudatory was discovered a few years ago by the curious and observing Robert Shaftoe, Esq; in a field east of his house. The pavement was not in chequer-work or mosaic, but in unequal irregular figures, red and white; a composition of calx viva, and broken brick; resembling a pebble-marble. Of the true mosaic or mosaic, I have not heard of any being yet discovered in the Roman structures of this or the other stations with us; though I make no question but the Romans of quality had them here, as well as in the more southern stations of Britain. They are of great antiquity, invented by the luxurious Asiatics, the builders of Babylon, of Palmyra, of Persepolis, of the famous pyramids of Memphis, the just wonders of the world. At Susa, they had a royal banquet on a Lithostraton, composed of rich and curious stones (v). At Jerusalem our Saviour had his sentence passed on him by Pilate from a throne in a place called by way of eminence, The Pavement (w). From Asia, these Lithostrata passed into Greece; from Greece to Rome (x), and from Rome to Britain, into the palaces of princes, the state-rooms and tents of generals, the sacred temples, magnificent thermæ, and other places of elegance and pleasure. The Balneum and Lithostroton, according to Varro (y), made a compleat and elegant villa. Baths and shady piazzas were first introduced here by Agricola (z).

Mr. Shaftoe hath two small Roman mill-stones found at this station, one of rag-stone, the other factitious, of potters work, of a bluish-ash colour. The Romans, as well as the eastern nations, the Ægyptians and Jews, put their captives and slaves to the employ of grinding corn, who were placed post molas (a).

A small gulosum fictile, or drinking-cup, of Roman pottery, was also digged up, and in possession of Mr. Shaftoe, but now lost.

The neck and handle of a cruise, of brown pottery, unglazed, was found at the same time.

Mr. Horsley has taken notice of a fine urn found in that part of the station, called Chapel-hill (b); where large foundations of buildings have lately been turned up for the sake of the stones, but no more urns or curiosities of value found.

Though the Roman urns were deposited by their temples and military ways in cespitious mounts, yet they were not placed at any great depth below the surface.

it, mixed with judgment; to the east is a park-like inclosure, with small clumps of trees; to the west, a winding walk through a shrubbery and plantation to a Chinese cottage, and near it a tempiato, from which is a fine view of the vale below, and of the river Tyne, and of the little island formed by it, called the King's Meadows, and of the handsome seat of Sir Thomas Clavering, of Axwell-park, Bart. on the side of a shady hill. Before the south front is a grass-area, from which the towering pyramid rising through the trees of Gibside, above the banks of the river Derwent, is in view, a beautiful object! .

We now pass on to Benwell-hill, where the military road goes through the station, and on the left hand is that part of it called Chapel-hill, lately digged up for the sake of the stones, as before-mentioned; a little beyond which a road branches off, on the same side, to Fenham, the manour of which, with the manour and lands of Threperwood, near Hayden-bridge, belonged to the priory of the knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem (b); remarkable for acquiring by an act of parliament, 18 K. Edward II, 1324, the large possessions of the knights Templers, dissolved 2d of that reign (i). It was also dissolved by an act of parliament, 31 K.

Henry VIII, 1540. The prior, Sir William Weston, died of grief. The priory-lands were annexed to the crown, except 600 marks per annum given to four knights and two gentlemen for their valour; 100 marks to each, with a dwelling-house, for ever. Their names were Sir John Dudley, Sir Thomas Seimour, Sir Thomas Poinings, Sir George Carew, Anthony Kingston, and Richard Cromwell (k).

Fenham was afterwards in the possession of the antient family of the Riddels, ancestors of Thomas Riddel, of Swinburn-Castle, Esq; (l).

It is now the manour and seat of William Ord, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 1747. His seat is a modern structure, large and handsome. From the east front is a fine prospect of the river Tyne, of the ships in the river, of the church (m) and villa of Giray, famous for its monastery, the residence of venerable Bede, of the villa of Chirton, and the admired ruin of the priory-church of Tynemouth, on a clear day.

By

By the turnpike-gate, and near the 1st mile-stone, a handsome road branches off, on the right hand, to

Elswick, a small vill on a pleasant slope, which belonged to the priory of Tynemouth (n), and after the reformation was in the possession of the Jennison's; of William Jennison, Esq; an alderman of Newcastle upon Tyne, and a representative in parliament for that corporation from 31 Q. Elizabeth, 1571, to the 44th of the same reign, 1601; of Ralph Jennison, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 1717, and a representative of it in parliament for many years together.

It is now the seat and lordship of John Hodgson, Esq; whose father purchased it of Mr. Jennison. His seat is an old structure. Before the south front is a terrace of a considerable length, extending east and west, with a dwarf-wall; the admired pinnacle of St. Nicholas's steeple of Newcastle, the artificial ruin on the hill at Biker, the church and town of Gatehead, in view to the east; the grounds beautifully sloping to the river Tyne to the south, beyond which is a fine opening into the inclosed and shady vale of Lamesley in the bishoprick of Durham, gradually enlarged, the castles of Ravenworth and Lumley in sight.

After passing through the turnpike-gate, we come by a short and easy descent to Newcastle upon Tyne, a town of great antiquity. Two late curious antiquaries were of opinion, that it was a Roman villa; its name Pons Ælii, from the Roman emperor, Ælius Hadrianus; garrifoned by the Cohors Cornoviorum (a). They observed some remains of a military way leading to it from Chester-le-street, which was carried over the Tyne by a bridge of arches, where the present bridge stands. The sagacious Dr. Stukeley imagines it is the Ad Murum of Richard of Cirencester in his map of Roman-Britain (b). The Picts wall goes through the vicarage-garden, and St. Nicholas's church-yard. Part of a turret upon it is still visible by the gate at the foot of the royal Saxon villa of Pampeden; also a tower on an eminence in the same villa, called The Wall-Knowl, or Carpenter's tower, hereafter described. No other Roman building, no forts, palaces, temples, baths, sepulchralia, or sepultures, altars, medals, or coins, of any value or curiosity, have hitherto been discovered. Those valuable treasures were undoubtedly destroyed by the northern emigrants, the martial, unlettered Saxons and Danes, who generally built upon Roman foundations, and retained part of their old names, as Castrum, Chester, or Chesters, Burgos, or Brough, importing their being places of strength, safety and security. On their being converts to Christianity, it was usual with them, in the impetu of religious zeal, to efface and break to pieces every thing that carried the image and features of ethnicism; Roman curiosity, and Roman grandeur, meeting with no protection. On their settling in communities, they built this town, and gave it the name of Monk-Chester, for its being a safe and secure retreat to the professors of a monastic life. It retained this name till the Norman conquest by K. William I; whose son, Robert Curtoise, thinking it a fit place for a garrison to restrain the martial, indomitable spirit in the North, built a citadel on an eminence, commanding the river, and called the town, Newcastle upon Tyne, to distinguish it from the old monastic castle, situated in the same place, and said to have been of a round figure (c).

The geographers place it in 21 degrees, and 30 minutes longitude; and 54 degrees, and 57 minutes of north latitude. It is encompassed with a strong stone-wall, ditch, and rampier of earth; has seven gates or ports, with many round towers, and square turrets, built at different times, and by different persons, some of them still retaining the names of their founders. Their names are,

CLOSE-GATE is situated at the west end of a narrow street of the same name, on the margin of the river Tyne. It hath two good rooms in it, of freestone, and hewn work.

The White Frier-tower is on the extremity of an eminence, of a circular form, well paved, and seated at the top. The access to it from the Close-gate is by 140 stone-steps, steep and difficult, called Break-Neck-Stairs. It affords one of the finest and most varied prospects about the town. It was built by the Fratres Cameli Monte, or White Friars, opposite to their monastery. It is now the hall of the company of masons.

The White-Frier-gate was built by the same religious fraternity. It was a postern, or private passage, convenient for their pleasure in walking into the fields in time of peace, and for their defence in time of war.

Newill-Tower was built by the Newills, Earls of Westmorland, for the security of their house in West-gate. It is also called Denton-tower, from its having in ward, as is thought, Denton-chare. It is now the hall of the masons, bricklayers, and plaisterers. They repaired it in 1711; Richard Fletcher and William Johnson, wardens.

West-Spital-tower, or St. Mary's tower, was built by the master and brethren of St. Mary's hospital, to which it is very near.

A Postern was made beyond the two next towers, for a communication between the Forth and West-gate, 1705; Thomas Wasse, Esq; mayor; Matthew Matfen, Esq; sheriff.

WEST-GATE is a strong building, of stone, and hewn work, with a port-cullice, iron-gates, &c. at the west end of a spacious, well-built and handsome street of the same name. It was built by that eminent patron of Newcastle, Roger Thornton, Esq. It is now the hall of the house-carpenters who lately repaired it.

Heber-Tower, next neighbour to Durham-tower, is the hall of armourers, curriers, and felt-makers, who were incorporated, or made one fellowship, 36 K. Henry VIII.

The Black-Frier-gate was built by the Fratres Prædicatores, or Black Friars, for a passage from their monastery to their garden, by licence from K. Edward I (d).

Morden-Tower is the hall of the plumbers, glaziers, &c. who had a grant of it in 1619, and repaired it in 1700. They were made one fellowship in 1536.

Eure-Tower was built by the antient family of Eure, Lords of Kirkley, by the river Blyth, and barons of Witton, in the bishoprick of Durham. It is now the hall of the colliers, waggoners, and pavers.

Andrew-tower owes it name to its situation, by St. Andrew's church.

NEW-GATE is situated at the north end of a broad, well-inhabited street of the same name. It exceeds all the other gates for strength,

Strength, and is supposed to be the most antient. On the north side of it, in a nich, is the stone effigies of K. Charles II. crowned, with a scepter in his hand; the nich adorned with a pediment, entablature, and cartoons; below, the arms of England, and the arms of the corporation; which are, gules, three castles argent; the crest, out of the battlements of a castle, argent, a demi-lyon issuing; the supporters, two sea-horses, argent (e). Two new wings have been added on the south side; one in 1702; William Ramsay, Esq; mayor, William Boutflower, Esq; sheriff; the other in 1706; Sir Ralph Carr, mayor, William Ellison, Esq; sheriff. It has been for many years the town-jail for debtors and felons.

Bertram Monboucher-tower owes its name to its founder, Bertram Monboucher, high sheriff of Northumberland, 49 K. Edward III. and 1, 2, 3 K. Richard II.

PILGRIM-STREET-GATE is at the north end of a spacious, handsome, pleasant street of the same name; so called from the great resort and entertainment of pilgrims in it, in the monastic times, in their way to perform their devotions at the shrine of the Blessed Virgin in the neighbouring villa of Jesmont. It is a strong gate, flat-roofed, and embattled; has a port-culice, iron-gates, &c. It is the hall of the company of joiners, who repaired it in 1716; Thomas French, and Paul Cook, wardens.

Carliol-tower owes its name to the antient family of the Carliols, eminent merchants of this town, of which Nicholas de Carliol was mayor, 2 K. Edward II. *. A field near it also bears their name, (e) Browne Willis.

* Against whom, and the rest of the burgesses of the merchants gild, the poor burgesses of Newcastle recovered 50*l.* damages in the exchequer.

called Carliol-Croft; through which is an agreeable walk, presenting a prospect of many hanging gardens. This tower is the hall of the company of weavers, who repaired it in 1682.

Austin-tower was built by the friers of St. Austin, for the security of their monastery, which stood opposite to it. It is now the hall of the ropers, who repaired it in 1698; John Longlands, and John Dawson, wardens.

Pampeden-gate is at the foot of an antient villa of the same name, at the north-east of the town. It has folding iron-gates, but no port-cullice. It is ascended to the top by a pair of stone-stairs, two yards wide. In the opinion of a judicious antiquary (f), it was part of the Picts wall. The remains of a Roman turret are still conspicuous. The gate gives its name, and the wall a passage, to a streamlet, called Pampeden, or Panden-burn.

Wall-Knowl-tower is on an eminence in the same villa. It was Roman. It is now the hall of the carpenters, who, in 1716, erected a handsome quadrangular tower on the under-part of it, adorned at the angles with four fair turrets in the form of a lanthorn. Under it is an antient postern-gate, for access to a field, enclosed, and laid out in gardens. It belongs to Matthew Ridley, of Heaton, Esq.

SAND-GATE receives its name from its situation by the shore of the river Tyne. It is arched at top, but has no tower or castellated building upon it. There were many openings or passages through the wall next the river, for the conveniency of trade. It was lately pulled down, and part of the key railed with iron-rails, which gives a fine view of the river.

BRIDGE-GATE has its name from its situation at the north end of a stately bridge over the Tyne.

Between most of the towers on the wall were two quadrangular, speculating turrets, with stone effigies, at the angles, of the speculatores or watchmen; with square vacant spaces to annoy the enemy (g).

The north part of the wall is thought, from the stile of the masonry being different from the rest, to have been first built, and to be as antient as the time of K. John (b). That part of it which extends from Sand-gate to the gate of Pampeden, and from thence to the Austin-Friers, is said to have been built in the reign of K. Edward I, by one of the burghers of spirit and fortune, whom the Scots had surprized in one of their prædatory expeditions, and extorted a large sum from him for his liberty (i). K. Edward III. granted the corporation the duties and customs of the town for the term of seven years to compleat the whole, which being neglected, he seized their franchises, and would not restore them till they agreed to do it at their own charge (k). It was so much

From the antiquity, situation, and fortifications of Newcastle, proceed we to its charters, privileges, civil government, and commerce.

King Henry II. granted it by charter great franchises and liberties (m).

King John, his son, in the third year of his reign, confirmed them, on the payment of 100 marks, and two palfreys (n). He enlarged them by charter in the fourteenth year of his reign, on the annual payment of 100 l. in two equal portions, at Easter and Michaelmas, reserving to himself the rents, prizes, assizes, and leases in it. In compensation for the losses sustained by the inhabitants on taking down their houses for making a foss or ditch under the castle, next the river, he granted them an annual rent of 100 l. 10 s. 6 d. of Escaet, to be paid by him and his heirs, in proportion to their several damages (o). He also granted it,

King Henry III., by his charter made it a Mayor-Town, 1251 (p); being governed before by four bailiffs; and to his other royal favours, added this gracious one, a grant, during pleasure, of all the demesne-lands belonging to the castle, called, The Castle-Field (q), containing 850 acres, for free pasture, with liberty to dig coals, and stones, and to dispose of them for their use to the best advantage, upon payment of 20 s. into the Exchequer; the bounds and limits of it taken upon inquest, 31 Q. Elizabeth (r). His bounty did not stop here. He gave them a field, called, The Forth, adjoining to the other, for the same uses, containing 11 acres, as surveyed by order of the parliament, 1649, and then valued at 12 l. per annum; for which they were to pay 40 s. into the exchequer (s). It was also provided by his charter, that no Jew should reside among them.

King Richard II, confirmed its charters in the first year of his reign, 1378. He afterwards granted some pieces of ground for the conveniency of making high-ways, and a bridge (c). For its greater honour, he also granted, 1390, that a sword, the ensign of royal state and authority, should be carried before the mayor.

King Henry IV, on his accession to the throne, granted it farther privileges and immunities; that it should be a town and county of itself, independent of the county of Northumberland; that it should have a sheriff, instead of bailiffs, who should hold a court, account before the Barons by their attorney, and have the return of all writs, &c. that it should have six aldermen, to be elected from among the burghesses, with power to act as justices of the peace within their jurisdiction; that it should have the royalties of the river Tyne, from Sparrow-Hawk to Hedwin-streams; with a prohibition for any ship to load or unload any sort of goods in any part of the river within those limits, except at Newcastle (d).

K. Edward VI, on the dissolution of the bishoprick of Durham by act of parliament, 20 March, 1552, granted to this corporation the town and liberties of Gates-head (e). He also designed to have erected a bishoprick at Newcastle, and another at Durham, out of its revenues. The preamble to the act sets forth,

That this bishoprick being then void of a prelate, the gift thereof was in the king's pleasure, and the compass of it being so large as to extend itself into several shires far distant, it could not be sufficiently served by one bishop; and since the king by his godly disposition, was desirous to have God's Holy Word preached in those parts, which were wild and barbarous for lack of good preaching, and good searching; therefore he intendeth to have two bishopricks for that diocese; the one at Durham, which should have 2000 marks yearly revenue, and another at Newcastle with 1000; and also found a cathedral church at the latter place, with a deanery and chapter, out of the revenues of the said bishoprick. Therefore the bishoprick of Durham is utterly extinguished and dissolved; and authority given for letters patents to erect the two new bishopricks, together with a deanery and chapter at Newcastle; with a proviso, that the rights of the deanery, chapter, and cathedral of Durham, should suffer nothing by this act (f).

The king's death defeated this design. An act of parliament passed, 1 Q. Mary, 1554, for restoring the bishoprick of Durham to its ancient state, after much opposition from this corporation, and warm debates in the House of Commons, by a great majority, 201 against 120. The preamble to the bill sets forth,

That certain ambitious persons taking advantage of the late king's minority, made an interest by sinister practice to procure the dissolution of the bishoprick; that it was done out of mercenary views, to enrich themselves, and their friends, by seizing the lands of that See, rather than upon just occasion or godly zeal. That Tunstal, Bishop of Durham, was deprived upon untrue surmises, and false accusations, and that process against him was foul and illegal. That upon a full examination of the matter, by the queen's commissioners, the sentence of deprivation was declared void, as may be seen at large by an authentic instrument. That the queen had new founded the bishoprick by her letters patents, and restored all the lands in her possession. But, that neither the sentence of deprivation, nor the queen's letters patent, were of sufficient force to recover the honours, lands, &c. to the See of Durham. Therefore to restore the bishoprick to its former interest, privileges, and revenues, the two dissolution-statutes of the last reign were hereby repealed (g).

Queen Elizabeth confirmed to the town of Newcastle the favours of her progenitors, and added new ones, by her charter, bearing date, 22d March, and 42d year of her reign (b).

So much for the royal Charters and Privileges granted to Newcastle. Next, of its Civil Government. This is admirable, and does honour to it, in its minutest branches. For the administration of justice, it hath several courts ;

The Mayor's Court ;	Ward-Moot ;
Sheriff's Court ;	Pycpowder-Court ;
Court of Conscience ;	and,
Admiralty-Court ;	Three gilds, annually.
Court of Common-Council ;

The Mayor's Court is held every Monday at the west end of the Guild-hall in the Exchange. It is a court of record, and of great importance. It preserves the rights, laws, franchises, and customs of the corporation. In it are tried all actions for debt, trespasses, accounts, covenants, broken attachments, sequestrations, or other matters arising within the town and liberties, to any value whatsoever. No attorneys are allowed to plead in it, but such as are free of the corporation, who are sworn at their admission. It hath six sergeants at mace to attend it. If the clerk of this court takes insufficient bail, and the defendant absconds, the plaintiff, upon judgment obtained, may oblige the clerk to pay the debt or damage, by petition to the court.

(b) See an abstract of it, and other charters and grants to the corporation, in Gardiner, 4to. Lond. with many cuts, and a map of the river Tyne, Pages 204.

An action commenced in it, may be brought to trial for 30 s. but will cost more money and time in the sheriff's court, out of which an action may be removed into the mayor's at any time before a jury is sworn, but not out of the mayor's into the sheriff's.

An action entered in it, will for ever remain in force, though no process be thereupon.

The juries of this, and the sheriff's court, are the same. They are returned every Christmas by the several wards of the corporation, at their ward-moot-inquest; where particular wards appoint persons to serve as jury-men for every month in the year. They are entered in a book by the town-clerk, of whom the officers of those courts receive copies.

Upon a cause being removed out of the sheriff's court into this, and it appearing to the mayor that a verdict hath been obtained against the plaintiff for more than his just debt, the mayor may remit the cause to judgment for the just debt only. The recorder for the time being is judge hereof, but the mayor and aldermen may sit as judges with him, if they please.

The Sheriff's Court is a court of record, held on Wednesdays and Fridays in the same place, for trials, and entering proceedings, as rules, appearances, judgments, pleas, &c. The attorneys who plead in it are appointed by the mayor and court of aldermen. They are allowed three fees in every cause; viz. one for the Appearance, another at issue, and a third upon summons for trial; or to have a fee on every summons, if the cause be summoned more than once. The fees for trial are,

The defendant may (after the verdict is given, and before judgment is entered) stop judgment, by taking the cause before the mayor, for time to pay the money recovered.

In this court may be tried actions of debt, trespasses, accompts, covenants, broken attachments, and sequestrations. If either party cannot stay in town till the day of trial, his testimony in writing will be allowed for good evidence. The sheriff, if he pleases, may sit upon all trials with the recorder, who is also judge here.

The Court of Conscience is established by act of parliament, and kept in the same place. It is so-called, because all debts under 40 s. are recoverable in it, upon the creditors making oath, that the same is a just debt to him. The mayor and commissioner are judges. They administer oaths, and commit to prison offenders. They proceed first by summons. This costs but three-pence. If the defendant appears, there is no farther charge. If he does not, they proceed to attachment and execution. All persons, whether free or not, if within the freedom, may prosecute, or be prosecuted in this court. Freemen may be prosecuted though they live out of the liberty.

The Court of Admiralty is held before the mayor for the preservation of the river Tyne, at such times as he shall direct. His deputy, the water-bailiff, gives notice of all offences committed contrary to the orders made for the preservation of the brood of fishes, and takes effectual care that they may be proceeded against according to law.

The Court of Common Council is after the model of the supreme council of the nation. It consists of two houses. One is for the mayor and aldermen. The other is for the commoners. They make all by-laws for the benefit of the corporation. In this court are recorded all deeds and evidences. The mayor can call and adjourn it at pleasure.

In the court, called the Ward-moot-Court, are chosen the officers for the government of each particular ward, as common council-men, constables, &c.

The Court of Pyepowder is held at the time of the fairs and Lammas and St. Luke, for examining and trying all suits brought for petty differences and offences committed contrary to the following proclamation, made on the first day of each fair.

“ The

“ The Right worshipful ——— mayor of the town and “ county of Newcastle upon Tyne, and his worshipful brethren, “ the aldermen of the said corporation, streightly charge and “ command on behalf of our sovercign Lord the King, that all “ manner of persons of whatsoever estate, degree, or condition “ they be, having recourse to this fair, keep the peace of our “ said Sovereign Lord the King.

“ That no manner of persons make any congregations, con“ venticles, or affrays, by which the said peace may be broken “ or disturbed, upon pain of imprisonment, and fine to be made,
 “ after the discretion of the mayor and aldermen.

“ Also that all manner of sellers of wine, or beer, sell by mea“ sure, sealed, as by gallon, pottle, quart, pint, &c. upon pain
 “ that will fail thereof.

“ And that no person sell any bread, but if it keep the assize,
 “ and that it be good and wholesome for man’s body, upon pain
 “ that will fail thereof.

¶ And that no manner of cook, pye-baker, nor huckster, sell, “ or put to sale, any manner of victual, but it may be good and “ wholesome for man’s body, upon pain that will fail thereof.

“ And that no manner of persons buy, or sell, but with true “ weights and measures, sealed according to the statute in that “ behalf made, upon pain that will fail thereof.

“ And that no manner of person, or persons, take upon him “ or them within this fair to make any manner of arrest, at“ tachment, summons, or execution, but if it be done by the “ officers

“ officers of this corporation, thereunto assigned, upon pain that “ will fail thereof.

“ And that no manner of person or persons, whatsoever within “ the limits and bounds of this fair presume to break the Lord’s “ day in felling, shewing, or offering to sale; or in buying, or “ offering to buy, any commodities whatsoever; or in fitting, “ tipling, or drinking, in any tavern, inn, or ale-house, tipling“ house, or cook’s house, or in doing any other thing that may “ tend to the breach hereof, upon the pains and penalties con“ tained in several acts of parliament, which will be severely in“ flicted upon the breakers thereof.

“ And, finally, that what persons soever find themselves grieved, “ injured, or wronged, by any manner of person in this fair,
 “ that they come with their complaints before the stewards in this “ fair, assigned to hear and determine pleas, and they will ad“ minister to all parties justice according to the laws of this land,
 “ and the customs of this corporation.”

Besides these courts, the mayor holds

Three Gilds annually, for the enrolling and turning over apprentices, and making others free who have performed the obligations in their indentures; and for hearing and determining differences between masters and their apprentices. Any master refusing to make his apprentice free when he ought, on complaint thereof to the mayor, he will summon the master before him, and if he shew no good cause to the contrary, the mayor will make him free.

If a master misuse his apprentice, either by beating him, neglecting to instruct him, or to find him necessaries, the mayor will summon

summon the master before him, and relieve the servant, or direct him to take his remedy in the mayor's court.

If a freeman refuse to appear before the mayor upon summons, the mayor and recorder will grant a warrant to oblige him to appear. This will cost 1 s.

If any apprentice be disobedient, or disorderly, &c. the mayor will send one of his officers for such apprentice, and send him to the house of correction at West-Gate, or otherwise punish him, as the offence deserves.

When an apprentice is to be turned over to another master of the same trade, it cannot be done before he is turned over before the company where he was bound. If he be turned over by the company only, it is no obligation on the second master to keep such apprentice, nor is the apprentice obliged to serve such second master. He may leave his service at pleasure, and sue out his indenture against his first master. Therefore it is necessary, that all apprentices be turned over before the mayor. This discharges the first master, and obliges the second, and also the apprentice to serve him the full term specified in the indentures.

On any difference arising between a master and an apprentice, it is the interest of both to refer it to the mayor. He will hear both parties, and decide the controversy, for this small charge, viz. for the summons one shilling, and two shillings to the clerk for the order.

If any apprentice shall omit to take his freedom within convenient time, he is liable to be fined by the mayor at his pleasure.

If

If a freeman shall privately turn his apprentice over to a foreigner, and let him serve him, and testify to the mayor that the apprentice served a freemen, the master and servant may both be disfranchised, and fined at the pleasure of the recorder, and the mayor may cause the freeman's shop to be shut up.

If a master connive at his apprentice's servitude, and make him free too soon, they are both liable to be disfranchised; the former acting contrary to the oath which he took, when he himself was made free, and which ought to govern all freemen afterwards. The oath is in the following terms.

“ Ye shall swear that ye shall be good and true to our sovereign lord K. George III, and to the heirs of our sovereign lord the king, obeyant and obedient ye shall be to the mayor and ministers of the corporation, the franchises and customs thereof ye shall maintain, and this town keep harmless in that That you is.

“ Ye shall be contributory to all manner of charges within this town, as summons, watches, contributions, taxes, tallages, lot and scot, and to all other charges bearing your part as a freeman ought to do.

“ Ye shall colour no foreign goods under or in your name, whereby the king or this town might or may lose their customs or advantages.

“ Ye shall know no foreigner to buy or sell any merchandize with any other foreigner within this corporation or franchise thereof, but ye shall warn the mayor thereof, or some ministering under him.

“ Ye

“ Ye shall implead or sue no freemen out of this town, whilst “ you may have right and law within the same town.

“ Ye shall take no apprentice but if he be free-born, that is to “ say, no bondman’s son, nor the child of an alien, and for no “ less term than for seven years, without fraud or deceit, and
 “ and within the first year ye shall cause him to be enrolled, or “ else pay such fine as shall reasonably be imposed upon you for “ omitting the same : and after his term’s end, within conveni“ ent time (being required) ye shall make him free of the cor“ poration, if he have well and truly served you. Ye shall also “ keep the king’s peace in your own person.

“ Ye shall know no gatherings, conventicles, nor conspiracies, “ against the king’s peace, but ye shall warn the mayor thereof,
 “ or lett it to your power.

“ All these points and articles ye shall well and truly keep, ac“ cording to the laws and customs of this corporation, to your “ power. So, God you help !”

It must be remembered to the honour of the magistrates of Newcastle, that their attention and zeal has ever been conspicuous, unremitted and ardent, in maintaining harmony and good order among all ranks of people within their jurisdiction, and stigmatizing bold and impudent misdemeanours. Ever inclined to lenity, rather than rigour, and conscious how much some delinquents are more affected by being exposed to public shame and ignominy, than by any other sort of punishment, they had an antient custom of punishing drunkards and brawling women by causing them to pass in review through the streets, each in a machine, symbols of their notorious misconduct. A great barrel or tub, with the sides open, and one end perforated, was put over the drunkard's head, which covered his shoulders and body to the small of his legs, where it was fastened. This was called, The New-fashioned Cloak. An iron-engine, in a crown-like form, enclosed the head and face of the female brawler, an iron-tongue entering her mouth, and so contrived, that her face might be seen. This was called, The Branks (z).

For preserving peace, tranquillity, and order, in preventing accidents in the night-time, an act of parliament was obtained by the corporation, 1763, for having lamps and a night-watch. Thus distinguished is Newcastle for its good government. It is as eminent for its

Commerce, trade, and revenue. It is the great Emporeum of the north of England, and of a good part of Scotland. In the early reign of K. Edward III, it was so powerful in shipping, that in his expedition against the French, it sent him an aid of 17 ships, and 314 men, as appears from the roll of his fleet before Calais, extant in the king's great wardrobe in London, and cited by Hakluyt in his English Voyages (a). That great king, for the encouragement of its trade, granted the merchants leave to carry their goods to any part of England toll or custom-free (b). It is in the list of the trading towns to which Sir Thomas White, lord mayor of London, 1 Q. Mary, 1553, gave 100 l. per annum for ever, to be lent to four merchant-cloathiers for ten years without interest (c). It first received that bounty in the year 1599, and ever since in its turn. The merchant adventurers have a governor, twelve assistants, and a secretary. They have a stately court, to the east of the town-chamber, built upon part of the antient hospital of St. Catharine. Great and generous efforts have been lately made by the corporation to give life and vigour to the commercial arts. A bank has been established. A fund has been raised for carrying on the herring and Greenland fisheries. But the chief trade of Newcastle is derived from the coal-mines, the Potof of Northumberland, and Durham. This gives bread to some thousands, and enriches individuals. The vast extent of it may be partly guessed at, from the 1 s. per chaldron granted by the corporation to Q. Elizabeth, in the lieu of an arrear of 2 d. per chaldron, since given to the noble family of the Duke of Richmond, which amounts to about 14,000 l. per annum. The coal-fleets sometimes amount to 500 sail. Their station is at Shields, and at the keys of Girwy or Farrow, and Willington; the former on the south, and the latter on the north side, of the Tyne. All that parcel of ground within the liberty of Willington, between high and low-water-mark, in length from east to west 1245 yards, and in breadth 120 yards, was granted by the corporation to Sir Francis Anderson, Knt. on a lease for 1000 years, with leave to erect keys, and cast ballast, on payment [of 2 d. per ton, 9th Sept. 1665. Ships take in their loading of coals by the help of keels. It was enacted, 9 K. Hen. V. 1421, that the keels should be of the burthen of 20 chaldrons, and no more, according to custom; (some being of the burthen of 22, and some of 24 chaldrons, to defraud the king of his customs;) and that they should be sealed by the king's officers (d). Small ships, loaden with merchant goods, only come up to the key at Newcastle. It is esteemed one of the best keys in England. It is in length, from east to west, 103 rods.

Great contests were antiently between this corporation, and the priors of Tynemouth, and the bishops of Durham, concerning the jurisdiction of the river Tyne. A decisive decree was obtained against the prior of Tynemouth, 34 K. Edward I (e); and another against the bishop of Durham, 8 K. Richard II (f).

A grant of the conservation of the river Tyne was given to John Earl of Hamstead, 12 K. Edward II; but was recalled in the same year, on the king's being informed that it was an infringement of the liberties of the corporation (g).

The town is well supplied with provisions both by land and water. It hath two excellent weekly markets. They are held on Tuesdays and Saturdays. It hath also two great and noted annual fairs. One is on the first of August, and continues eight days together. It was granted by K. John. The other is on St. Luke's day, in the same place. It was granted by K. Henry VII. On these two days they are also held on the town-moor. It has been before observed, that whilst they continue, the corporation have a court of pyc-powder, which has all the privileges that a court-leet can have. The tolls, booths, stallage, picage, and courts of pyc-powder, of each of the fairs, in the times of the usurpation, were valued at 12*l.*

The revenue of the corporation of Newcastle, which they hold in their own right, is upwards of 8000*l. per annum.* They have the royalties of the river Tyne from Sparrow-Hawk, by Tynemouth-Bar, to Hedwine-streams, above the village of Newburn; a space of 14 miles. The circumference of their boundaries is 10 miles, and 50 yards. The revenue for coals, salt, grindstones, ballast, &c. are received by eight chamberlains. They also keep the town-securities. Their office is in the exchange. They are commonly decayed merchants, eminent for their integrity, chosen annually. Twenty-four auditors, chosen out of the twelve companies, examine their accounts once a year; and conjunctly with the mayor and aldermen see that the overplus of their annual revenue is put into the town-stock, or butch, as it is usually phrased. The chamberlains give daily attendance at their office.

Newcastle is not more eminent for its wealth and commerce, than for its zeal in cherishing religion. It is famous for its monasteries, its hospitals, alms-houses, and churches. The monasteries were,

St. Bartholomew's was founded by K. Henry I, for Benedictine Nuns. It was in Newgate-street. A back-gate leading to it still retains their name; as does their garden (b), which is in a square vale, and reaches to a place called High-Frier-Chare. Besides other possessions, not now certainly known, they had the pleasant village of Stella on the southern banks of the river Tyne, in the bishoprick of Durham, afterwards in the possession of Sir Nicholas Tempest, Bart. as attested by an antient writing, in the custody of the late humane and judicious antiquary, Dr. Hunter, of Durham (i). It is believed they had a very large property in Newcastle, in wastes and houses. The garden of the post-house was one of these wastes (k). A plot of ground adjoining to the town-moor was

Their annual revenue, 26 K. Henry VIII, was valued at 36 l. 10 s. Dugd. 37 l. 4 s. 2 d. Speed. They surrendered Jan. 3. 1540. The abbess was allowed a pension of 6 l. per ann. for life. Her name was Agnes Larwson. The monastery came into the possession of Lady Gaveere, of whom it was purchased by Mr. Robert Anderson, who, to dislodge itinerant, peddling traders, and strollers, (for whom it was become a kind of settlement and a home, and a grievance to honest freemen and tradesmen of the town) pulled it down, cleared the garden of rubbish, and made it a very pleasant spot, being reputed from corner to corner eleven score yards which is now a meadow, and belongs to Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart (m).

The monastery of the Franciscans, Grey Friars, or Friers Minors, was founded in the reign of K. Henry III, by the Carliols, wealthy merchants in Newcastle (n), whose great estate went by marriage to the family of the Thurgills of the Wolds in Yorkshire (o). The Domus Fratrum Predicatorum, or the monastery of the Preaching Friers, Black Friers, or Dominicans, was founded in honour of St. Dominic, born at Cologna in Spain, by Sir Peter and Sir Nicholas Scott, father and son, both merchants in Newcastle, and owners of the lordship of Eshet, near Felton (q), on a piece of ground given by three sisters in Westgate (r), whose names are not now to be learnt from any records. Sir Peter was the first mayor of Newcastle, 1251. He was mayor three years. Sir Nicholas, his son, was one of its four bailiffs, 1254, 1257, and 1269. Its remains shew it to have been a very handsome structure. The grass-area is about 87 feet in length, and as many in breadth; on the east of which was a chapel, now the hall of the smiths company; and on the west, an antient well, called our Lady's Well; on the south, is the Cordwainer's hall, turned into apartments for three widows; on the north, were the gardens (s). It consisted of a prior, and twelve brethren, dependent upon Tynemouth. They surrendered 10 Jan. 30, Henry VIII. Their annual revenue was then 2 l. 19 s. 6 d. The priory was granted to the corporation of Newcastle, in consideration of 53 l. 7 s. 6 d. In which gift are mentioned, besides the buildings, two gardens, a whole close within Westgate, another close adjoining to the north of the priory, a third containing three acres, and a house upon the same without the walls, and a house near Westgate, called The Gate-house; the king reserving to himself and successors the bells, lead, iron, and stone of the abbey-church, and other buildings. The priory is preserved from delapidations by several trades or companies of the corporation, who have their halls in it.

The monastery of St. Austin was founded by William Lord Ros, Baron of Wark upon Tweed (t). It was situated in the Manour-Chare, formerly called Cow-gate (u). It was a handsome edifice, adorned with cloisters, and had a curious chapel. It was sometimes the residence of the kings of England, in their expeditions against Scotland. It surrendered 9 Jan. 30 K. Henry VIII; and for some time was made use of by the government for a magazine and a storehouse, and was called by the townsmen, The Artillery-yard. K. James I, gave it to a Scotchman, who uncovered it, and

Out of its ruins has since arose a work-house for the employment of the poor; a house of correction; a charity-school for the parish of All-Saints, and a dwelling for the master built in 1723. The Surgeon's Hall, and two of the town's hospitals, stand on part of the ground which was the gardens belonging to it.

The Domus Fratrum de Penitentia I. Christi, or the Monastery of the Brethren of the Penance of Jesus Christ, was at the foot of Westgate, near the White Frier-Tower. It was almost at the foot of Westgate, opposite to the White Frier Tower. The enclosure belonging to it, wherein was the Stable-Garth, came into the possession of Sir Ralph Delaval. ton (b); but, which of them is not known by the authority of any record that is decisive. It is certain, Roger de Thornton, the elder, was a benefactor to it. By his will he left two fother of lead to repair the church or chapel belonging to it (c). It was dedicated to St. Michael, from whom, and the height of its situation, it had the name of St. Michael's Mount. At the dissolution, K. Henry VIII, gave it, and its revenues, to Sir John Gresham, an alderman of the city of London, viz. The priory-house, garden, and orchard, about an acre of ground; an enclosure near the town-walls, about four acres; thirty-four messuages, three gardens, and one enclosure; also an enclosure called Cole-riggs, and four Les Rigges in the Shield-field. The priory, with a house, orchard, and garden, came afterwards into the possession of William Dent, an alderman of Newcastle, Esq; and his son William, who conveyed them, 24 Q. Elizabeth, to William Jennison, Esq; then mayor, and Richard Hodgson, Esq; of that corporation (d).

Besides these monasteries, two others were intended to have been founded. A grant was obtained, 37 K. Edward III, for founding one in honour of the nativity and resurrection of our blessed Lord, which was repealed the year following (e). A grant was also obtained, 5 K. Henry IV, for founding another in honour of St. John the Baptist, and St. John the Evangelist (f).

The hospitals were

St. Mary Magdalen's ;

The Holy Trinity ;

The Blessed Virgin's ;

The Maison Dieu, or St. Catharine's.

St Mary Magdalen's hospital was founded by K. Henry I, for a master, brethren, and sisters, to receive leprous people. After that sickness abated, it was an asylum for the poor of the town in time of pestilence. Fourteen within the house were allowed every one a room, 8*s.* per month, and coals. Fifteen without the house had a different allowance : Some 8*s.* per month, some 5*s.* and some 2*s.* 6*d.* In the reign of K. Edward III, Laurentius Acton had the first fruits of it, amounting annually to 200 marks. John Bland, who was then master, paid him for his own right 40 marks. He is upon record for being a considerable patron to it. He freed it soon after his accession to the mastership of two annual pensions ; one paid to Richard Spereman, and the other to Hugh de Mitford. He built the consistory, and ornamented the chapel. He also raised some other buildings at his own charge. He died 48 K. Edward III, 1374, and was interred in his own chapel, near the high altar (g) ; after having presided over the hospital five years. It was a donative, in the patronage of the corporation. It stood without Pilgrim-street-gate, near the Barrow's bridge, on the summit of a hill, under which was a well of its own name, and several meadows about it, now called The Maidlin-meadows ; one of which was the Barrow, or burial-ground, belonging to it, and gave its name to the bridge. Hard by, on the other side of the bridge, was a chapel, dedicated to St. James; supposed to have been a chapel of ease to the parish of St. Andrew (b).

The hospital of the Blessed Virgin, or St. Mary's hospital, claims three foundations. But at what particular time any of them were founded, and by whom the first was, cannot be determined with precision. To the first Walter de Bolbeck was a benefactor (i). The latter, and the chapel belonging to it, were founded by a gentleman of Killingworth or Killinghowe, near Newcastle, of the name of Afelack, whose charter, which is without date, runs thus,—“ I Afelack of Killinghowe have founded the hospital and “ chapel of St. Mary the Virgin, upon my own land, for two brethren to be regulars, and one chaplain, to serve God, and take “ care of the poor (k).” Though the very time of its foundation cannot be ascertained, yet that it was in being in the reign of K. Richard I, is certain from his confirmation of the charter, wherein Afelack is styled, his burghers of Newcastle (l). The third foundation was by the corporation. It was to be a sort of an asylum to lodge the helpless stranger, and indigent traveller in, an elemosynary for the sick and needy, and to give sepulture to such as died in it. It was allowed nine chaldrons of coals annually, and had a chaplain to attend it; its yearly revenue, 33 l. 15 s. (m). K. Edward III., by letters patents granted it the sum of a hundred shillings, tam in feodo suo quam in alieno, as a compensation for such losses as it had sustained by the incursion of the Scots. Richard de Bury, Bishop of Durham, confirmed to it all its lands, rents, rights, and immunities whatever, 8th Jan. 1335, the second year of his consecration, at Gatehead. In the mayoralty of William Harding, 1444, the following list was taken of the plate, sacred vestments, and other things belonging to it.

Three chalices gilt with gold, one entire vestment of bloody velvet, woven about with golden fringe, with one cap, one casule, three albs, for the principal festivals.

A cap of cloath of gold, of a red colour, wrought with golden images, with one casule, three albs.

A cap of a black colour, woven with dragons, and birds, in gold.

A single vestment wrought in with peacocks, with a corporal belonging to the same.

A single vestment for the priest, white, bordered with roses, with a corporal belonging to it.

A single vestment for the presbyter, of a bloody colour, with a corporal belonging to the same.

(m) Bourne, p. 31.

Another

Another vestment of cloath of gold, interwoven with leopards and birds.

A hood or cap ; one casule, one alb, with a stole.

A cover of bloody velvet for a sepulchre.

Two casules, the middle part of them white.

Two linen cloaths of a red colour for the side-ornament of the altar.

A frontale of fatten, of a bloody colour, woven with golden figures for the altar.

A quadragesimal vale, of linen cloath, white, with a white crofs below in the same.

A table fet apart as an ornament for the linen of the altar.

Two tables with the Pax, one of them gilt, and adorned with precious stones, &c. &c.

A charter was obtained by the corporation for this hospital, 9 K. James I. There is a list both of its benefactors and masters in their late chorographer (n), but no regular series. In the chapel belonging to it, is the effigies of the Virgin Mary, with the Holy Jesus upon her knees. It was converted to a grammar-school.

(n) Bourne, p. 30, to p. 35.

The vestry, at the east end of it, is used for the election of the mayor, aldermen, sheriff, and other officers of the corporation. The master of the grammar-school is generally master of the hospital. A writing-master has a school, and an apartment in it, supported by the corporation. It is situated in the pleasant street of Westgate, and is now called, the West Spittle (o).

The hospital of the Holy Trinity was founded 37 K. Edward III, 1363, by William de Aſton, mayor of this corporation in 1366, 1367, 1368. It stood on the Wall-Knowl. The first master of it was William Wakefield, chosen on the dissolution of a house of the same order in Berwick upon Tweed by Anthony Beck, Bishop of Durham, over which he also presided (q). It surrendered 10 Jan. 30 K. Henry VIII.

The hospital of St. Catharine was founded in the reign of K. Henry IV, by that great patron of Newcastle, Roger Thornton, the elder (r). It was situated on the south side of the Sand-hill. The chaplain use of the hall and kitchen by leave of the founder for a very charitable and laudable purpose, viz. for young married people to have their wedding-entertainment in it, and receive the offerings and gifts of their friends (s). For some years the sons of the clergy had their annual feast in it. The hall is adorned with the arms of several generous benefactors, and some very curious carvings in wood. In 1620, Sir Richard Lumley, for 100 l. sold to the corporation that part of the hospital standing to the east of the town-chamber, on the edge of the river, sixteen yards in length, and covered with lead, over which was erected the stately court of the merchant-adventurers of the old staple, before-mentioned, first resident at Antwerp, in Brabant, and since in the more northern provinces under the states (t).

Filiorum et filiarum (y).

In the organ-gallery is a double organ; the present organist, the ingenious Mr. Avifon, author of a late Essay on musical expression. On the north side of the organ is a porch called St. George's porch (z). It is vaulted underneath, and sealed above; and was antiently adorned with curious carvings in wood, and the windows with paintings in glass; some of the latter still remaining in the east-window, particularly the portraiture of St. Laurence. It is supposed to have been one of the antient chanteries, and to have been built by one of our English monarchs (a).

Nine chanteries were found in this church, in honour of

St. John the Baptist ;	The Blessed Virgin ;
St. John the Evangelist ;	St. Margaret ;
St. Catharine , two ;	St. Cuthbert ;
St. Peter and St. Paul ;	St. Lyra .
St. Thomas ;

The chantery of St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist stood on the north side of the church (b). Its original foundation was by Laurence prior of Durham, 14 K. Stephen, 1149. It was re-founded, 6 K. Edward III, by Richard de Emeldon, for three chaplains. By an injunction of Richard Bishop of Durham, in the third year of his consecration, 1335, they were obliged to distribute, after divine service, on the eve of the anniversary of his death, the sum of six shillings and eightpence to 160 poor people (c). It was founded again in the reign of K. Henry VI, by Robert de Rhodes and his wife Agnes, for one chaplain; the annual value 7 l. 7 s. 10 d. besides a house given by the corporation for the chaplain to live in (d).

One of the chanteries of St. Catharine was founded by Alan de Durham. It was re-founded in the reign of K. Edward III, by William Johnson and his wife Isabell, for one chaplain; the annual value, 6 l. 15 s.

The other chantery of St. Catharine was founded by Nicholas and John Elliker; the annual value 3 l. 14 s. 8 d. arising out of some houses in the Castle-mote, in the Side, in the Clofe, and in Sandgate.

The chantery of St. Peter and St. Paul was founded by Adam de Fenrother and Alan Hilton in the reign of K. Henry IV; the annual value, 4 l. 13 s. 4 d. which arose out of some houses in Westgate, in the side, and in the Clofe.

The chantery of St. Thomas was founded by John Thapecape in the reign of K. Edward III; the annual value 4 l. 12 s. 6 d.

The chantery of the Blessed Virgin claims as high a foundation as the reign of K. Edward I. at least, but how much earlier, and by whom, is unknown, the deed of foundation being lost. It stood on the south side of the church, being a large porch; the annual value, 5 l. 16 s. Nicholas de Carliol, capital bailiff of the corporation, 1328, and Peter Graper, mayor of it, 1305, paid each 2 s. per ann. to it (e).

The chantery of St. Margaret was founded by Stephen Whitgray and his wife, Mary, 17 K. Richard II, 1394. It stood on the south side of the church, near the porch-door, of a square figure; the annual value 10 marks; the chaplain chosen by the vicar, the mayor and bailiffs of the corporation, and four creditable parishioners of St. Nicholas, after the death of the founders (f).

The chantery of St. Cuthbert was founded by Thomas de Errington and William Redmarshal in the reign of K. Richard II; the annual value, 7 l. 3 s. 2 d. raised out of some houses in the Side, the Sandbill, and the Clofe. Thomas de Errington was one of the witnesses to the foundation-deed of St. Margaret's chantery.

The chantery of St. Lyra was founded by Robert Castell in the reign of K. Edward III; the annual value 4 l. 10 s. which arose from certain tenements in the Clofe, in Westgate, and from a field without the west-gate, called, The Goose-green-clofe.

In the north ifle is a large gallery, designed principally for the boys of the grammar school. The east end was enlarged by one of its lecturers, the late Dr. Thomlinfon, for the accommodation of himself, and his fucceffors. The veftry is on the fouth fide of the chancel, above which is a library, to which the fame pious and worthy lecturer at his death gave a large and valuable collection of books. The annual income of 25*l. per ann.* for ever, has been fettled on a librarian by Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. The corporation make the vicar an annual compliment of 90*l.* and the firft curate another of 40*l. per annum*, who alfo receives 4*l. per annum*, from the vicar, and 6*l. 16s. 8d. per annum* from the crown, and the ufual fees of the church. He is ftiled in an antient writing, The parifh prieft, abfque impedimento vicarii aut prefbyteri parochialis. It was customary till the year 1724, to have two parifh-clerks, when one of them dying, another curate was appointed, whose annual income arifes out of the clerk's fees. The lecturer receives annually from the corporation 100*l.* for preaching every Sunday in the afternoon, and 20*l.* for preaching on holidays. The prefent lecturer is the Rev. Thomas Dockwray, D. D. late fellow of St. John's college in Cambridge, and vicar of Stamfordham; who was promoted by the corporation to this lecturefhip on the refignation of his uncle, of his own name; and to his vicarage by the crown, on the refignation of the Rev. Dr. Baker. Here are prayers twice a day; a catechetical lecture in every week when there are no holidays; and a fermon twice a week, on every Wednesday and Friday, in Advent and Lent, preached by all the clergy of the town in their turn. There are many funeral monuments, both mural and others, in this and the other churches, and many benefactions left to the parifh-poor, which are minutely enumerated by the late chorographer of Newcastle, to whom I refer. The church-yard of St. Nicholas was enclosed by subscription, 1761, with stone, and wooden pales, neat and handsome. The vicarage-house stands at the west end of St. John's church-yard in the well-built and pleasant street of West-gate, on the north side of it; the garden to the west, open and airy; remarkable for having had the Roman wall pass through the middle of it. The house is supposed to have been built by the corporation. It was repaired by the Rev. Dr. Ellison, 1694, then vicar; and by the Rev. Dr. Brown, 1762.
are

Gosforth-chapel is at a small village, about a mile north from the town, on the east side of the great post-road; nothing about it remarkable. It is supplied by the vicar.

The chapel of St. Thomas is at the north-east end of Tyne-bridge. It is commonly called, The Bridge-End chapel, from its situation. For the keeping it, and the bridge, in repair, several rents were settled upon it (g). It had also an annual rent of 20s. from the noble family of Percy, Earls of Northumberland, for their house in Newcastle, called, Earl's Inn (b). Two chantries were founded in it, in honour of

St. Ann, and

St. Mary, the Blessed Virgin.

St. Ann's was founded by William Heron, who endowed it with an annual rent of fix marks, out of some tenements on the Sand-hill (i); valued, at the dissolution, at 4l. 17s.

St. Mary's was endowed with an annual rent of five marks, out of five messuages in the Clofe and Side; the founder unknown (k); valued, at the dissolution, at 4l. 3s. 6d.

Another chantery was founded in honour of St. Mary, by George Carr, merchant of this town, but never licenced. He settled an annual rent upon it out of some houses on the Sand-hill, and the Side; valued, at the dissolution, at 5l. 6s. 8d (l).

There are three cellars under the chapel. Gilbert de Mitford, a burghers of Newcastle, paid annually for the middle one 14s. at the feast of St. Martin, in the winter. It was confirmed to him 21 K. Edward III, 1347, by charter from William Spyn, then chaplain, and guardian of the alms for the support of Tyne-bridge, with the consent of the corporation; sealed with their seal, and signed by Peter Grasser, mayor, William de Acton, Hugh de Angerton, Hugh de Carliol, and John de Emildon, bailiffs (m).

St. Mary Magdalen's hospital has been annexed to it, which consists of a master and three poor brethren, free burgessees of Newcastle; each brother allowed 3l. 6s. 3d. per annum; the curate for reading prayers, and one sermon annually, 4l. 6s. 8d. the collector of the rents about 1l. 17s. 6d. the whole rental, 29l. 7s. 8d (n).

It was made a chapel of ease to St. Nicholas, 10th Sept. 1732, by the corporation; at whose expence it was then repaired, who allow very handsomely to a morning and afternoon preacher (o).

Cramlington-chapel is six or seven miles north-east from Newcastle; nothing about it remarkable.

All Saints church is at the foot of Pilgrim-street, on an eminence; its length, 55 yards, one foot; its breadth, 25 yards, two feet; a low square tower at the west end, with one spire rising from it; adorned with a clock, and six good bells, cast out of the statue of K. James II, standing formerly on the Sand-hill. In some of the windows were antiently several curious pourtraitures, painted on glass; one of our Blessed Lord, at full length, in the south-east window, at the east end of the chancel; his twelve Apostles, in the window next the porch-door, but one; the pious family of Roger Thornton, two sons, and three daughters, kneeling at altars, in the window above the south door, leading into the quire, towards the porch. Most of these were taken away, or defaced, in the late civil wars. At the west end of it is a handsome gallery, built in 1712; an organ in the middle; the north end accommodating the children of the charity-school. At the east end is another for the use of the Butchers. There is also one for the failors in the north isle, built by the Trinity-House, 1618, John Holburne then master; beautified with paintings; 1720, representing our Blessed Saviour asleep in the storm;—his taking St. Peter by the hand when he was sinking in the waves;—Jonah vomited up upon the dry land.

The chancel stands upon a large vault, of a square figure, and spacious; a strong pillar in it, the support of eight large stone-arches; the entrance on the north side of the church-yard. The altar-table is of marble, the donation of a person unknown. On the south side of it, is a Prothefes, or side-altar. The chancel is adorned with wainscot-stalls, after the cathedral manner.

Seven chanteries were founded in this church, in honour of

St. Mary, the Blessed Virgin ;	St. Catharine ;
St. John the Evangelist ;	St. Lya.
St. Peter.

St. Thomas's was founded by John Puthore, clerk; the annual value, 4l. 8s. 4d.

St. Mary's was founded by —; the annual value, 4l. 5s. 10d.

St. John the Evangelist's was founded by Richard Willisby and Richard Fishlake; the annual value, 4l. 15s. 4d.

St. Peter's was founded by Roger de Thornton; the royal licence granted, 13 K. Henry IV. (p) the annual value, 6l. It was in the St. Catharine's had the same pious founder, the annual value, 5l. 3s. 8d (q).

St. John the Baptist's was founded by John Ward; the annual value, 7l. 15s. 8d.

St. Lyra's was founded in the reign of K. Edward III. by Richard Pickering, the annual value, 3l. 8s. 4d.

The minister of this church is paid 4l. per annum by the vicar, and 5l. per annum by the crown. The rest of his income arises from the surplice-fees, register, &c. To lessen the weight of his parochial cares, an assistant was appointed, 1708, on the death of John Pinkney, one of the parish-clerks; it being then customary to have two. He is allowed the clerk's fees for weddings, burials, christnings, &c. reputed about 50*l. per annum*. Here are also two lecturers, allowed each 100*l. per annum* by the corporation. On the high festival of Easter, they antiently presented this church with 21 gallons of wine. The sacrament is administered every second Sunday in the month; prayers every day, at ten o'clock in the morning, and four in the afternoon.

St. Ann's chapel stands in the suburbs of Sand-gate, on the slope of a hill. After the reformation it was neglected and fell into decay. It was repaired, 1682. A lecturer was then appointed. He was to preach every Sunday-morning, and expound the catechism in the afternoon, for which he was allowed 30*l. per ann.* At present, it has two lecturers; one allowed 40*l.* and the other 50*l. per annum*, by the corporation; by whom it was lately rebuilt, after an elegant design.

In the same suburbs was antiently another chapel, dedicated to St. Laurence. It is said to have been built by one of the Earls of Northumberland. It was dependent upon the priory of St. John of Jerusalem. In consideration of 144*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* it was granted, among other things, to the corporation, 3 K. Edward VI (r). Out of the ruins of it, arose St. Laurence's bottle glass-house.

St.

St. Andrew's church stands near New-gate, on the west side of the street. From the stile of the architecture, and its situation, where old Monk-chester chiefly stood, it claims priority to the rest for antiquity. The old bells were taken down, 1726, and six new ones put in their place, by a contribution among the inhabitants, the corporation giving 50*l.* A new porch was built at the same time. At the west end is a handsome gallery, erected, 1711, at the expence of the parish.

Three chanteries were founded in it, in honour of

St. Mary, the Blessed Virgin;
The Holy Trinity;
St. Thomas.

St. Mary's was founded by —— the annual value, 6*l.* 12*s.* 10*d.*

The Holy Trinity is said to have been founded by Sir Adam de Atholl, Knt. whose remains, and the remains of his Lady, are interred in it; their funeral-monument bearing their effigies, and this inscription——*Hic jacent Dominus Adamarus de Atholl, miles, & D'na Maria, uxor ejus, quæ obiit quarto decimo die mensis——anno Domini millesimo tricentesimo——*animarum propitiatur. The annual value of Sir Adam's chantery was 4*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.*

St. Thomas's was founded by—— the annual value uncertain; a small part of its revenue in the possession of Sir Robert Brandling, at the dissolution.

The minister of this church receives annually from the vicar, 3*l.* from the crown, 5*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* and from the corporation, for being

being lecturer, 100*l.* The sacrament is administered every fourth Sunday in the month; prayers twice a week, on Wednesday and Friday, in the morning. The corporation formerly gave 10 gallons of wine to this church at the festival of Easter.

St. John's church is in the pleasant street of Westgate, by the vicarage-house. Some of its chief ornaments are derived from the liberal spirit of a pious tradesman, one of its parishioners, Mr. Robert Percival. He beautified the altar, 1710. He built, at the same time, the north gallery for thirty-three persons. On the taking down the three old bells, 1707, and procuring six new ones by subscription, he gave 3*l.* This was his liberality in his life-time. At his death, Feb. 8, 1729, he closed it with the donation of a house, in the wool-market, to his beloved parish, let at 20*l. per annum.* He was only a pin-maker by profession, but these benefactions reflect a lustre upon his memory, and shew, that he had an elevated soul, though he was of an inferior figure in the world.

The communion-plate was the gift of another of its pious friends, Mr. Robert Rymer. He gave a large flaggon, a chalice, and a salver, valued at 60*l.* 1722.

At the west end of the church is another gallery. It had an organ in 1570, which being a long time perished, a new one was lately erected at the expence of the inhabitants.

Three chantries were founded in this church, in honour of

St. Thomas the Martyr;

St. Mary, the Blessed Virgin;

The Holy Trinity.

St. Thomas's was founded in the reign of King Edward II, by Adam de Durham, a burghers of this town; the foundation-charter sealed with his seal, and signed by Richard de Emeldon, mayor; Thomas de Frismarisco, Richard de Acton, William de Burneton, Gilbert de Hankyn, Sir Nicholas Scot, Knt. Nicholas de Carliol, Peter Graper, &c. bailiffs; the annual value 4 l. 3 s. arising from some tene-ments in the Sand-hill, and in Westgate (s).

St. Mary's was founded in the reign of K. Edward III, by Edward Scot; the annual value 4 l. 4 s. 4 d.

The Holy Trinity was founded by John Dalton, William Akinshawe, and Andrew Acliffe, clerks; the annual value 5 l. 13 s. 4 d.

The minister of this church receives annually from the vicar, 3 l. from the crown, 5 l. and from the corporation, for being lecturer, 90*l*. The sacrament is administered every third Sunday in the month ; prayers three times a week, on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. At Easter, the corporation formerly gave 15 gallons of wine to this church.

The church-yard was inclosed by subscription, 1762, with stone, and a wooden pales, very neat ; and planted round, in the inside, with young lime and elm trees. The church tower is adorned with a clock.

I have only to observe, before I conclude this account of the churches in Newcastle, that four ministers placed in them by the parliament, conformed to the church of England at the Restoration, viz. Mr. Cole, Mr. Richard Prideaux, Mr. Ashburnham, and Dr. Knightbridge ; and that a fifth, Mr. George Long, A. M. for not conforming, was silenced, and ejected from his fellowship in Trinity-college, Cambridge (t).

The principal schools established in Newcastle, are

A free Grammar-School, and Four parochial Charity-Schools.

The grammar-school was originally founded by Thomas Horsley, mayor of Newcastle in 1525. He left to it by will his lands in the town, in perpetuum, after his own and his wife's death. It was refounded by Q. Elizabeth, as attested by her charter. The impropriated or great tithes of the parish of Bolham belong to it. The mastership of St. Mary's hospital was usually annexed to it by the corporation, who are the patrons. The masters have convenient apartments to live in, in the hospital, commonly called, The West Spittle, from its situation in West-gate.

The charity-school belonging to the parish of St. Nicholas, was founded by Mrs. Eleanor Allen, a widow-gentlewoman of Newcastle. By a deed of gift, bearing date Feb. 20, 1705, she assigned a farm-hold and tenant-right in the parish of Walls-End, held under the dean and chapter of Durham, of above the annual value of 60*l.* for the education of 40 boys and 20 girls of this parish, and the chapelry of St. John. The school was opened 1709. Another gentlewoman, the widow of the Rev. Mr. Chisholm, vicar of Wooler, at her death gave 500*l.* to this generous and useful charity. By a parochial subscription, begun 1718, they are annually cloathed, May 1. The boys are instructed in reading, writing, and accompts, and then put to some honest business; receiving each a Bible and a Common-prayer-book, the Whole Duty of Man, Lewis's Exposition of the Church-Catechism, and 2*l.* The girls are taught reading, sewing, and knitting, and are put out to reputable services, or trades. They are presented with the same good books, and 1*l.* The school-master is allowed 25*l. per annum*, and 1*l.* for coals; the school-mistress, 10*l. per annum*, and 10*s.* for coals.

The charity-school belonging to the parish of All Saints is supported by subscription, begun 1709. It is conducted on the same plan, receiving 41 boys, and 17 girls.

The charity-school belonging to the parish of St. Andrew, was founded by Sir William Blacket, Bart. for 30 boys; opened in January, 1707-8; the school-master allowed 20*l. per annum*, paying school-rent.

The charity-school belonging to the parish of St. John, was founded, 1705, by John Ord, Esq; for 44 boys. He settled upon it a large field without Pilgrim-street-gate, called Magdalen-clofe, and held by lease of St. Mary Magdalen's hospital. Mrs. Margaret Allgood, a widow-gentlewoman, gave to this excellent charity 100*l.* her will bearing date, 15th July, 1707. They are clothed annually at midsummer, by subscription. The school-master is allowed 24*l. per annum*, and for learning them to sing, 2*l.* and for pens, ink, and paper, 16*s. per annum*.

The public buildings of note in this town, are

The Castle ;	The Hospital for Merchant's
The Bridge over the Tyne ;	Widows, &c.
The Town-Court ;	The Barber-Surgeon's Hall ;
The Trinity-House ;	The Hospital for poor Maidens, &c.
The State-house of the Cor- poration ;	The Keelmen's Hospital ;
The Freemen's Hospital ;	The Infirmery .

The castle belongs to the county of Northumberland. Several tenements and lands in the county were held by keeping it in repair (u). It stands on an eminence ; was antiently strong and stately ; the principal entrance to the south ; encompassed with two walls of great strength and height ; in the exterior wall, 4 gates ; one large, with two port-cullices ; the ground within this wall, 3 acres, and one rod. In the castle was a well of a considerable depth; and a chapel of a handsome Gothic architecture. The great Barons, Heron, Delaval, Clavering, Bolbeck, Bertram of Bothal, Ros, Gaugy, Clifford, and Dilston, had each a house within its liberties for its defence. The government of it was generally committed to the high sheriff of Northumberland. At the accession of K. James I, one third of it was almost taken away; the lead and covering embezzled and carried off; the square, old tower miserably decayed and fractured; the malefactors confined in it in danger of perishing by the weather; the expence of repairing it computed at 809 l. 15s. The poor remains of it are decently kept, and serve for the county-jail, and for holding the annual assizes.

The Bridge over the Tyne is of great antiquity. From the vestiges of a military way leading to it from Chester-le-street, it is believed to have been originally Roman. It had the misfortune to be destroyed by fire, 33 K. Henry III; being then of wood. It was rebuilt of stone by contribution; for which indulgences were granted by Sewald, Archbishop of York, Walter Bishop of Durham, Walter Bishop of Rocheſter, &c. some giving lands, as Adam de Jeſſmont; the witnesses to the grant, Gilbert Delaval, Adam de Pleſſy, Gilbert de Ogle, William de Byker, &c. It had twelve bold arches. It has now only nine; the rest, on building the key, were turned into cellars or store-rooms. Several tradesmen have their houses and shops on each side of it. About the middle of it is an old tower, used by the magistrates for the confinement of disorderly persons and offenders, beyond which is a blue stone, the boundary between Newcastle and Gateſhead; and at the other end is another tower, where has been a draw-bridge. That part of it, to the south of the blue stone, was recovered from the corporation, 4 K. Henry V, 1416, by Thomas Langley, bishop of Durham, as attested by a letter of attorney made by his lordship to several persons commissioned to take possession of it; which was done in the presence of several gentlemen, worthy to be remembered for the sake of their posterity, being persons of good credit and antiquity, viz. "John Lumlie, Ralph Eure, Robert Hilton, William Fulthrop, William Tempest, Thomas Surtees, Robert Coniers, William Claxton, Sheriff of Durham; Robert de Ogle, John Bertram, John Widdrington, and John Middleton, knights, of Northumberland; Christopher Horsley, William Osmunderlow, knights, of Westmorland; and also in the presence of these Esquires, Robert Hilton, Robert Eure, William Bowes, John Coniers, William Lambton the elder, John de Morden, William Lambton the younger, Hugh Burunghill, John Britly, William Bellingham, Robert Bellasis, Henry Tailbois; Thomas Garbois, John de Hutton, Thomas Cooke of Fishburne, and five others (v)."

This

This part of the bridge was repaired by Thomas Ruthal, Bishop of Durham, famous in the reigns of K. Henry VII, VIII; not only for being the richest subject then in Britain, but for the unfortunate mistake he made in delivering the book of his own private affairs to the aspiring cardinal Wolsey, instead of one he had wrote on the state of the kingdom by the desire of his sovereign, whereby the cardinal effected his ruin, and stept into his bishoprick. A misfortune this, worthy of notice, and shews how God Almighty, by the slightest means, does punish us, when we are less faithful and diligent in his service, than that of men, and more concerned how to get rich and great in this world, than to discharge our duty. For this Bishop Ruthal, being a privy counsellor to K. Henry VIII, was so studious of obliging that king, and so assiduously attendant on the court, that he could find but little time to attend on the weighty affairs of his bishoprick; so when he most needed self-recollection, and presence of mind (divine gifts!) God left him to his own strength, and gave his bishoprick to another (w).

The Town-Court is on the south side of the Sand-hill, on the banks of the Tyne. Its original foundation was by that munificent patron of Newcastle, Roger de Thornton. It was rebuilt by the corporation, 1638, after a design suitable to the dignity of that opulent body. It cost upwards of 10,000 l. besides 1200 l. the donation of one of the magistrates (x). The effigies of K. James II, on horse-back, placed in the area before it, cost 1700 l. It was of copper, large as the life; the horse standing upon his hind-feet, raised upon a pedestal of white marble, encompassed with iron-rails; pulled down 1688.

The Trinity-House belonging to the mariners of Newcastle is a monastic-like building, of a square figure, accommodated with a neat chapel, and with chambers for 14 persons, allowed each eight shillings a month, coals and cloathing. The hall in it is large and stately. It was antiently called Dalton's Place. It was purchased by this society, 20 K. Henry VII, of Ralph Hebburn, of Hebburn-Tower, in Northumberland, Esq; and was confirmed to them by his son, Thomas Hebburn, Esq; paying to him and his heirs for ever the compliment of a bottle of wine annually, if demanded, in June, on the eve of St. Peter and St. Paul. He was also to be made a member, to be intitled to their privileges, and to have the usual funeral-honours at his death. The writing was sealed with the town-seal, and signed by the mayor, and the rest of the magistrates. The society keep it in repair, at their own charge. It stands very convenient for seamen, near the key, in the upper end of a well-built street, called The Broad Chare.

The mariners of Newcastle are distinguished in our annals for their bravery by sea, and their gallant behaviour in the national service. In the reign of K. Edward III, 1335, they were called out on a naval expedition to Scotland, and burnt the town of Dundee (y). In company with the mariners of Hull, 4 K. Richard II, 1380, they took a Scotch pirate; the goods in the ship valued at 7000 marks (z).

They were honoured with a charter, 3 K. James I; with another, 17th Oct. 16 K. Charles II, 1664; with a third, 26th July, 3 K. James II, 1687.

The State-House of the corporation is on the edge of the Tyne, above the bridge, in a street called The Close. It is a modern building, very handsome, with an area or court before it, entered by a flight of steps; within, not only convenient, but elegant, corresponding with the grandeur and hospitality kept in it.

The Freeman's Hospital, commonly called The Town's Hospital in the Manours, is on the north side of a pleasant field. It was founded by the corporation, 1681, and dedicated to the Holy Jesus; for a master, and 39 poor freemen or their widows; the master allowed 1 l. 10*s.* and the rest 1 l. a quarter each. It stands upon piazzas, the entrance in the middle, with a handsome fountain before it. Near the foot of the same field, is

The Hospital for the relief of six widows of merchants and clergymen, built by the corporation, 1725, and endowed by Mrs. Ann Davison, the relict of Mr. Benjamin Davison, merchant.

The Hall belonging to the Barber-Surgeons is on the east side of the same field. It was rebuilt after a neat design, 1730. It stands upon tall piazzas, with a garden before it, adorned with some pieces of statuary, the effigies of those antient fathers of medicine, Esculapius, Hippocrates, Galen, and Paracelsus. Hard by is

The Hospital for six poor maiden-women, and six poor men, built by the corporation, 1753, after receiving a donation of 1200 l. of Thomas Davidson, of Ferry-Hill, in the bishoprick of Durham, Esq; and his two sisters; and the like sum from Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. for its endowment.

The Keelmen's Hospital is between the Carpenter's tower and Sandgate. It was built, 1701, at their own charge, by contribution, paying, each man, 1 penny a tide. It is a large, square structure, containing upwards of 50 chambers; but is at present neglected, to the great misfortune of the aged among that numerous and laborious people.

The Infirmary is behind the street of West-gate. It was built by subscription for the benefit of the town and county of Newcastle, and the two counties of Northumberland and Durham. It had a donation of 1000 l. from Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. 1759; by whose appointment the annual interest of 10 l. is given to a clergyman to attend it. It is a large handsome building, in a pleasant airy situation, in a field, called The Forth; said to have been given to the corporation by K. Edward III (a), containing eleven acres, as surveyed by order of parliament, 1649, and then valued at 12 l. per annum; part of which is a square bowling-green, terraced round, and shaded with tall elms, much resorted to in the hours of leisure by the admirers of rural objects.

Subscriptions have been lately set on foot for the support of a Lying-in-hospital, and of an Hospital for Lunatics; which will undoubtedly meet with a generous encouragement, in a country thus distinguished by acts of humanity and beneficence.

Besides these public structures, there are some private ones revered for their antiquity, remarkable for having been the palaces or temporary residence of persons of royal or baronial dignity. In Panden is a house, called,

Panden-Hall, which was the palace of the kings of Northumberland under the Saxon heptarchy. In that part of the town, called The Side, is an antient house, an appendix to the castle, which was the palace of the kings of England, in which they resided in their expeditions against Scotland (b). It is now called,

Lumley-place, from its being afterwards the residence of the Lords Lumley, of Lumley-castle. In Newgate-street is an antient house, called,

The Scotch Inn, from its being the quarters of the kings and nobility of Scotland, in the time of truce with that kingdom; also, The Earl's Inn, from its belonging to the Earls of Northumberland (c). In the street, called The Clofe, on the banks of the Tyne, is an antient house, with a great gate before it, called,

Northumberland-House, from its being formerly the property and occasional residence of the Earls of Northumberland. In Westgate, near St. Mary's Hospital, is a house, called,

Westmorland-Place, which belonged to the Nevills, Earls of Westmorland. In Pilgrim-street is a house, called,

The Pilgrim's Inn, from the great crowd of religious devotees which frequented it, in their way to the shrine of the Virgin Mary in the village of Jes-mont, i. e. the Mount of Jesus. In the same street, at the upper end, and on the west side, is

The house of Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. an antient building, the remains of the Franciscan priory, to which have been added two new wings. A large print of it, and of part of the town, was published some years ago.

Thus much of the principal buildings in Newcastle. I shall now take notice of the most remarkable State-transactions and Occurrences in it.

John Baliol did homage for his crown of Scotland to K. Edward I, in the great hall of his palace on the Side in this town, above-mentioned, December 26, 1292, with great solemnity; and by the advice of the parliament at Westminster, K. Edward fixed the fees, for want of a precedent, at 20 l. sterling, for his vassalage, double the sum paid by an earl on the like account (d).

K. Edward II, for the preservation of his minion, Pierce Gaveston, retired with him to this town, 1310, from which, on the approach of the incensed Barons, under the Earl of Lancaster, called Contrarians and Ordainers, they took shipping at Tynemouth for Scarborough, where Gaveston surrendered himself to Lord Percy (e), and not to the Earl of Pembroke, as affirmed in many of our histories.

A peace was concluded at Newcastle, 1323, about Ascension-day, by the commissioners of K. Edward II, and of Robert Bruce, King of Scotland, for 13 years; the names of the English commissioners, Adomar Earl of Pembroke, and Hugh de Spenser, junr. lord high chamberlain, &c. of the Scots, the Bishop of St. Andrews, the Earl of Murrey, &c. (f).

The whole militia of England, by the advice of the parliament held at Lincoln, were ordered to rendezvous at Newcastle, 8 K. Edward II, 1315, fifteen days after midsummer; every village in the kingdom sending one stout man, (cities and boroughs not excepted) furnished with armour, swords, bows, arrows, slings, lances, &c. and with travelling-money, and wages at 4d. a day, during the expedition, which was then directed against the Scots (g).

K. Edward III, kept his Whitfuntide at Newcastle with great state and magnificence, 1333, where, June following, Edward Baliol did homage to him for his crown of Scotland in the presence of a splendid circle of lords and gentlemen of the two nations, to hold it for ever of the English crown; making a formal surrender at the same time of part of his kingdom bordering upon England, viz. Berwick, Roxbrough, Pebles, Haddington, Edinburgh, Jedworth with the castle and forest, and the forests of Selkirk and Etberick (h); the instrument bearing date, 12 June.

The two kings were both at Newcastle, about Midsummer, 1334, at the head of a powerful army, in their march for Scotland; the English monarch taking the rout of Carlisle, and Edward Baliol the rout to Berwick, with his kinsmen, the Earl of Surrey and Arundel, and Lord Henry Percy, a Baron, says the record, of great might and power (i).

K. Edward III. came to Newcastle, 1336, in his way to Scotland, big with the thoughts of conquest, both of the Scots, and the French, their confederates, under Baliol, whom he met at St. John's Town, or Perth; first issuing out a writ, dated at this town, June 20, 1336, for the Archbishop of Canterbury, high chancellor of England, the Bishop of Lincoln, treasurer, the Earl of Cornwall, his brother, to hold the parliament at Northampton in his stead (k).

The conventions between the English and Scotch commissioners for the liberty of David Bruce, King of Scotland, were dated at Newcastle, 13 July, 1354 (l).

In the unhappy differences between K. Charles I. and his parliament, Newcastle was besieged by the Scots, under the command of General Lesley, 1643; the Marquis of Newcastle then governor for the King. The Marquis burnt 100 houses in the suburbs. He made a sally, but was repulsed, and one of the out-works was taken. It was hard pressed both on the north and south side at once, the Scots dividing their army, 1500 of them crossing the Tyne. General Lesley retiring, it was besieged again the next year by the Scots under the command of the Earls of Candler and Leven, who got possession of the bridge, the inhabitants retiring to the high town for shelter; 3000 countrymen being summoned by General Leven to assist him with spades, mattocks, &c. It was taken by storm. The mayor, Sir John Merlay, retired to the castle, with three Scotch Lords, Crawford, Rea, and Maxwell, 500 men, and many women and children. He surrendered it on condition of saving their lives, Oct. 29. The three Scotch Lords were sent into Scotland to take their trial. Most of the townsmen saved their effects by composition. An order came for the trial of the mayor by a council of war. Some of the aldermen were disfranchised, the corporation was new modelled, not according to their charter, but as might best suit the views of the parliament. Their member, Sir Henry Anderson, Kt. was expelled the house, for non-attendance, and joining the royal army. John Blakeston, Esq; was chosen in his room, who signed the warrant for beheading his sovereign. Robert Ellifson, of Helbarne, Esq; was his fellow-member, chosen in the place of — Warmouth, Esq; not suffered to take his seat after his election. The plague was at the same time in the town, and coals were at a high price by a parliamentary impost of 4s. per chaldron for the maintenance of the garrison, and shipping them off to the sick and starving metropolis. For the relief of the town-poor, they ordered 500 l. to be raised upon coals, 1645. They had the honour of the King's presence, 1646, who came from Lumley-castle, and lodged with the Scotch General Leven in the Franciscan abbey, where his faithful and loyal subjects were not suffered to approach him. A sermon was preached before him by the Scotch metropolitan, says Lord Clarendon (m), who was so little touched with the presence of suffering majesty, and had so small a portion of the grace of modesty, that after his discourse was ended, he called for the 52d Psalm, which begins, — Why dost thou, tyrant, boast thyself, thy wicked works to praise. His majesty that moment stood up, and called for the 56th Psalm, which begins, Have mercy, Lord, on me, I pray, for men would me devour. The congregation sung his majesty's.

Of the town, and the neighbouring counties, the Scots raised 8000 l. a month, before the arrival of his majesty, and 9000 l. a month afterwards, upon pain of military execution; which caused an abundance of the inhabitants to leave their homes. To engage the Scots to return to their native kingdom, the parliament agreed to give them 200,000 l. to be raised by the sale of the bishop's lands. One half was paid at Topcliff, and the other after their leaving Newcastle; except 40,000 l. lost by their defection, and changing sides.

I have only two things more extraordinary on record to mention concerning Newcastle.

It was almost wholly consumed by Fire, 33 K. Henry III. 1249 (n).

It had a great misfortune by Water, 13 K. Edward III. 1339; being surprized in the still hours of the night with a rapid, impetuous flood, which made its way through the town-wall, bore down six perches of it, and swept away above 120 persons, both men and women, who on their going to bed, had not the least expectation of any such disaster (o). These were alarming and astonishing accidents to this antient town, which might be intended by a wise providence to preserve their more valuable stores and acquisitions, to rouse and awaken the slumbering virtues of some, to keep alive and cherish those of others, and to make all intent upon internal excellence and perfection, before the tinsel elegance, and fleeting embellishments of life.

We now pass through Panden-gate, by the course of the Pict's-wall on the right hand, over the hill and village of Panden, cross the Ouse-burn by a new stone-bridge of one arch, and entering the Shield's road, ascend the hill through the turnpike-gate for about a quarter of a mile, when a road branches off, on the left hand, from a porter's lodge, to Heaton (p); a mediety of the manour of which was held of the Barony of Guagy, by Sir Ralph Lawfon, Knt. 10 Q. Elizabeth (q), and now belongs to Sir Harry Lawfon, Bart. The other mediety was in the possession of John Mitford, of Seghill, Esq; 10 Q. Elizabeth (r), and of his son Robert Mitford, Esq; 14 K. Charles I; and is now in the possession of Matthew Ridley, Esq; a younger branch of the antient family of the Ridleys of Willimotefswick (s), a representative in parliament for Newcastle upon Tyne, and father of Sir Matthew White Ridley, of Blaigdon, Bart. His seat is at the south end of the village, modern, and handsome. Before the south front is a large park-like enclosure, small clumps of young forest-trees, extending to the Shield's road, which is in sight; also an artificial ruin on the hill at Biker. On the south-west and west side, are shrubberies, flower-borders, and groves of trees, with a tempiato.

From the porter's lodge, we go by an easy ascent for a quarter of a mile to Biker-hill, where a road branches off to the village of

Biker, the manour of which was held by grand Serjancy, by carrying the king's Writs between the rivers Tyne and Coquet, and making distresses of goods for the king's debts, and keeping and disposing of them for his use; by which service it was held by Long Benton, a pleasant village, one of the manours of the Barony of Morpeth (e). The church stands near a quarter of a mile north-east from it. It was given, with certain lands in the parish, to Baliol-college, in Oxford, by Sir Philip Somerville, of Wickmore, in Staffordshire, for the perpetual maintenance of six scholars.

We now leave the two Bentons, and continue our course on the Shield's road about a mile, when a neat winding road branches off on the right hand, to

Carr-vill, once the seat of the Cosen's, the Ewbanks's, of Sir Wilfrid Lawson, of Braiton-Hall, in Cumberland; Bart. father of Sir Gilfrid, of Mr. Carr, brother of William Carr, of Etall, Esq; and now of Mrs. Proctor. It bore the name of Cosens's House, till new-named Carr-vill, by Mr. Carr, who rebuilt it, to which Mrs. Proctor hath added new ornaments and conveniences.

In a field adjoining, to the east of it, sloping to the Tyne, called, The Well-Laws, belonging to Matthew Waters, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq; is the ruin of a Roman villa and fort; the latter in the usual form, a parallelogram; the last garrison the Romans had at this end of the wall; the river serving for a defence to Tynemouth, being navigable for their Naves lusoriæ, or light frigates, destined for scouring the coasts, and chastizing prædatory rovers. The eminent antiquaries, Roger Gale, Esq; Dr. Hunter, Gordon, and Horsley, have assigned it the name of Segedunum, garrisoned by the first cohort of the Lergi. It seems to be derived from the Roman Seges, corn, and the British Dunum, a hill, i. e. the fort or station on a high ground, furnished with magazines of corn, brought by sea from the more southern provinces, and landed here. I have frequently after high tides observed large, well-wrought, ashler stones lying on the shore of the river at the foot of this field, the scattered ruins probably of a key. By the large ruins of foundations discovered by the plow, it has been a station of eminence, bidding fairer for being a capital town, than Richard of Cirencester's northern alpine frontier of Rocheſter; better suited to the Roman taste and elegance; fitted for pleasure and commerce.

In the walls of the old seat of Carr-vill, some Roman stones, with inscriptions, were discovered by Mr. Horsley, and published (f).

On the other side of the Shield's road, nearly opposite to Carr-vill, a road branches off to the village of Wall's-End, so called from its situation by the end of the Pict's Wall. It was given, with the village of Willington, on an eminence, a mile to the north-east of it, to the monks of Durham, 16 K. William I, 1082, by William de Carilepho, Bishop of that See (g).

It is a well-built village; a large grass area in the center, with a neat raised causeway through it; two gentlemen's seats on each side, with excellent gardens; the most rural and romantic, those of James Moncafter, Esq; a winding streamlet taking its course between two terraced slopes, and forming a canal, with a bridge over it.

At the east end of the village, is a neat brick-structure, consisting of two large rooms; the lower one serving for a school, and the other for a master to dwell in; the donation of the eldest sister of James Moncafter, Esq; to the parish.

The church is on an eminence, at a small distance from the village, to the north-east; the ascent to it steep, by stone-steps.

A mile east from it, a road branches off through a gate on the right hand, to Howden-Pans, a populous village in the same parish, so called from the salt-pans in it, and its situation under a hill, in the Den or valley; How signifying a hill. It stands almost close to the river Tyne, on whose banks is a fine key for the shipping to heave their ballast, of near a quarter of a mile in length, commonly called Willington-key, from the Ostium of Willington-burn at the west end. A dock, a ropery, and a smithery, at this place, furnish employment for upwards of 100 people. The dock holds two ships.

Near three miles farther east, the Shields road makes a flexure on the right hand by a gradual descent to the town of

North

North Shields (b), so called from its northern situation by the river Tyne, and being a Shield or shelter for the shipping. In the days of K. Edward I, it was so small, that it consisted only of six cottages, inhabited by fishermen. It is now so populous, that it resembles Wapping by the river Thames.

A little below it is a garrison, called,

Clifford's Fort, which was taken by the Scots, 20 K. Charles I, 1644, and in it five pieces of ordnance, arms, powder, and some prisoners, nine Scotchmen killed on that occasion. It is a strong and handsome stone-building, well mounted with cannon; from which we ascend a hill by a large square building, of a late erection, called,

The Barracks, furnished with soldiers, and with artillery next the harbour; and come to the pleasant, marine villa of Tynemouth (i), famous for its monastery founded by Oswald, King of Northumberland, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin (k). It was plundered by the Danish rovers in three several descents or expeditions; first towards the end of the eighth century (l), and next under Hinguar and Hubba in the reign of K. Ethelred, and lastly in the reign of K. Athelstan. What made them the more intent upon ravaging the monasteries was, the most valuable effeets in the country were usually concealed in them on the approach of an enemy, for their better security. But covetousness has no reverence for sacred things. The poor defenceless monks, on the descent of the thievish and murdering troops of Hinguar and Hubba, fled in a fright to save themselves in their church. The merciless enemy set fire to it, and burnt them and it to the ground (m). A just providence, ever awake to the cries of innocent blood, did not let theirs go unpunished. Rouzed at the news of such an atrocious deed, their sovereign, K. Ethelred, and his father-in-law, Offa, King of Mercia, with their united forces drove them in confusion and hurry to their ships, and a storm arising, they were wrecked on the rocks, and almost all drowned.

This holy fabric laid in its ashes, unrepaired, forlorn, and desolate, till the reign of K. Edward the Confessor. Then Toston, Earl of Northumberland, from the motive of ambition, and not of piety, rebuilt and endowed it for Black Canons, to the honour of St. Mary, and St. Oswin, Bishop Aiden's favourite, whose remains had been searched for, and discovered, under its ruins.

That Earl being banished for his many murders and outrages, after several very cruel adventures, burning and plundering the coast as an enemy's country, at length engaged Harold Harfagar, King of Norway, who was then pushing his conquests in the north of Scotland, to enter this harbour of Tynemouth, and make a bold push for the crown of his own brother, K. Harold II. Not awed by the sight of his new foundation of St. Mary and St. Oswin, he in concert with the Norwegian, plundered and wasted the country on both sides the river Tyne. They then put to sea again, and entered the Humber. There they landed and committed horrid barbarities. A body of forces marched to oppose them under the Generals Edwin and Morchar. These they routed. At Stanford-bridge, near York, they were checked in their career by King Harold himself. The two armies were about equal, each reckoned 60,000, and two such great ones had never been seen to engage in England before. With such astonishing ardour did the enemy contend for victory, that a single soldier for a considerable while, defended the pass at the bridge against the whole English army. Thus animated by his valour, his countrymen fought most desperately, from seven in the morning till three in the afternoon, but their King and Toston falling, and the flower of their troops slain, King Harold obtained a compleat, but bloody victory. Of the whole army that entered the Tyne, under the sacred walls of this monastery, in 500 ships, 20 vessels served to carry home the survivors to Norway, with their young Prince Olaus, by leave from King Harold. On the credit of Adam Bremenſe, it is said, that the spoil of the enemy consisted of as much gold as twelve young men could with difficulty carry on their shoulders.

Up to the time of its first foundation by King Oswald, this religious house preserved its independency, till the time of Toston's brother-in-law, King William the Norman. He was then degraded to a cell. It was first made subject to Benedict Bishop's foundation at Girsey: next to Bishop Carilepho's at Durham; and lastly to St. Alban's in Hertfordshire (n). This was done by three governors or Earls of Northumberland, Walteof, Alberic, and Robert Mowbray (o).

Walteof pretended it was an unfit place for devotion, by its being — nimis religiosus horridus et incultus — situated on a frightful precipice, and a noisy tumultuous shore; but in reality it was to erect a fortress within its precincts, by the order of his sovereign, who had no regard for religion. Robert Mowbray's motive was of a very low kind. He bore a grudge to the Bishop of Durham, and thought to mortify him by that arbitrary act (p). But he afterwards took sanctuary at that very altar, which he thus dishonoured, for treason, and under it, if I may so speak, interred all his honours, forfeiting by that rash act 280 fiefs, left him by his uncle the Bishop of Constance.

The prior and canons of Tynemouth had 27 villas in Northumberland belonging to them, with their royalties; viz. Tynemouth, Milnton, Shields, East Chirton, East Preston, Monkton, Whitley, Murton, Eresdon, Backworth, Seghill, Wolfsington, Diffington, Elswick, Wylam, Hertford, Cowpon, Bebside, Welden, Hauxley, Ambell, Eglingham, Bewick, Lilburn, Flatworth, Middle Chirton, West Chirton. Within these lordships they returned the king's writs (q); and were exempt from cornage (r).

They had also the lands of Royeley and Denum.

They had the tithes of Corbridge, Ovington, Wylam, Newburn, Diffington, Callerton, Elswick, Bothall, Warkworth, Ambell, Rothbury,

They had all pensions. The site of the priory and most of the lands were granted, 5 K. Edward VI, to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland (s); but by his attainder in the next reign reverted to the crown, in which they remained, 10 Q. Elizabeth (t).

The manour of Tynemouth is now in the possession of his Grace, Hugh, Duke of Northumberland.

The priory-church appears by its ruins to have been a most magnificent structure. At the east end is an oratory very entire, eighteen feet long, nine feet broad, and nine feet high; the roof arched with stone, with sculptures in relief of the Blessed Virgin, and the twelve apostles.

The gate-way, with a tower over it, belonging to the priory, is still standing.

It is so far from being an unfit place for devotion, that few can exceed it for presenting the mind with a variety of solemn objects, capable of raising it to an adoration and awful reverence of the Deity. The very precipice it stands on, lofty and almost perpendicular, whose semicircular base withstands the fury of the waves, must have inspired the religious with a firm reliance on him who is the Rock of ages. The calms, the storms, the ships, must all by turns have furnished them with occasions to praise him, whose wonders are seen in the great deep.

On its being converted to a fortress, it was called Tynemouth-castle. It was besieged and taken by the Scots, 20 K. Charles I, 1644. Thirty-eight pieces of ordnance, and store of arms, ammunition, and provisions, fell into their hands. The garrison were allowed to march out with their baggage, and obliged to submit to all the injunctions of the parliament. Six prisoners made their escape by letting themselves down through a privy-house with ropes and several sheets tied together, under the favour of a violent storm of wind. The sum of 5000*l.* was ordered by the parliament to repair it, and the works at Newcastle, the town-walls, bridge, and garrison. Colonel Henry Lilburn was made governor of it, who being weary of their service, declared, with the lieutenant-colonel, and most of the garrison, for the king; on the news of which at Newcastle, Sir Arthur Hazelrigge immediately marched against them from that town, of which he was governor, with a body of forces. For want of competent ladders, they entered the port-holes of the castle in the face of the cannon playing upon them, and after a smart encounter retook it. Colonel Lilburn, and many others, were slain. The rest received quarter.

On the north-east side of the ruins of the priory-church, is a large house, built by Colonel Henry Villiers, governour of Tynemouth, by leave from the crown; who also had power to erect a light house, and to receive 1*s.* for every English, and 6*d.* for every foreign ship, anchoring in the harbour of Shields, which brought

So like their features, that their parents look
On either face, but each for each mistook.
Puzzled, yet pleas'd, they gaz'd on either child,
And fondly on the dear delusion smil'd. Pitt.

Sir Francis was created knight of the bath, or of the Holy Trinity, as it was antiently called, at the coronation of his present Majesty, K. George III; being first made a knight batchelor, then knighted by the King with the sword of state, and presented with the red ribbon, and medal of three crowns, with the inscription on the exergue, Tria juncta in uno, in allusion to the union of the three kingdoms, England, Scotland, and Ireland; the old inscription, till the coronation of K. James I, being Tria numina juncta in uno, in allusion to the Holy Trinity. He is a representative in parliament for the borough of Andover. His seat of Seaton Delaval is modern, after a design of Sir John Vanbrough's, the celebrated architect of Blenheim, in Oxfordshire; no remains of the old baronial castle now visible. When finished, it will be a perfect quadrangle, each side 220 feet. The main entrance is to the north, into a lofty and stately hall, above which is a gallery.

lery. In the niches of the wall are six handsome sculptured female figures, representing the sciences, with their symbols, viz. astronomy, architecture, and sculpture, on one side; and on the other, geography, painting, and music; the floor of the hall of black and white marble. Before the south front, is a grass-lawn, edged with plantations; and beyond it, a spacious avenue, with shady walks on each side; a swimming-bath about mid-way; terminated by an obelisk; the ancient ruin of Tynemouth-priory, and the ocean being in sight. To the north, it has a prospect of about sixty miles, the mountain of Cheviot being visible on a clear day. To the east, through several openings in little groves, are seen pieces of statuary; also a riding-house, large and spacious; and a garden, very handsome, with a conservatory or green-house; and that magnificent object the sea, every breaking wave of which is, if I may so speak, a cascade, uttering with its solemn voice the tremendous majesty, wisdom and power, of the great Jehovah. This gives Seaton-Delaval an air of dignity and grandeur, which Blenheim must ever despair of having for want of it. To the west, is an avenue, a mile and a quarter in length, and an obelisk about half-way. Hard by, is the family-chapel in a grove. By the entrance, on the right hand, is an effigies in stone of one of the family who made the crusade, recumbent, and in armour, his legs a-crofs, his feet resting on a lyon, his hands elevated. Opposite to him, on the left hand, is another of a lady, recumbent also, and her hands elevated.

A mile from Seaton-Delaval is the sea-port and fishing-town of

Hartley, which in the reign of King John was held of the Barony of Gaugy by Adam de Jesmont (x); and a mediety of it by Sir

It is a well-built and improving marine villa, populous and industrious, on a bold and rocky shore; the harbour to the north of it, by a spacious sandy bay. Four great works are carrying on at it; a coal-work, a salt-work, a copperas-work, and a glass-work; the latter a handsome building, 220 feet in front, the side-walls to the roof 36 feet, the property of Thomas Delaval, Esq; fourth brother to Sir Francis and Sir John.

Near the 6th mile-stone, a road branches off, on the right hand to Bedlington, a large, well-built, and pleasant villa on an eminence, the manour of which belongs to the See of Durham, as part of the patrimony of St. Cuthbert, including all that space on the sea-coast between the rivers Blyth and Wansbeck, known by the name of Bedlingtonshire (a). Out of every plow-land in this manour, the hospital of St. Giles, near Durham, received a thrave of corn, for the relief of poor strangers and travellers, till it was agreed to pay nine shillings in lieu of it at a certain time, within fifteen days after the feast of St. Michael, and in case of failure to pay ten shillings (b).

Morpeth,

Morpeth, a well-built borough-town upon the river Wansbeck, a contraction of Woden's-Beck, encompassed almost with little pleasant hills, on whose brows are plantations of fir, beach, and elms. It is supposed to have its name from More-path, or the road through the More or Moor. Under the Saxons and Danes it made no figure. Under the first Normans it rose in dignity superior to a villa; being then erected into an honour, and stiled the Barony of Morpeth, or the Barony of Merlay, from its possessors. To Ralph, son of Roger, de Merlay, K. Henry I. gave in marriage Julian the daughter of Cospatrick, Earl of Dunbar, with the Lordships and villas of Witton, Horsley, Stanton, Ritton, Wyndgates, and Liverchild (s); which were confirmed by her brother Edgar (t).

the prosperity of his borough of Morpeth. He confirmed all its privileges. Under his patronage and influence an hospital was built at Catchburn. He was interred at the entrance of the priory-church at New-Minster (y).

By the charter of the third Roger Lord Merlay, the burgeses of Morpeth, and their successors, were freed from all taxes, subsidies, or contributions, except on the king's account, in military expeditions for the public defence, on the marriage of the lord's eldest son or daughter, or for his own redemption out of prison. By the same charter, the Prizes raised by his officers and servants, or those of his successors, on bread and beer, and other things, were assigned to the creditors within the borough, to be paid within forty days. Such of them as were not paid within that time, were enjoined to remain easy till they could be paid. The lord was at liberty, in the mean time, to make other Prizes, at his pleasure. His Prize for beer in the whole year was three gallons, valued at one penny. Their accustomed common-right, pasturage, and other conveniences, were confirmed to them and their successors, and way-leave granted to and from the town, corn-fields and meadows only excepted. He gave them liberty of pasture on his stubbles of Wenberlaw, to the west of the town, between New-Minster priory and the foss or ditch of the west park; reserving to himself and his heirs the catage of them for 15 days after the corn was carried off. If their cattle were taken among corn or in the meadows, they made reparation according to the season of the year. He granted and confirmed to them and their successors most of the unoccupied ground, which was their ancient market-place, with an injunction to build stalls for the use of butchers and those that sold fishes; and a prohibition for any of their goods to be sold before the hour of nine o'clock, and in no other part of the town, except in gross or by wholesale; his lordship reserving to himself and his successors a power to build upon any of his lands wherein he had granted a right of common to the corporation. William Howard, third son of Thomas Duke of Norfolk. His Lordship had a large estate in this county (x). He resided at his castle of Naward, in Gilfland; wherein he had a good library, furnished with some valuable manuscripts of English history and heraldry. He published an edition of Florence of Worcester. His grandson, Charles, was created Lord Dacre of Gilfland, Viscount Morpeth, and Earl of Carlisle. He was vice-admiral of the coasts of Northumberland, Cumberland, the Bishoprick of Durham, and the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne. He was Lord Lieutenant of the counties of Cumberland and Westmorland. He was governor of Jamaica, privy counsellor to K. Charles II, and his ambassador extraordinary to the Czar of Muscovy, and the Kings of Sweden and Denmark, in the years 1663, 1664. He died 24th Feb. 1684, in the 56th year of his age; and was succeeded by

Edward Earl of Carlisle; whose son and heir,

Charles Earl of Carlisle repaired the castle of Naward, and kept the library in good order; in which the manuscripts above-mentioned were remaining in his time. His Lordship had the pictures of all the Kings of England down from the Saxon times in his great hall, which were brought from Kirk-Oswald castle. He was succeeded by his son, the late

He afterwards married Ifabella the daughter of William Lord Byron, by whom he had one son, and four daughters. He died, 2d Sept. 1758, at his house in York, in the 64th year of his age. He was succeeded by his son, by his last Lady, the right honourable Frederic Earl of Carlisle.

His Lordship's borough of Morpeth never sent members to parliament till, 1 Q. Mary, 1553. It is governed by two bailiffs, and seven burgeses, who are all elected annually out of the principal inhabitants paying scot and lot, who elect the members of parliament. These are about two hundred. The bailiffs are the returning officers. The town-arms are, argent, barry of six azure and gules, over all a castle tripple towered within a bordure, azure, semee de martlets (y).

It hath an excellent weekly market on Wednesdays, and two annual fairs, viz. on Holy Thursday, and St. Mary Magdalen's day.

The market-place is in the center of the town. It has a neat market-crofs, on which is the following inscription.

The Hon. Philip Howard and Sir Henry Belofyse, Knt. the only benefactors of this crofs, Anno Dom. 1699.

On the west side of the market-place is the town-hall. It is a handsome structure, of white freestone, and hewn work, with a piazza, and a tower at each end, erected in the year 1714, at the expenſe of the Right Honourable the Earl of Carlisle, whoſe court is kept in it, alſo the quarter-ſeſſions for the county.

At a ſmall diſtance from it, is a neat tower of white free-ſtone, wherein is a good ring of bells, and a large clock.

Between the town-hall and the bridge, is the county-gaol. It is a modern and decent ſtructure.

At the north-eaſt end of the bridge, is a ſmall, but neat chapel, of modern erection, of white freeſtone, and hewn work. At the weſt end of it is a grammar-ſchool, an antient building; which was founded by King Edward VI, and endowed with the lands of two diſſolved chanteries in Morpeth, and one at Nether Witton.

The parochial church ſtands on the fourth ſide of the bridge, at a conſiderable diſtance from the town; on a hill, called Kirk-hill, in the weſt park, on the weſt ſide of the poſt-road. One of the chanteries in it juſt mentioned was founded in honour of the Bleſſed Virgin, of which John Anderſon was chaplain, 8 K. Henry VII (z). It has three good iſles, a gallery at the weſt end, and two termes, Whitfontide and Martinmas by even portions. Moreover, the said John, chaplain, John Reed, and Thomas Norton, bind them, their executors, and assignes, to make and uphold a sufficient hedge about the said ground of Cotingwood, enduring the said xx years, whereunto the said lord granteth them by his officer of the said wood to assigne and deliver to them sufficient wood for hedging of the same. And to allow them for their labor of the hedging thereof at the sight and discretion of William Wardall, then auditor to the said lord. And according as have been accustomed to the tenants thereof afore time. In witness whereof, as well the said lord, as the said John, chaplain, John Reed, and Thomas Norton, to the parts of these indentures, interchangably, have set their seals, given the dai and yeare above said.

On the fould of the indenture by the labell is indorsed thus.

To the intent, that all the servants and tenants belonging to the said Lord within the said towne of Morpath shall have grasse to their horses within the said wood, and ilk man for his quantitie to paie as doth the said John Anderson, John Reed, and Thomas Norton, every one of them by himself. The rectory-house stands on the east side of the post-road, and is little better than a ruin.

The baronial castle is near the church, in the same park. It has been long in ruins. Only an old tower of it is standing, with part of two speculating turrets, on an eminence, commanding a fine view of the town, and of the winding course of the Wansbeck, crossed by a bridge of two arches, and edged with hanging woods.

Half a mile west from Morpeth, on the margin of the Wansbeck, is the abbey of

New-minster, founded by Ralph de Merlay, Baron of Morpeth, and his lady Julian, 3 K. Stephen, 1138, for Cistercian monks, from Fountains, in Normandy, in honour of the Blessed Virgin (a). They endowed it with the Lordship of Ritton, part of the woods of Witton, and all the vale between Morpeth and Hebre, by the brook of Fulbeck to its fall into Cotingburn, and by Cotingburn to its fall into Wansbeck, &c. (b); with several privileges, confirmed by their heirs, and successors, and royal charters. Margery, the Lady of the second Roger de Merlay, Baron of Morpeth, gave to it three fisheries in the river Tyne.

William Bertram, Baron of Mitford, gave to it all the fine vale between it and his villa of Mitford. His great grandson, Roger Bertram, sold to them the granges of Eland, Horton, and part of Peterick, which his father and grandfather, both of his own name, had before granted them a lease of.

A clergyman, named Peter, son of John, vicar of Mitford, gave them the grange of Aldworth, which was confirmed to them by their last mentioned patron.

Everard de Ros, Baron of Wark, gave them the grange of Sturton, and his son, Robert de Ros, confirmed his donation.

Robert Bertram, Baron of Bothall, gave to them an estate, called, Forum. His grant was confirmed by his heirs, Richard and Robert Bertram.

Sir Gilbert de Humfranvil, Baron of Prudhow, sold to them the moors of Cheviot, and the granges of Felton and Tollard, which his ancestors, Odonel, William, Richard, and his own father and mother, Sir Gilbert and the Lady Matilda, had before granted to hold by lease, and given them Turf-hill pasture.

Sir Walter, Baron of Bolham, sold to them Newton-grange, which his father, Sir Gilbert, and his grandfather, Sir James de Bolham, had given them a lease of. Sir Walter's daughter and heir, Alice, confirmed their title, as did Sir Walter, Baron of Bolbeck, and his son of his own name.

Hugh, Baron of Bolbeck, and his Lady Theophania, gave to them the villa of Rotheley.

John de Kestern sold to them the demesnes of Kestern and Werebill, of the manour and regalities of the former of which they were before possessed by the donation of Robert de Greystock (c).

Roger, Baron of Warkworth, ancestor of the Clavering-family, gave them a salt-work at Warkworth, and his son and heir, Robert, confirmed it to them.

Henry Coniers, and his wife Eda, gave to them Cauldwell, alias Scarplane-Grange, and an estate in Clifton. The first they exchanged for lands in the latter, with William Coniers.

They held Tritlington of the manour of Wark upon Tweed, by the service of Franc-Almaigne (d).

Sir Richard Gubion gave them the annual rent of xx s. out of his mill of Shilwington.

Sir Roger de Merlay, of Stanton, gave them as much out of his mill there.

Sir Robert de Fenwick gave them two parts of his villa of Ir-dington, in Cumberland, who died, 1372.

The castle and manour of Mitford were in the possession of Lord Brough, in the reign of K. Henry VIII. (f) ; and of

William Lord Brough, 4 Q. Mary, who in that year granted to Cuthbert Mitford, and to his son Robert, for ever, all his lands at Mitford, reserving only to himself the site of the castle, and the royalties (g) ; which castle and royalties were in the crown in the reign of K. James I., who granted them to

James Murray, Earl of Annan (b) ; and being in the crown again in the reign of K. Charles II., they were granted by his majesty to

Robert Mitford, Esq; (i). He married Jane, the daughter of John Mitford of Seghill, Esq; by whom he had three sons, Cuthbert, John, and William ; also four daughters, viz. Barbara married to George Fenwick, of Long Sharwes ; Eleanor, to Daniel Collingwood, of Brampton ; Margaret, to Nicholas Heron, of Meldon ; Isabell, to Richard Rowmotherley, — Esqrs. His son, William, was fellow of Clare-hall, in Cambridge, and afterwards rector of Kirby-over-carr, in Yorkshire. His second son, John, lived at Mitford. He was succeeded by his eldest son and heir, Cuthbert Mitford, Esq; who married Mary the daughter of Christopher Wharton, of Offerton, in the county of Durham, Esq; by whom he had one son, Robert. They both died in one day at Mitford. Their son and heir,

Robert Mitford, Esq; married Philadelphia one of the daughters of Humphrey Wharton, of Gillingwood, in Yorkshire, Esq; by whom he had seven sons and six daughters; viz. Humphrey, Cuthbert, John, Edward, Robert, William, Michael,---Barbara, Mary, Philadelphia, Ann, Eleanor, Elizabeth. He was succeeded by his eldest son and heir,

Humphrey Mitford, Esq; who married Francis the daughter of Sir George Vane, of Long Newton, in the Bishoprick of Durham; by whom he had

Robert Mitford, Esq; who was high sheriff of Northumberland, 9 K. William III, 1697; and was succeeded by his son and heir, Robert Mitford, Esq; the present possessor of the castle and manour of Mitford, who was high sheriff of Northumberland, 9 K. George I, 1723 (k).

The castle stands in the park, on a mount, the work and labour seemingly of art. It was burnt, together with the village, by King John's choice spirits, the bucks, 7 January, 1216; so called from Walter Buck, and Falques de Brent, two commanders of his German troops. The last was a profligate sacrilegious fellow, and afterwards banished the kingdom. The other, Walter Buck, had for his better manners, better fortune. He had lands given him by that King in Yorkshire, and Northamptonshire, where his posterity flourished down to John Buck, who was attainted in the reign of King Henry VII. Matthew Buck, Esq; was settled at Winterburn, in Gloucestershire, whose son, James Buck, inheriting the military spirit of his family, was in the service of King Charles I. in Ireland, and was honoured with a coat of arms, of which I have the original manuscript-grant, illuminated with painting.

(k) Vid. Molleston, alias Mosedon.

It was fortified by Sir Gilbert de Middleton, and Walter Selby, 10 K. Edward II, 1317, then in arms against their sovereign, with the Scots. They were both seized in it, in that year, by the king's order, by Ralph Lord Greystock, Sir William Felton, and Sir Alan Heton, at the head of a large body of forces, who demolished it, and sent their two prisoners to London, where they were tried, and executed (1).

Mr. Mitford's feat is by the river, the ruin of the castle and park before it to the south, stored with deer. Near it is the church, the impropriation and advowson of which were granted by K. Edward I, May 17, and 35th year of his reign, 1289, to the priory of Laner-coast, in Cumberland (m). In the chancel is a large mural monument of freestone erected over the tomb of one of the Bertrams, with his coat of arms in a concave square molding, with ters patent was created Baroness of Ogle. Her son Sir William Cavendish, was made Knight of the Bath at the creation of Henry Prince of Wales, 8 K. James I, 1610; Baron Ogle, of Ogle, and Viscount Mansfield, 18th of the same reign; Baron Bertram and Belfover, and Earl of Newcastle, 3 K. Charles I; Marquis of Newcastle, 19th of the same reign; Earl of Ogle, and Duke of Newcastle, 16 K. Charles II, 1664; to whom he had the honour of being governor, and shewed himself worthy of royal favour, and of the friendship and confidence of a king. When so many were wanting in their duty to his old master, K. Charles I, he stood by him with his life and fortune, put Newcastle, and the castle and harbour of Tynemouth, in a state of defence, raised a regiment in Northumberland at his own charge, consisting of a 1000 men, the officers of the best families. He engaged and defeated the parliament forces under Lord Fairfax at Atherton-Moor, near Bradford, in Yorkshire, took all their artillery, 22 cannon, and many colours and standards. Which victory so frightened his majesty's enemies, that by an embassy they invited and prevailed with the Scots to come into England and join them, in extreme frosty and snowy weather. At the battle of Marston-Moor, he was at the head of his Northumberland regiment, where he had the mortification to see it deserted by the horse, yet such was their ardour, such their courage and magnanimity, that to a man they disdained either to fly from, or ask quarter of, the parliament-forces, but suffered themselves to be cut down by heaps, rank and file, as they stood. Their regimentals were white, which made them to be called, White-Coats. A colour worthy to distinguish such godlike souls!

After this battle, the Lord Marquis of Newcastle, his two sons, and his brave brother, Sir Charles Cavendish, who was a man, says my Lord Clarendon, of the noblest and largest mind, though the least and most inconvenient body that lived; General

King, Lord Falconbridge, Lord Widdrington, the Earl of Cornwath, the bishop of Londonderry, Sir Edward Widdrington, Colonel Carnaby, Colonel Basset, Colonel Mazen, Sir William Vavasour, Sir Francis Mackworth, and about eighty more royalists, determined to go beyond sea, and landed at Hamburg.

The estates of the lord marquis were put under sequestration, and some of them sold, among which was the manour of Flawborough, in Nottinghamshire, 1647. He was one of the seven persons excepted from pardon.

After the restoration, 13th K. Charles II, 1661, in May the marquis retired in full favour from court to his seat at Wellbeck, on which occasion he received the following very handsome congratulation, in an epistle dedicatory to a sermon, preached at Oxford on the 29th of the same month, by his chaplain, Mr. Clement Ellis (m).

“ With much pleasure I have hearkened to you discoursing of “ that satisfaction you reaped from that sweet privacy and re“ tirement his majesty is pleased to grant your lordship here in “ the country, where you live free from the noise and cumbe“ rance of court and city. Indeed, the greatest reward his ma“ jesty can possibly recompence your services withal, is thus “ to bestow yourself upon yourself, and I know you think it greater “ happiness to enjoy my lord marquis of Newcastle at Wellbeck, than “ all the offices and honours which your exemplary loyalty has “ merited. And there is all the reason in the world for it, that “ he who hath so nobly sacrificed the fairest of his years, and the “ amplest of his fortunes, to the service of his king and country,

(m) Printed at Oxford, 4to. 1661.

“ should

“ should now have leave to consecrate the remainder to his health and quiet.”

At Wellbeck his lordship enjoyed the society and the labours of the wise and the learned. Robert Sberingham, the famous antiquarian, inscribed his book or dissertation to him—De Anglorum Gentis Origine (n).

The Lord Clarendon has drawn his character in colours that cast a lustre on his name.

“ He was a very fine gentleman, active and full of courage, and most accomplished in those qualities of horsemanship, dancing, and fencing, which accompany a good breeding, in which his delight was. Besides that, he was amorous in poetry and music, to which he indulged the greatest part of his time; and nothing could have tempted him out of those paths of pleasure, which he enjoyed in a full and ample fortune, but honour and ambition to serve the king when he saw him in distress, and abandoned by most of those who were in the highest degree obliged to him and by him. He loved monarchy, as it was the foundation of his own greatness; and the church, as it was well constituted for the splendour and security of the crown; and religion, as it cherished and maintained that order and obedience that was necessary to both: without any other passion for the particular opinions which were grown up in it, and distinguished it into parties, than as he detested whatever was like to disturb the public peace.”

His lordship's only daughter and heir married John Holles, duke of Newcastle, who died by a fall from his horse, 15th July, 1711.

(n) Cantabr. 8vo. 1670.

His

His Grace's only daughter and heir, the lady Henrietta Cavendish Holles, married the right honourable Edward Earl of Oxford and Mortimer on the last of August, 1713, with whom his lordship had a large personal fortune, besides the baronial honours and estates in this county, her mother's dowry, which devolved to their only daughter and heir, the Lady Margaret Cavendish Harley, married, 11th July, 1734, to his Grace William Duke of Portland. He was knight of the most noble order of the garter, granted only at the coronation of a king, or queen, or installation of one of the royal family, except on extraordinary occasions, as in the case of Thomas Newill, Esq; speaker to the house of commons, brother to the Lord Abergavenny, who for his wife conduct and eminent services in that house, had that high honour conferred upon him in full parliament, 7 K. Henry VIII, 1516: no subject before him having it out of the common course (o). His Grace was succeeded in honour and estate by his eldest son and heir, now the most noble Duke of Portland, owner of the baronial castle and Lordship of Bothall.

Only an old tower is now standing of the castle, large and stately, through which has been the grand entrance. On the north front are the arms of its ancient barons. On the south and south-east fronts are several plants, semperverves, ivy, wall-flowers, also feaverfew, pellitory of the wall, and the jambucus or flowering elder. It stands on an agreeable mount, on the north side of the winding trout-streams of the Wanbeck, gliding between pleasant meadows, and hanging woods.

Near it is the parochial church. It has three handsome isles; the pulpit well placed, against the north pillar, on entering the chancel; the lights neat, and part of them adorned with painting, and the walls very solemn with scripture-sentences, in neat black frames; the pews but indifferent. The roof is covered with lead. In a small steeple are three bells, one of them cracked; and, hard by, is the vestry. At the east end of the fourth isle is a handsome tomb, within iron-rails, of alabaster, over one of the barons of Ogle and Bothall, and his lady, recumbent; their hands and eyes elevated. His lordship's head and feet rest upon the supporters of his coat-armorial; a lyon under his feet; a chain of many links round his neck, with a pendent cross. Under her ladyship's head is a cushion, and another under her feet, with two cherub-like babes lying by her, one on each side at the end of the cushion, near her face, each holding in its hand a tassel of the cushion; the head of one broken off; a dog by her feet, with a chain about its neck, the emblem of watchfulness.

On the fourth side of the chancel, is the following mural genealogical table, in the old black character, of the Ogles, barons of Ogle and Bothall.

“ Humphrey Ogle, Esq; lived at Ogle-castle at the conquest, to whom “ William the Conqueror, by his deed, without date, did confirm all “ his liberties and royalties of his manour and his estate of Ogle, in “ as ample a manner as any of his ancestors enjoyed the same be“ fore the time of the Normans.

“ From Humphrey Ogle, Esq; did descend seven lords and thirty “ knights.

“ Robert, the first Lord Ogle, married Isabel, daughter and heir
 “ of Alexander Kirkby, knight.

“ Owen,

“ Owen, the second Lord Ogle, married the daughter of Sir William Hilton, knight.

“ Ralph, the third Lord Ogle, married the daughter of Sir William Gascoign, knight (p).

“ Robert, the fifth Lord Ogle, married Mary the daughter of Sir Cuthbert Berthram, knight (q).

“ Robert, the sixth Lord Ogle, married Jane daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Manners, knight, and died without issue (r).

“ Cuthbert, the seventh Lord Ogle, married Katherine one of the coheirs of Sir Reginald Carnaby, knight ; (being brother to Robert the sixth Lord Ogle) who had two daughters, Joan and Katherine.”

In a shady solitude on the banks of the Wanbeck, near Bothall, is the ruin of an ancient chapel, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin. It was built by this illustrious family of Ogle, as appears by their coat armorial on the wall. The length of it is eight yards, the breadth four, of well-wrought freestone; the roof of the same materials, after a curious manner; hardly visible for trees, which have taken root in the very foundations.

(q) The family-pedigree, communicated by the present Duke of Newcastle, affirms, that he first married Dorothy, daughter of Sir Henry Woodrington, Knt. and afterwards Jane, daughter of Sir Cuthbert Ratcliff, Knt.

(r) In the same pedigree, it is said, that he married Jane, daughter and heir to Sir Thomas Melwerer, Knt.

The rectory-house is about two miles lower down the river, at Shipwash; so called from its proximity to the shipping in the little harbour of Cambois, and the grounds washed by the tides; the situation solitary, under a shady hill; the garden extending to the river, crossed by a bridge of three arches; a road leading from it to Newcastle; the mother-church said to have been formerly at this place.

The last rector was his Grace the present archbishop of York, the honourable and right reverend Dr. Hay Drummond, brother to the right honourable the Earl of Kinnoul, whose progenitors were ennobled by their glorious military achievements, recorded in the Scotch annals, and by a late ingenious antiquary of the same nation (s).

A mile east from Shipwash, is Ashington, (t), which was one of the manours of the barony of Bothall, and now belongs to George Sandiford Crow, Esq. It stands on an eminence, well sheltered with tall forest-trees; a fine view from it of the sea, also of Seaton-Delaval, and Bebside, through the openings of the plantations; the grounds sloping regularly to a bank of oaks by the river Wansbeck, freestone rocks conspicuous through them, under which is a fine grass-area of a mile in length by the river, which for all that space forms a most beautiful serpentine canal, a bank of oaks on the opposite side. On the west side of a streamlet, called the Den-Burn, by a grindstone-quarry, the river Wansbeck makes a flexure, where is a beautiful slope, now in tillage, shaded by spreading oaks and other timber on all sides but to the south, the river making another flexure a little to the west of it, crossed by Shipwash-bridge, in sight; a boat in it for the use of a salmon-fishery. Mr. Crow's extent of ground by the river from within a small field's length of the bridge, or the rectory-glebe, west, to the Stake-ford, east, is about a mile and a half, measured; thus beautifully chequered with wood, rock, and river-scenery; a foot-walk by the river the whole length.

About a quarter of a mile east from the grindstone-quarry, under a bank of oaks and other trees, close to a hedge, is a sacred fountain, called St. Margaret's Well, pleasant and soft to the taste, many of the small fresh-water buccinæ at the bottom; the north side faced with stone, natural, and semicircular, coated with moss, and a thin crust of earth, in which the primrose and meadowsweet have taken root, emitting their pleasant odours round it in their season of flowering.

By the Stake-ford, is a hamlet, called, the

The Black Clofe, belonging to his Grace the Duke of Portland, where is a coal-work, a steith, and a small fire-engine, so contrived as to fill a large basin with salt-water from a small reservoir below, overflowed by the tides, for the use of a salt-work, and also to draw off water from the colliery.

Two miles below the Stake-ford, is Cambois, a small hamlet on the southern banks, and at the ostium, of the Wansbeck, belonging to Matthew Ridley, Esq; Here the river is usually called Cambois-Water, and Cambois-Harbour. It is navigable to the Stake-ford for small vessels of about 30 tons burthen. There are two keys on the north side; one called the Low, and the other the High, Key; the latter on the estate of Sir Thomas Clavering, Bart. a great export of corn and grindstones from them, and a considerable import of Norway-timber and deals; and of limestone from Bednal, and Sunderland, in boats.

Near a mile north from the harbour's mouth, is a range of cliffs by the sea, called Hawk's-Hugh, from its being the recess of Hawks in the breeding-season; ravens also and other birds frequenting it. Towards the north end, is a cavern, very large, with an aperture at the top, usually called by the mine-men Self-Opens; the refuge of foxes and badgers in their distress by the chace.

A little farther north, by a grindstone-quarry on the sea-banks, called the Spital-Quarry, an urn was found by the workmen in unroofing the quarry, placed between four stones for edge-ways, with a cover-stone, at the depth of three feet from the surface; the urn of red earth, small, of the usual form, bellied, without any ornaments, left by the incurious finders among the rubbish.

About a quarter of a mile from the quarry, is Newbiggen, a marine villa, inhabited chiefly by fishermen; consisting of one long, irregular street; several granaries in it for export from one of the finest bays before it on the coast of this county, formed by two promontories of freestone-rocks, spacious, the bottom of sand; corn-ships, of about sixty tons burthen, coming up to the town; large ships, farther in, riding in five, six, or seven fathom water, in security from tempests, from the north, and north-east.

On the northern point of the bay, is the vestiges of an old pier; many of the stones, and some of the piles of wood, conspicuous at low water.

On the north-east side of the harbour is the church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew; the middle isle and the spire only now remaining; a small gallery at the west end; at the east end, above the altar-table, is the King's-arms, cut in wood, in high relief, said to have been the stern of a ship cast away in a storm upon the rocks; one bell in the spire; the church-yard small; a delightful prospect from it.

On the north-east side of it, about 100 yards from the sea-banks, in the cavity of a rock, is a fresh-water spring, called St. Mary's well, accessible only at ebb-tides.

Two miles north from Newbiggen, is Cresswell, one of the manours of the barony of Bywell (u), of which it was held by the antient family of the Cresswells; by Robert de Cresswell, and Simon de Cresswell, in the reigns of kings John and Henry III; by Roger de Cresswell, 21 K. Edward I (v); by

Her daughter married the eccentric Duke of Barborton, as my Lord Orrery calls him. Her ladyship and the lord warden lived at Widdrington, which was her jointure, and at her death came to Sir Henry Widdrington, who was a deputy-warden of the middle marches under his lordship. His deputy, Sir Henry Widdrington, was high sheriff of Northumberland, 21 Q. Elizabeth, and 3 K. James I; and a representative for it in parliament, 1, 12, 18, K. James I; and was succeeded by Sir William Widdrington, who was high sheriff of Northumberland, 12 K. Charles I; and a representative for it in parliament, 15th, 16th and 17th of the same reign, with Sir Henry Percy. He, and Sir William Carnaby, and Sir Patricius Curwen, were three of the 56 members who voted for saving the life of the Earl of Strafford. He, and his friend, Mr. Herbert Price, member for Brecon, in Wales, were committed to the Tower, for having candles brought into the house without a general order, 189 voices against 172. He was expelled the house, 26th August, 1642, for refusing to attend it, and raising forces in defence of his majesty, who created him baron Widdrington of Blankney, 10th November, 1643. After the battle of Marston-Moor, he retired beyond seas with his noble friend, the lord marquis of Newcastle, and others; and his estate was sequestered by the parliament (l).

On the march of his majesty, K. Charles II, to Worcester, his lordship staid behind at Wigan, in Lancashire, with the Earl of Derby, and many loyal gentlemen, about 200 horse, with a design of taking the country-volunteers along with them, where they were surprized by a party of the parliament-forces at the dawn of the morning, and after a gallant display of valour, were either slain or taken prisoners. Among the former was Lord Widdrington, who disdained to take quarter.

“ His Lordship,” says my Lord Clarendon, “ was one of the good“ lieft persons of that age, being near the head higher than most “ tall men, and a gentleman of the best and most antient extrac“ tion of the county of Northumberland, and of a very fair for“ tune, and one of the four which the king made choice of to “ be about the person of his son the prince, as gentleman of his “ privy chamber, when he first settled his family. His affection
 “ to the king was always most remarkable. As soon as the war “ broke out, he was of the first who raised both horse and foot
 “ at his own charge, and served eminently with them under the “ marquis of Newcastle ; with whom he had a particular and en“ tire friendship. He was very nearly allied to the marquis, and “ by his testimony that he had performed many signal services, “ he was about the middle of the war made a peer of the king“ dom (m).”

His lordship married Mary, the daughter and sole heir of Sir Anthony Thorald, of Blankney, in Lincolnshire, Knt. by whom he had

William Lord Widdrington, who was one of the council of state upon the restoration of the parliament by General Monk (n). He was succeeded by his son,

William Lord Widdrington, who by marriage acquired an additional estate of upwards of 1200 l. per annum. His lordship's real and personal estate, valued, as set forth in his petition to the Parliament, 4th December, 1722, at above 100,000*l.* came to the crown by his attainder in 1715, and was sold for the public use. He did not suffer with Lord Derwentwater, but was most graciously pardoned. He left one son, Henry, now living; his seat at Stella, by the river Tyne, in the bishoprick of Durham.

Widdrington-castle is now in the possession of Sir George Warner Knight of the Bath. It is about a mile and a half from the sea, on a pleasant shady eminence; from which is a distant prospect to the north-east of Coquet-Island, in which was a cell of Benedictine monks, subordinate to Tynemouth-priory (o). At the dissolution it was granted to John Earl of Warwick (p). It now belongs to his Grace the Duke of Northumberland. It was taken by the Scots, 19 K. Charles I, 1643, together with about 200 men, with their arms, seven pieces of ordnance, and provisions. They rescued and restored to the owners a great herd of cattle taken away by the king's forces. Colonel Grey, brother to William Lord Grey, came in to them with a regiment of horse, and took the covenant (q).

The island is about a mile in circumference, and a mile and a quarter from the main land, stored with rabbits. It hath pit-coal, as mentioned by Leland (r); also white free-stone, and flates ; the former of different fineness, the worst with some red Molecule ; the latter usually about three quarters of an inch thick. On the west side have been salt-pans ; about sixty yards from which are the ruins of the monastic cell and chapel ; and just below them is a bank of factitious sand, of a remarkable brightness, the dissolution of silvery rag-stone, of which there are large strata on the shore between Warkworth and Alnmouth, often left bare, and in view, after storms, and high tides. Hard by, upon a rock, grows plenty of rape ; probably first brought there by some shipwreck.

Having taken notice of the most remarkable places towards the sea near Morpeth, we now continue our course on the post-road for about six miles, when a neat road branches off on the left hand to Cawsey-Park (s), one of the manours of the Barony of Bothall (t), of which it was held by a younger branch of the noble family of Ogle, of Ogle-Castle ; by — de Ogle, in the beginning of the reign of Q. Elizabeth (u) ; by John de Ogle, 31st of the same reign, the initial letters of whose name are on the old tower, with the date of its erection, 1589 ; and whose wife, Catharine, lies buried under a flat stone in Bothall-church, near a fine tomb of the Lords Ogle, with the following inscription,

Here lyeth Catharine the wife of John Ogle,

Margaret his wife, which Margaret was sister to Robert the 6th and to Cuthbert the 7th Lord Ogle,
She died May 23, 1609.*

His son, James Ogle, Esq; is interred in the chancel of St. Andrew's church, in Newcastle upon Tyne, near the altar, under a marble monument with this inscription.

Hic jacet Jacobus Ogle de Cawsey-Park, in comitatu Northumbr. Armiger. Antiquitate domûs, utpote ex prænobili Baronia Ogle, de Ogle, stirpe recta linea oriundus, verè clarus; sed invicta in perduelles, grassantibus nuperis civilibus bellis, animi magnitudine, constantia in regem, etiam in tristissimo authoritatis deliquio fidelitate, in superiores observantia, in pares comitate, in inferiores benignitate, quæ omnia justissimo titulo sua vocare poterat, multo illustrior. obiit Dec. 4 die, annoquæ Dom. 1664.

The late Henry Ogle, of Cawsey-Park, Esq; was high sheriff of Northumberland, 1737. He founded a school at Cawsey-park bridge, on the east side of the post-road, and gave it the little field it stands in, and 300*l.* for the education of 30 children in reading, writing, and accounts. He died without issue, and was succeeded by his brother, the present possessor, William Ogle, Esq. His seat is on a rising ground; the gardens on a fine slope, bounded on the sides and bottom with handsome pieces of water, stored with carp and tench, an opening between woods of tall oaks letting in a prospect of an enclosed and well cultivated country.

Near two miles north-west from Cawsey-Park, is Long Horsley, the manour of which was given by Cospatric, Earl of Dunbar, on the marriage of his daughter Julian, to Sir Ralph Merlay, Baron of Morpeth (v); whose fucceffor, the third Roger de Merlay, in the reign of K. Henry III, granted lands in Long Horsley, and other places, to Adam de Pleffis (w); and at the fame time his

At the foot of the village is the church, with a tall spire, a fine contrast with the octagon-tower; the street seeming as a spacious avenue between them. In the tower is a large clock; the following inscription on the dial-plate.

Within the church, at the south-west end, by the entrance, is the funeral-monument and effigies of a Knight-Templar, with this inscription.

The effigies of Sir Hugh de Morawick, who gave the Common to this town of Warkworth.

In a pair of stained glass, in the east window of the south isle, are two female figures; the name of St. Hilda by them, in Saxon characters. It is a handsome church; a neat vestry in it; two good bells in the tower; the chancel wainscotted to the bottom of the windows; the roof ciled, and adorned with arched and knott-work.

By the entrance into the chancel, on the right hand, is a very neat mural monument of the Berlin-freestone, with this inscription.

On the west side of the church, is the vicarage-house; the river Coquet on the north side of it, crossed by a stone-bridge of three arches; an upright stone pillar on the middle, with the Percy-arms sculptured; a square tower at the south end; the gate formerly of iron, with port-cullices. Twenty marks were left towards rebuilding this bridge by Mr. John Cook, of Newcastle upon Tyne, 2 K. Richard II, 1379. The river enters the ocean about a mile below it, and is capable of being made navigable up to it for small vessels; the villa formerly much resorted to by merchants (c); the situation inviting commerce. It has three annual fairs, viz. on Thursday before St. George's, St. Lawrence's, and St. Martin's day; a weekly market on Thursday.

A quarter of a mile west from Warkworth in the ancient park, on the northern banks of the river Coquet, is

The Hermitage, a cell of two Benedictine monks from Durham, for whose maintenance Nicholas de Farnham, Bishop of that See in the reign of K. Henry III, appropriated the church of Brankston, confirmed by his successor, Walter de Kirkham (d). It consists of a small chapel, and a bed-chamber, cut out of a solid rock of white rag-stone, in the Saxon-gothic stile; the chapel curiously adorned with side-pilasters, and the roof of knot-work. In the sole of a window, at the south end of the altar, is the effigies of the Blessed Virgin, sculptured in stone, recumbent; another of the child Jesus on her right hand, standing, his left hand resting upon her shoulder; at her feet, in a nich in the wall, is the effigies of an hermit, in the attitude of prayer; by him a Bull's head; all in high relief. Over the entrance into the chamber, is a 'scutcheon of arms, now effaced. Next the river is the ruin of a small building, with a fire-place; probably the kitchen; above, there seems to have been a chamber, from the appearance of holes in the rock for the timber. On the south-east side of the rock, is a door and winding stairs cut out of it, leading to their little olitory or garden. The range of rocks eastward are of a considerable height and length; a fountain of soft and pleasant water under them; above them, spreading oaks and brushwood; the river passing by in a silent stream.

Near the 10th mile-stone, we cross the river Coquet by a stone-bridge of three arches, on the north side of which is

Felton, a pleasant, well built villa, on a gradual slope. Here the Barons of Northumberland did homage to Alexander, King of Scotland, 18th of K. John, 1216; who in resentment laid it and several other places in ashes. It was one of the manours of the Barony of Mitford. It was possessed by the Bertrams (e); by the Earl and Countess of Pembroke (f); by the Earls of Atholl; by Sir

At the west end of the village, is a handsome modern structure, called,

Felton-Hall, the occasional residence of Mr. Ridell, built by Mr. Widdrington; the gardens to the east; the river Coquet taking its course between two hanging banks of wood at a small distance to the south.

By Alnwick-turnpike-gate, a road branches off, on the right hand, to Alnmouth, a manour and sea-port of the Barony of Alnwick, belonging to his Grace the Duke of Northumberland. It stands at the Ostium, and on the north side, of the river Aln (1), on a rising ground; three miles from Warkworth, and four from Alnwick. It is a small, well built town. The principal export is corn, kept in large granaries, the largest, perhaps, in the county; the import, Norway-timber, and goods from London, Holland, and other places. On a hill, close by the sea, is the ruin of a church, which has been in the form of a cross. The church yard is still used as a burial-ground; on the east side of which, bones of a very uncommon size have been washed out by the sea. The tide flows about a mile up the river, to the village of Lesbury, where is now the parish-church. The river is easily crossed on horse-back at ebb-tides. A new ship, of near 300 tons, was built and launched at this port on Wednesday, 13th March, 1765, supposed to have been the first ever built at it.

A little beyond the turnpike-gate above mentioned, is the ancient town of Alnwick, which at the conquest was the barony of a young lady, the daughter of a noble Saxon, William Tyson, slain in the defence of the liberties of his country, and of his sovereign, K. Harold, at the battle of Hastings (a). The victorious Norman, K. William I, disposed of her in marriage, with this barony, and her baronial inheritance of Malton, in Yorkshire, to one of his favourite lords, Ivo de Vescy (b). His daughter and heir, Beatrix, was given in marriage by K. Henry I, with both these baronies, to Eustace Fitz-John; father of William, grandfather of Eustace, great grandfather of William, and great, great grandfather of John de Vescy; who successively held the barony of Alnwick of the king in capite by the service of xviii knights fees of the old feoffment (c):

The Lord Euface had great alliances by marriage; his eldest sister, Matilda, marrying Robert de Muschamp, the first Baron of Wooler; his younger sister, Cicilia, marrying Hugh de Baliol, Baron of Bywell; and he himself marrying Agnes, daughter of William King of Scotland; and his own mother being of the noble house of Stutvile, of Knaresbrough, in Yorkshire, the daughter of Lord Robert Stutvile. He, and the rest of the Barons of Northumberland, in confederacy against K. John, did homage to his royal brother, Alexander King of Scotland, at Felton, 1216; their army, stiled The Army of God and of the Holy Church, commanded by Robert Fitz-Walter, a General of experienced valour and prudence; in resentment of which defection, K. John laid Felton, and many other towns, in ashes. The two brothers, King Alexander and the Lord Euface, being before the town of Bernard Castle in the same year, to besiege it, and taking a near exploratory view of its strength on horse-back, his lordship was killed by an arrow of one of the townsmen (d). moned to sit in the famous parliament, 48 K. Henry III, 1264; which, with the parliament in the year following, and in another in the 18th of K. Edward I, are believed to be the models of our present parliaments, consisting of Lords and Commons; this, whereto his lordship was summoned, being the first of that kind upon record for the commons to have a share in the legislature (e). In the expedition against the Welch, 11 K. Edward I, 1282, his lordship commanded the Gaſcoigners (f). He died in that king's reign. To his only daughter, married to Sir Gilbert de Aiton, Knight of Aiton, by the river Derwent, near Scarbraugh, he gave his barony of Malton. He gave his barony of Alnwick to an illegitimate son, William Vescy, a minor, who for some discourtesy done to his guardian and feoffee in trust, Anthony Beck, bishop of Durham, was not permitted to take possession of it (g); being sold to Henry Lord Percy, baron of Topcliffe and Spofford, in Yorkshire, 3 K. Edward II, 1310; his Majesty and Sir Gilbert de Aiton confirming the title in the same year (h).

Of the noble house of Percy (i) there were five Lords and thirteen Earls; William the first Lord Percy coming into England with K. William I, and presented with a barony of thirty knights fees (k),

Henry, the fourth Lord Percy, who added to the grandeur of his family by the acquisition of the barony of Alnwick, was summoned to the parliament at Carlisle, 35 K. Edward I, 1307. His Lordship, with the Lord Robert Clifford, and the Earl of Pembroke, obtained a compleat victory over Robert Bruce, at Methfen, in Scotland, soon after his coronation at Scone. Among the prisoners was his Queen, daughter to the Earl of Ulster, who at the solemnity of their coronation is recorded to have said, "That she feared
 " they should prove but as a summer-king and queen, such as
 " in country-towns the young folks choose for sport, to dance
 " about may-poles." The king gave the earldom of Carrick, her husband's inheritance, to Lord Henry Percy; who in endeavouring to secure the rents from being seized, lost part of his armed retinue, horses and plate, and was forced to take refuge in a Scotch fortress, till relieved by his sovereign, K. Edward. The Lord Robert Clifford was presented by his Majesty with Hert and Hertnes, in the Bishoprick of Durham, saving always the right yet that belonged to the church of Durham, Totenham and Totenhamshire (1).

Henry Lord Percy was one of the twelve barons to whom the government of England was assigned in the minority of K. Edward III, 1327. The year following he lost his Scotch possessions, no Englishman being then permitted to hold any in Scotland, unless he lived upon them, and became a Scotch subject, said to be owing to the counsel of the queen dowager of England, and the Lord Mortimer. He was summoned to the famous parliament at Westminster, 23d October, 3 K. Edward III, 1329. He was one of the lords sent to Paris to negotiate a treaty, 5 K. Edward III, were both at sea in the great storm, 1379. Sir Thomas being attacked by a Spanish ship after the storm was over, engaged her with so much resolution and spirit, that he took her, and sold her cargoe at the first port; and then sailed, through many perils, to Brest, of which he and Sir Hugh were governors. Sir Hugh narrowly escaped being drowned in this tempest, only himself and seven men being saved of his whole ship's company.

Sir Thomas was admiral of the whole fleet in an expedition to Spain, 8 K. Richard II, 1386, in the month of May; the good Duke of Lancaster general of the forces. Sir Henry Percy, cousin to the Earl of Northumberland, and the Lord Poinings, were commanders under him. They were both swept away by a great sickness the year following, with half of the army.

Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, and his two sons, Sir Henry and Sir Ralph Percy, were defeated by the Scots, at Otterburn, 12 K. Richard II, 1388; his two sons taken prisoners; and the Scotch General, Earl Douglas, slain (o).

His Lordship being at his government of Calais, 15 K. Richard II, 1391, he was recalled home, and made lord-warden of the west marches. His brother, Sir Thomas, was one of the three ambassadors sent to France the year following. He was made lord steward of the king's household, 17 K. Richard II, 1393; and in the same year, Sir Thomas Percy, junr. was made warden of Bordeaux and Aquitain in France. The lord steward was created Earl of Worcester, 21 K. Richard II, 1397. His seat was at nificent, elegant, and curious, as to exceed, in the judgment of an eminent antiquary, all the buildings on the other side of Trent (o): the situation somewhat higher than the rest of the country; the walls of stone, large and square, and some of it so fine, as to be thought to be imported from France; five towers at each corner; in one of them a study, called Paradise, where was a closet in the middle of eight squares, latticed about; at the top of every square, a desk, ledged, to set books on, with drawers within, and seeming as if firmly joined to the top of the closet, yet one or all would come down, and serve for book-desks. It was walled round, except the entrance; a chapel and gardens within the mote, and orchards without, wherein were mounts opere topiario, with winding walks, to ascend to the top without pain.

Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, and his son, Sir Henry Percy, wardens of the West and East marches against Scotland, with the Earl of Westmorland, congratulated Henry Duke of Lancaster and Hereford at Doncaster, after his landing at Ravensthorpe, in Yorkshire, whom the Lord Ros, Baron of Wark and Helmthorpe, and other Lords, had joined before, 22 K. Richard II, 1399; all the noblemen and men of note in the nation following their example, and receiving him for their sovereign; King Richard being left without one consolatory friend. So general was the national defection, that Father Orleans, in his History of the Revolutions in England, says, that even the king's favourite greyhound left him, and fawned upon the duke (p). After his being taken at Conway-castle, in

The new fovereign, K. Henry IV, to reward the fervices of the Earl of Northumberland, made him high conftable of England, his patent bearing date September 30th, 1399, at Westminfter. He alfo give him the Ifle of Man, with the privilege of carrying the fword, called the Lancaster-fword, at coronations; the patent dated November 19th, 1399, at Westminfter (r). His brother, Thomas, Earl of Worcefter, had the poft of deputy high fteward conferred upon him, during the minority of Thomas Earl of Lancaster, the king's fecond fon, the patent dated October 8th, 1399, at Westminfter (s). He was alfo made governor to the Prince of Wales (t); and appointed ambaffador to France, with Walter Skirlaw, bifhop of Durham. He was fent the year following with his nephew, Sir Hugh Haflings, and others, to reduce the revolting Gafcoigners to their duty on the death of K. Richard; which he performed, not by force of arms, but by his wifdom and addrefs, by the powers of perfuafion, and the engaging charms of affability and condefcenfion (u).

They obtained another victory over them at Humbledon, near Wether, on Holy Rood-day, in September, in the same year; an upright stone-column still standing in memory of it.

The Earl of Northumberland first married Margaret, the daughter of Ralph Lord Nevill. He next married Matilda, the widow of Sir Gilbert Humfravill, Earl of Angus, daughter to Thomas Lord Lucy, and sister and heir to Anthony Lord Lucy; who out of her great affection settled upon his lordship, and his heirs, all her honours and lands, the baronies of Cockermouth and Egermond, in Cumberland, and the baronies of Langley and Prudhow, in this county, on condition of quartering the arms of the Lucies, with his own (x).

His son, Henry Lord Percy, married Elizabeth, the daughter of Edmund Mortimer the elder, by Philippa, the daughter of Lionel Duke of Clarence. He was slain at Shrewsbury, on Saturday, St. Mary Magdalen's Even, 4 K. Henry IV, 1403. His father was slain at Bramham-moor, 11 K. Henry IV, 1408; both lamented with a general sorrow throughout the nation, for the glory of their arms, their princely magnificence, and patriotic spirit (y).

Henry Percy, the second Earl of Northumberland, son to Henry Lord Percy, was summoned by writ to the parliament at Westminster, with Ralph Nevill, Earl of Westmorland, 2 K. Henry VI, 1423; and 29 K. Henry VI, 1451. He was created knight of the most noble order of St. George, commonly called the garter; and appointed lord warden towards Scotland.

His lordship invading Scotland with 4000 men, 14 K. Henry VI, 1435, was defeated by William Douglas, Earl of Angus, at Piperden; 1500 Englishmen slain at that battle, among whom were Richard Percy, and John Ogle, &c.

He entered that kingdom a second time with considerable forces, 29 K. Henry VI, 1450. An experienced officer, named Magnus, commanded under him. They joined battle with the Scots near the river Sarc, commanded by Hugh Douglas, Earl of Ormont, and a valiant knight, Sir William Wallase of Craig. The Scots on the first onset were ready to fly, but being animated by the exhortatory and pathetic addrefs, exemplary bravery and spirit of their knightly leader, Sir William, they obtained a compleat victory. The Earl of Northumberland escaped by the help of his son Lord Percy, whose filial piety was such, that he chose rather to be taken prisoner himself, than his father. Sir John Pennington, a valiant officer, was taken prisoner with him.

The Earl of Northumberland in the time of peace and leisure patronized learning and the liberal arts. He most generously bestowed three fellowships upon University-college in Oxford, directing them to be filled up by fit persons, born in the diocese of Durham, York, and Carlisle; the natives of Northumberland always to have the preference, if equally deserving as other candidates.

His lordship for the better security of his castle and town of Alnwick against the Scots, encompassed the latter with a strong wall of stone, and embattled the former, by leave from the crown, 12 K. Henry VI, 1411; the town having four large gates, and square towers; the castle, originally of Saxon foundation, large, with tall towers, and exploratory turrets; two spacious areas within, a chapel, and other buildings; the entrance to the west, above which there has been the brabant-arms, born by the Percies, Or, a lyon rampant, azure; now effaced by the weather; the motto still legible, in the old English black letter, in relief;—

ESPERANCE ME COMFORTETH.

This great nobleman espousing the cause of his fovereign K. Henry VI, against the house of York, was slain at the battle of St. Albans, with John Lord Clifford, and others, 23 May, 1455. He was interred in the abbey-church of St. Albans, in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin. He married Eleanor, the daughter of Ralph Earl of Westmorland, widow of Richard Lord Spenser. His son,

Sir Henry Percy, Lord Poinings, the third Earl of Northumberland, was appointed Lord warden of the east marches towards Scotland, and justice of all the royal forests south of Trent, 33 K. Henry VI, 1459. his lordship being with Queen Margaret at the battle of Towton, was slain with the Earl of Westmorland and Lord Dacres, &c. on Palm-Sunday, 29th March, 1 K. Edward IV, 1461. He married Eleanor, the daughter and heir of Richard Lord Poinings, Brian, and Fitz-Pain; and in his father's life-time was summoned to the parliament at Westminster, by the stile and title of Sir Henry Percy, Baron Poinings, &c. 29 K. Henry VI, 1451. His son,

Henry Lord Percy, the fourth Earl of Northumberland, was summoned by writ to the parliament at Westminster, 12 K. Edward IV, 1472; and made general warden of the marches towards Scotland, and justice of all the king's forests south of Trent. He was one of the generals of the army sent against Scotland, 22 K. Edward IV, 1482, and commanded the foreward; Sir John Middleton, of Belfay, the Lord Scrope, of Bolton, &c. commanding under him; Ralph Lord Greystock, Baron of Morpeth, bearing a command in the middle ward; the whole army encamped and marshalled at Alnwick, about the beginning of July.

His lordship was summoned to the parliament at Westminster, 1 K. Richard III, 1484; and in the reign of K. Henry VII. was made Lieutenant of Yorkshire; in which high office endeavouring to suppress an insurrection on account of a subsidy to be raised for the public service, he was slain with many of his faithful attendants, 4 K. Henry VII, 1489 (c). He was interred in the church at Beverley; a stately tomb erected over him. His daughter Eleanor, married Edward Stafford, the third Duke of Borough. His younger son, Alan Percy, D. D. was the first provost of John's college, in Cambridge, appointed by the executors and foundress, Margaret, countess of Richmond. His sepulchre is in the inner chapel under a marble-stone, plated with brass. This lordship's eldest son, Henry Lord Percy, the fifth Earl of Northumberland, was summoned by writ to the parliament at Westminster, 25th June, 1 K. Henry VIII, 1509. He was appointed general warden of the marches towards Scotland, 14 K. Henry VIII, 1522; but not choosing to hold that office, the Earl of Surrey was made general warden, the Marquis of Dorset warden of the east and middle marches, and the Lord Dacres warden of the west marches.

His lordship was at Alnwick, 15 K. Henry VIII, 1523, with the Earls of Surrey and Westmorland, and the Lords Clifford, Dacres, Lumley, Ogle, Darcy, and others, with an army of 40,000 men, in their march against the Scots. He died, 18 K. Henry VIII, 1526.

He died without issue, 29th June, 29 K. Henry VIII, 1537. He married Mary, the daughter of George Earl of Shrewsbury. His brother, Sir Thomas Percy, being under an attainder, and incapable of succeeding him, he gave a great part of his estate to the crown. Queen Mary restored it entire to his nephew, lords who protested against the validity of English ordinations, 8 Q. Elizabeth, 1566 (b). His brother,

Sir Henry Percy, the eighth Earl of Northumberland, was summoned by writ to the parliament at Westminster, 18th February, 17 Q. Elizabeth, 1575. He also sat in the parliament, 23 Q. Elizabeth, 1581, when an act passed both houses for fortifying the borders. He died, 21st June, 27 Q. Elizabeth, 1585 (i). He married Catharine, the eldest daughter and coheir of John Nevil, Lord Latimer, by whom he had eight sons and three daughters. His eldest son, Henry Lord Percy, the ninth Earl of Northumberland, was created Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, for his services against the Spanish Armada, 30 Q. Elizabeth, 1588. He was summoned by writ to the parliament at Westminster, 21 K. James I, 1623; and 1 King Charles I, 1625.

His lordship was an eminent patron and encourager of genius and learning, especially of such as distinguished themselves by making useful discoveries, experiments, and observations. On Thomas Harriot, the learned friend, companion, and assistant of Sir Walter Raleigh in the discovery and survey of Virginia, he settled a pension of 120*l. per annum*, on Sir Walter's recommendation. Thus liberal he was to two other ingenious men, Robert Hues, and Walter Warner, on whom he bestowed the like annuity. A donation to literary merit worthy of a Percy! being in Queen Elizabeth's reign a genteel support and maintenance. These three learned men were called the Earl of Northumberland's three Magi.

They were his companions in his best and worst fortunes. In the latter, in his confinement in the Tower, he would never be without them, had them constantly with him, provided them a table at his own charge. Sir Walter Raleigh being then likewise in the Tower, joined the sett, was much delighted in their company, and they formed a sort of philosophical society. Their prison was as an academy, where their thoughts were elevated above the common cares of life, explored science in all its pleasing forms, penetrated her most intricate, recesses, surveyed the whole globe, till Sir Walter's noble fabric arose, his history of the world, probably by the encouragement and persuasions of these his learned friends.

His lordship died, 8 K. Charles I, 1632; and was interred at Petworth, in Suffex. He married Dorothy, the daughter of Walter D'Evereux, Earl of Essex. His son, Algernon, Lord Percy, the tenth Earl of Northumberland, was summoned by writ to the parliament, 3 Nov. 16 K. Charles I, 1640, by the stile and title of Earl of Northumberland, Lord Percy, Lucy, Poinings, Fitz-Pain, Brian, and Latimer, Knight of the Garter, and lord high admiral.

His lordship was admiral of the British navy, 12 K. Charles I, 1635. With sixty men of war he seized and sunk many of the fishing-vessels of the Dutch in the north seas, who fled to the king, praying his majesty's leave to fish and trade with his subjects according to treaty. He was appointed general in chief of the king's army against the parliament, 1640; but he declined it, on account of his health. The next year he had orders from his majesty to have the whole British navy ready for sea, but his indisposition still continuing, the vice-admiral, Sir John Pennington, had had the care of it. In the same year he was appointed by the parliament Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland, the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, and the town and county of Berwick upon Tweed; also of the county of Suffex, and of the isle of Anglesey. On the parliament's motion to raise money by subscription, in June, 1642, his lordship subscribed 2000 l. and was discharged from being lord high admiral by his majesty, in July following, to which his lordship, says his majesty in his proclamation, paid a dutiful obedience. He was one of the four lords and eight commoners appointed by the parliament in that year to be commissioners to the king at Oxford, where he lived in princely splendour and magnificence. A bill for high treason was preferred against him, and others, at Salisbury, 1643, but the jury would not find it. He was one of the five lords who associated for the defence of the counties of Wiltshire, Dorsetshire, Somersetshire, Devonshire, and Cornwall, and with the members for them and the boroughs, had power, any eight of them, to raise money, appoint colonels, and other officers. He was one of the parliament-commissioners at the treaty of Uxbridge, January 29th, 1644. By their order, he took the charge of the education of his majesty's children. He was appointed one of the lords commissioners of the admiralty, 1645; and had a grant at the same time of 3000 l. per annum, for his care of the royal offspring. He was accused to the parliament for assisting his majesty with money, but there being no better evidence against him than hear-say, he was acquitted, and at liberty to prosecute the accuser; and was presented with 10,000 l. in consideration of his losses in the north. After a visit from his majesty to his children at Sion-house, he got permission from the parliament to take them at any time to Hampton-court to see their father,—exemplary and great in his sufferings! He was one of the commissioners at the treaty in the Isle of Wight. After his majesty's death, he was an

intercessor with the parliament for the support of the royal orphans.

His lordship's brother, Henry Percy, was a representative in parliament for Northumberland, but was expelled, 9th December, 17 K. Charles I, 1641, for endeavouring to engage the Northern army to free his majesty from the parliament-fetters, pour mettre le Roi hors de peine, as he called it; to keep up his majesty's revenue, to maintain bishops in their rights and functions. He was betrayed, after a solemn oath taken, by colonel Goring, afterwards a general of horse under the Earl of Newcastle. With some difficulty and peril he escaped their vengeance. History has drawn his character in most amiable colours. His countenance was awful, and commanded respect. His mind liberal, and stored with knowledge, civil and military. This made him as able a general in the field, as he was a prudent and wise counsellor in the cabinet. In the former, he awed the parliament by his management and address, and in the latter embarrassed their measures; in both firm and intrepid; more formidable by his wisdom, than his power, though that was great; which he employed with the ardour and zeal of a patriot in the service of a good master, who, to reward him, created him a peer by the stile and title of Baron Percy, of Albion, 28th June, 1643. He also made him lord chamberlain, and gave him in charge a treasure he loved well, the conduct of his Queen to Oxford. When the power of the parliament was too enormous to oppose, he retreated beyond sea, leaving behind him a great estate, and all its splendid apparatus, preferring before them a spotless loyalty, and an unwounded honour.

Algernon, Earl of Northumberland, died, October 13th, 1668. He first married Ann, the daughter of William Earl of Salisbury. He afterwards married Elizabeth, the daughter of Theophilus Earl of Suffolk, by whom he had a son and heir to his great estate (k), Joceline, the eleventh Earl of Northumberland. His Lordship married Elizabeth, the third daughter and coheir of Thomas Wriothefley, Earl of Southampton. He died at Turin, May 21st, 1670 (l), leaving an only daughter, the Lady Elizabeth Percy, who inherited his splendid fortune, and the antient baronies of the family. Her ladyship had three husbands, Henry Cavendish, Earl of Ogle, son and heir to the Duke of Newcastle; Thomas Thynne, Esq; and Charles Duke of Somerset. By his Grace her Ladyship had, besides other children, Algernon, Earl of Hertford, afterwards Duke of Somerset, who was created Earl of Northumberland, and at his death leaving an only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, now Dutcheß of Northumberland, who in her own right is baroneß Percy, Lucy Poinings, Fitz-pain, Brian, and Latimer. The titles of Earl of Northumberland and Baron Warkworth, devolved by the limitation in the patent to his Grace on his son-in-law, the present Duke of Northumberland, knight of the most noble order of the garter, lord lieutenant of the counties of Northumberland and Middlesex, of the city and liberty of Westminster, and of the town, and county of the town, of Newcastle upon Tyne, vice-admiral of the county of Northumberland, and of all America, one of the lords of his majesty's most honourable privy council, and late lord lieutenant-general, and general-governor of the kingdom of Ireland.

Alnwick-Castle, the seat of this noble family, was besieged, 2 K. William II, 1093, by Malcolm, King of Scots. He had with him his son and heir apparent, Prince Edward. Robert Morobray was then Earl and governor of Northumberland, a nobleman of great personal bravery, and military skill. Vexed to see his country invaded, for the fifth time, by that active monarch, he resolved to take revenge (m). Malcolm thought himself secure by the absence of the king's troops. Morobray considered this, and came suddenly upon him with the forces of his government. A smart battle ensued. The Scots being deprived of their usual courage by their surprize, gave ground. Their sovereign and his son, astonished to see it, rode from rank to rank, exhorting, intreating, and imploring them to remember the glory of the Scotch arms, and were both slain. This disaster completed the rout, and left both the field and the castle to the English.

By the first mile-stone on the post-road, north from Alnwick, there is part of a cross or stone-column still remaining, erected in memory of this event, called Malcolm's Cross.

(m) Hol. Chron. vol ii. p. 21.

This castle underwent another siege, 20th K. Henry II, 1174, by William King of Scotland. He had with him an army of 80,000 men. Preferring plunder to a siege, of which he had small hopes of success, he gave orders to raise it, and pillage the country. A body of 400 horse at Newcastle, under the command of five gentlemen, hearing of their adventures, resolved to free their country of them, or die in the attempt. Bernard Baliol, a gentleman of great resolution, spirit, and conduct, animated his companions, and led the way. They came upon the King unawares and on a sudden, his troops scattered and dispersed, intent only on spoil and rapine. The king, alarmed at the danger of his situation, by sound of trumpet recalled as many of his men as were within hearing. The English attacked them with great courage. The Scots, not inferior in courage, but almost wearied to death with plundering, were over-matched, and victory declared against them. Their King, William, was taken prisoner, after the greatest efforts and struggles to prevent it. Many of his scattered troops were taken prisoners ere they well knew their danger. Others fled. He was conducted to Richmond-castle, from thence to London, and was afterwards set at liberty by K. Henry II, for a large ransom, the sum of 100,000 l. sterling, one moiety in ready money, and the other at an appointed time, delivering for security the castles of Edinburgh, Roxburg, Berwick, Jedworth, and Sterling; also doing homage for his crown to England, the first example of that kind upon record, as a perpetual memorial of which he left his breast-plate, sword, and saddle, to be kept in York-Minster (n). This battle was fought on Saturday, 5th July, 1174; and ought to be remembered to the honour of Northumberland, and of this castle, which could make such formidable numbers despair of taking it (o).

Eustace de Vescy, 14 King John, 1212, being under suspicion at court of disaffection, orders were issued for demolishing his castle of Alnwick, but on his submission it suffered no harm.

After the battle of Hexham-field, 3 K. Edward IV, 1463, the Earl of Warwick, the Lord Montacute, the Lords Fauconbridge and Scrope, presented themselves before it, and summoned Sir Peter Bressly, and his Norman auxiliaries, in the service of K. Henry VI, to surrender. Sir Peter not yielding, they resolved to besiege it. Sir George Douglas, Earl of Angus, came on the first notice to his relief with 13,000 Scotchmen. He then marched out with his friends, his enemies not daring to oppose, who were glad to take possession of the castle without a stroke (p).

It was fortified and put into a good state of defence, 1569 (q).

It is now the seat of the Duke and Dutches of Northumberland, who have repaired the castle in a very splendid and magnificent manner, in the antient Saxon-gothic stile; its situation elevated; the river Aln gliding under it to the east; from which point, and from the hill on the western road by the entrance into the town, it is a most striking and beautiful object.

Alnwick is the county-town, and a disused borough, of which the principal officers are the Duke's bailiff, and four chamberlains, annually chosen, who are freemen of the town. Those that are made free of it meet on St. Mark's day on the town-moor, formerly called the forest of Aidon, on horseback, in white cloathing, attended by the castle-bailiff, the four chamberlains, and most of the freemen, when, by antient custom, they pass through a deep bog, called the Freemen's Well, wherein they are some times up to the chin.

The town stands very pleasantly, on irregular slopes, within four miles of the sea, a ridge of hills, and one higher than the rest, called Ratshugh-Crag, intercepting the prospect of it. Three ports and towers of the town-wall are still standing, viz. Bond-gate, a prison for debtors and delinquents; Clay-port, converted to a poor-house; Potter-gate, the tower without a roof. It hath the following streets.

Bond-gate-street; a good street, long, and well built, the entrance from Newcastle.

Market-street.

Narrow-gate-street; a good street, the road to Berwick upon Tweed.

Clay-port-street; the road westward to Hebberlaw, &c.

Bailiff-gate-street; well built, leading from the castle to the church.

Potter-gate-street; leading to the moor.

Finckle-street.

The market is nearly in the center. On the west side of it is a market-house lately built by the Duke and Dutchess of Northumberland for the benefit of the corporation, after an elegant design, in

in the Saxon-gothic stile, containing seven apartments, with an ambulatory before them.

On the north side of the market-place is a range of buildings, in which is the town-hall, entered by a flight of steps, where the sessions for the county, and elections of the knights of the shire, are held; a tower over it, with a large clock.

The market is on Saturdays. It hath four annual fairs, viz. 12th May; the last Monday in July; the first Monday in October; 24th December.

In the evening before the fair, on the last Monday in July, the steward of the court, and the bailiff, of the Duke and Dutchess of Northumberland, walk from the castle to the cross in the market-place, attended by persons who owe suit and service; that is to say, the townships of Chatton and Chillingham, 4 men; Cold-Marton and Fowbury, 4 men; Hetton and Hezelrigge, 4 men; Fawdon and Clinch, 4 men; Alnham and Alnham-moor, 2 men; Tugball and Swinhoe, 2 men; Long Houghton and Denwick, 4 men; Lesbury and Bilton, 2 men; Lyham and Lyham-hall, one man; with the principal inhabitants of the borough of Alnwick. The bailiff proclaims the fair in the name of the Duke and Dutchess of Northumberland. The men who attend for the several towns in service are obliged to keep watch at all parts of the town the night before the fair, which has been a custom for time immemorial. The next day the tenants of the Duke and Dutchess within the barony of Alnwick attend at the castle, when the steward and bailiff proceed from thence to the market-place, and proclaim the fair as before. They then go to the head of Clay-port-street, and return to Clay-port-tower, where the fair is proclaimed again; and from thence to the castle. The townships above mentioned

are:

are exempt from paying toll for 12 months, for their attendance ; but if they do not attend, they must pay the same till the next year.

In the upper end of Potter-gate-street, is a grammar-school ; the following inscription over the entrance.

Alaunensium ædificata Anno Dom. 1687.

Nunc demum instauratur Anno Dom. 1741.

There is a neat fashioned house and garden joining on to it for the accommodation of the master ; the endowment reputed 25 l. or 30 l. per annum, arising chiefly out of the tolls of the town.

The town was burnt by the Scots, 1448, in resentment for the burning Dunfries by the English (r).

It gave its name to William de Alnwick, L. L. P. Confessor to Henry VI, 1424, and keeper of the privy-seal, recommended by his Majesty and his ministry for the Bishoprick of Ely, on the death of John Fordham, who held both that See and Durham, but missed of it by the Pope's interposition.

Alnwick-church stands at the end of Bailiff-gate-street. It is large ; has three isles, extending through as many arches into the chancel ; has four galleries, twenty-seven windows, great and small, and three bells which are small. It is a good church, kept neat ; the chancel cieled ; and the whole covered with lead ; a neat tower for the bells.

(r) Hol. Chron. vol. ii. p. 272.

Sumptibus Edvardi comitis cognomine Bedford ;
Cognita præclari sunt hæc insignia clara.

ANNO DNI. 1600.

In a hollow nich of the wall of the south isle, there are three human figures in stone, recumbent ; the hands elevated, in a supplicatory attitude.

On the south-east side of the chancel, is a neat mural monument, with this inscription in capitals.—

A small house and garden in Clayport-street, lately lett at 7 l. per annum, was given by Mr. Grey, a merchant in Alnwick, for the use of the incumbent. The dissenters have built one for a minister of theirs near Bond-gate, both handsome and convenient. They have two meeting-houses ; and a people, usually called Methodists, have another.

Here was an Hospital, dedicated to St. Leonard, of the foundation and in the patronage of the noble family of the Percies. Henry Lord Percy, afterwards Earl of Northumberland, gave it, to hold in pure alms, to Alnwick-Abbey (s). This abbey was founded, 4 K. Stephen, 1157, by Eustace Fitz-John, for Premonstratensian canons, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin (t). He endowed it with a great parcel of his his baronial lands. He gave it the villa of Huicliff, and all the demesnes about it, on the left hand of the road from Alnwick to Rock, and the wastes belonging to it, extending from Hindon to the river Aln, with the service of half the tenants. He gave it two parts of the tithes of the lordships of Tugball, of Alubam, of Newham, of Heyfend, of Chatton, and one moiety of the tithes of Wooler. He gave it the appropriations and advowsons of Alnwick, of Wooler (u), of Long Houghton, and of Lesbury. He also annexed to it the priory and church of Gyfnas, now Gyson, or Guizance, near Felton, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, of Richard Tyson's foundation, to hold in pure alms, with all its privileges and endowments, a moiety of the tithes and two bovats of land at Gyson, the church of Halge or Haugh, the lands of Ridley, and Morwick-haugh, with liberty of erecting a corn-mill, on the river Coquet, and of raising as much corn on his wastes there as they could plow, with liberty to grind it at his own mill, moultier-free. He also gave the canons for their table the tenth part of all the venison and pork killed in his parks and forests, and of all his fishes taken in his fisheries by his order, and a salt-work at Warkworth.

The Lord William de Vescy, his son, gave them the advowsons of Chatton (v), of Chillingham, and Alnham. They had also the advowsons and appropriations of St. Dunstan's in Fleet-street, in London (w), and of Leckenfield, in Yorkshire (x).

They had twenty-four acres of turbary or earth for fuel, and liberty of pasturage on Edlingham-common (y). They had lands at Chatton, and at Fallodon (z). They had four tenements and a garden in Newcastle upon Tyne (a).

The abbot was summoned to parliament, 23, 24, 28, 32, and 34 K. Edward I; also to the parliament at Carlisle, 35th of the same reign, 1307; and to the parliament, 19 K. Edward II.

These are the chief antient privileges and possessions of Alnwick-abbey. Its annual revenues at the dissolution, 26 K. Henry VIII, were valued at 189*l.* 15*s.* Dugd. 194*l.* 7*s.* Speed. It had then thirteen canons. The site of it was granted, 4 K. Edward VI, to Ralph Sadler and Laur. Winnington. It was afterwards sold, with the demesnes about it, to Sir Francis Brandling, Knt. of whose family it was purchased with the same lands by Mr. Doubleday, father of Thomas Doubleday, Esq; the present possessor, whose seat is built out of the ruins of it, which stood in his orchard, south of his pleasure-garden. The only remains of this religious pile, is the court-wall to the east, through which is the entrance, of very curious architecture, with a modern-built turret at the south end, beyond which is a building seemingly of a later erection; not corresponding with the grandeur of monastic structures, answering better the use it is now put to, viz. a stable, than any other. Adjoining to it, is an antient and strong tower, with four turrets, two at each end.

The situation of the abbey is extremely pleasant, at a small distance from the castle, in view from the church, and under a hill, on the extreme point of a peninsula by the eastern margin of the river Aln, crossed by a bridge of two arches; whose winding trout-stream, in pleasant murmurs, glides past it; shaded on the opposite side with a bank of wood, and here and there a broken rock visible through it, variegated with ivy and woodbine.

There is a street between the bridge and the church, a sort of suburb to the town, called Connon-gate; from its leading to the abbey, or house of Canons; a small manour belonging to them; and now in the possession of Sir Lancelot Allgood, of Nunwick, Kt.

About three miles from the castle of Alnwick, nearly in the middle of Huln-park, higher up the river, on an eminence, is the abbey of with twelve acres of land, lying round it (d). A conduit of fine fresh water was conveyed to it from the Holy Well, a mile to the north-east of it, in lead-pipes, called also the Friers Well. On the west side of it, is an antient tower, built by Sir Henry Percy, the fourth Earl of Northumberland, as appears from the following inscription, cut in relief on a stone still remaining.

XX

In the year of Christ Ihu. M. CCCC. III. VIII.

This tower was builded by Sir Henr. Percy,
The fourth Earl of Northumberland, of great honour and worth,
That espous'd Maud, the good lady, full of virtue and beauty,
Daughter to Sir Will. Herbert, right noble and hardy,
Earl of Pembroke, whose soules God save,
And with his grace conserve the bilder of this tower.

The founder of this monastery, Mr. Fresborn, died 2 K. Edward I, 1274, and was interred in it. He chose this spot for its resemblance to mount Carmel, in Syria. It is on the north-east side of the river Aln, whose streams wash its sloping skirts, in a winding current through rocks, pebbles, and bushes, awakening with its symphony our attention to seriousness and pleasure. In this delicious solitude, the famous biographer, John Bale, lived and studied, being a member of this little society.

The whole, except the tower, is now in ruins. It was given by Queen Elizabeth, to Sir John Forster, Knt. and in the reign of King James I., was in the possession of John Salkeld, Esq; (e), and now of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland. His Grace has repaired the tower, made a handsome road to it from his castle through the park, by the margin of the river, edged with flowering shrubs and plantations, stored with game, and song-birds, of various kinds. The odours of the flowers, the play and pastime of partridges, of hares, the cooing of turtles, the joyous harmony of the little songsters of the grove, all conspire to render it a charming walk. To the west of the abbey, are the rocky hills, called, Brisley-hills, containing about 200 acres, planted by his Grace with forest-trees, of the best kinds, which in a few years will add greatly to the beauty of this his sacred Carmel.

At the north end of Alnwick-bridge, a road branches off on the right hand, to Howick, one of the manours of the barony of Alnwick, a mediety of which was held by the antient family of the Greys of Chillingham; by Sir Ralph Grey, Knt. in part of the reign of King Henry VIII., in the reign of King Edward VI., and in the beginning of the reign of Queen Elizabeth; and by his son and heir Sir Thomas Grey (f); the other mediety belonging to Robert Heron, a younger branch of the baronial family of the Hérons of Ford (g).

The Greys afterwards acquired the whole manour; which was possessed by John Grey, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 14 K. William III, 1701; by the late Sir Henry Grey, Bart. high sheriff of Northumberland, 1736; and now by his son and heir, Sir Henry Grey, Bart. a representative in parliament for Northumberland.

The old tower of Howick, mentioned by Leland (b), is entered by a flight of steps, and is still a fair structure, to the north end of which the late Sir Harry built a large, handsome house, and elegant offices. It stands within a mile of the sea, and on the north side of a trout-stream, called Howick-burn, crossed by a new stone-bridge of ashler-work. To the north-east are the stables. To the west is a shrubbery and plantation, through which the brook takes its course between grass-lawns, and makes its Exit by a gentle fall. To the south-east is the church, dedicated to St. Michael, rebuilt after a handsome manner by the late Sir Harry, though not the patron. Near it is a free-school, for the education of his tenants children in reading, writing, and accounts, to which at his death he gave 200 l.

A mile north-east from Howick, is fret, and tried in form, in the king's presence, for treason (r). He was beheaded on St. Thomas's hill, on the north-east side of that town, 25 March, 1322; and was buried in the priory-church on the right hand of the high altar. The king remitted, on account of his being a near relation, grandson to K. Henry III, the infamous circumstances of hanging and quartering; the first example of which in England was in the person of the unfortunate Welsh Prince David, the last of his family, and of the first antiquity in Europe, to K. Edward I, 1282. He was canonized in the reign of K. Richard II, and his picture hung up in St. Paul's church (s); after which time the hill of his execution was called St. Thomas's hill. He forfeited five earldoms, viz. Lancaster, Lincoln, Salisbury, Leicester and Derby. He was the greatest subject in the realm, and the mightiest Peer in Christendom (t). His attainder was taken off, and all his signories, honours, and lands, restored in the next reign to his brother, Henry Earl of Lancaster, on his petition to the parliament. He was one of the four Lords appointed by the twelve guardians of the kingdom to take care of K. Edward III, in his minority; who in the 25th year of his reign, 1351, created him Duke of Lancaster, by his special charter. He was the second in the kingdom advanced to that high dignity; Prince Edward being the first, whose brother, John, marrying the daughter and heiress of the Duke of Lancaster, succeeded both to his fortune and title; to the latter by creation.

Duke Henry of Lancaster on his investiture by the sword, had licence to hold a court of chancery within his dutchy, to send out writs, and try causes; which is the rather to be noticed, as some have thought, that Lancaster was not made a county palatine till the reign of K. Henry IV.

The castle was a strong and noble building. Its glory fell with the royal rose of Lancaster, K. Henry VI., after the fatal battle of Hexham-field; when Sir Peter de Breffny, and five hundred Frenchmen taking shelter in it, it was besieged by Ralph Lord Ogle, Edmund and Richard de Crafter, John Manners, and Gilbert de Errington, zealous friends of the house of York, who took the whole garison prisoners, except Sir Peter, and demolished it; having held out by its strength a long time; the besiegers being encouraged by the hopes of rewards, which they had plentifully out of the forfeited estates from the fortunate and victorious Edward, who never failed liberally to remunerate those who faithfully served him. It was in the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth (u); and was granted, 6th February, 22 K. James I., to Sir William Grey, Baron of Wark, and confirmed by K. William III., 20 December, 1694; and is now in the possession of the right Hon. the Earl of Tankerville.

It stands on an eminence of several acres, sloping gently to the sea, and edged to the north and north-west with precipices, in the form of a crescent, by the western termination of which are three natural stone-pyramids of a considerable height; and by the eastern one an opening in the rocks made by the sea, and a frightful precipice, called Rumble-churn, from the breaking of the waves in tempestuous weather and high seas. Above this is the main entrance, and by it the ruin of the chapel. At the

Rock, one of the manours of the barony of Alnwick, of which it was held by William de Rock, 1 K. Edward I (v); by Robert Lawson, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 3 Q. Elizabeth (w), and a representative for it in parliament, 5th of the same reign, who also had the estate of Falwodon, as was found by an inquisition taken after his death, 10th of that reign (x); by John Salkeld, Esq; (y); and by the late Thomas Proctor, Esq; who sold it to the Right Honourable the Earl of Jersey. It has a chapel in it dedicated to St. Philip and St. James. It stands on an eminence, and has an extensive sea and land-prospect.

of the Lordships of the Dutchy of Lancaster, and now belongs to the right honourable the Earl of Tankerville. It is an irregular built village, chiefly under the ridge of a hill, which intercepts the prospect of the sea. The church is on the west side of it, which is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. It is in the form of a cross, the roof flat, covered with lead; a gallery in it at the west end. It has also a small vestry, and a good tower. The vicarage-house and garden join on to the west side of the church-yard, on a gradual slope; in making which decent and convenient, a large sum of money was laid out by the late incumbent, the Revd. Mr. Parsons. One of his predecessors, the Revd. Mr. Edwards, founded a small English and Writing school on the top of the ridge of the hill, to which he gave an enclosed field on the east side of it, valued at 5 l. per annum.

A little beyond the 7th mile stone, a neat road branches off, on the right hand, to

He died in the latter end of that reign, and left three daughters and coheirs; viz. Elizabeth, married to Sir John de Fenwick; Mary, to Sir William Swinburn; Johanna, to Sir Robert Ogle (f). It is now the seat and manour of Edward Haggerston, Esq; a younger son of the late Sir Carnaby Haggerston, of Haggerston, Bart. and brother to the present Sir Thomas. His seat is in a low situation, by the side of a small stream. The church is on a higher ground, in a solitary field, in sight from the post-road.

From the 9th mile-stone, we have a fine view of Bambrough-Castle (g); which stands on the ridge of a steep hill above the sea, and from the stile of the architecture of the base of the old tower now remaining, of the Doric order, is believed to be of Roman original. It is very probable, that whilst the Romans held possessions in Scotland, and north of the wall, they had their exploratory towers and forts along the coast, and did not leave it naked and defenceless, exposed to the inroads of an enemy.

Besides,

Besides, the coast for fertility, and the conveniency of their navy and shipping, was of more value to them than all the rest, unless it can be supposed, contrary to the usual practice of that wise nation, that they preferred poverty to wealth, danger to security, hardships and difficulties to pleasure and convenience, and risked their lives for the acquisition of bleak mountains and hills, barren rocks, heaths and morasses. The castles of Tynemouth, Dunstonbrough, and this, stand in a line, as Agricola's chain of forts did cross the country between the two seas; and it is very likely that the first foundations of all three were Roman. It is well known, that the Saxons built their castles, when they could, on Roman foundations, and gave them the name of Burg and Brough. The Danes gave them the name of Burgos. The Saxon king, Ila, has the honour done him by Roger Hoveden, and all our historians, of being the builder of this, and make its antiquity coeval with his kingdom of Northumberland. He first inclosed it with wooden pales, and afterwards with stone. A well was made to accommodate it with water, which is much praised by Hoveden for its goodness, and for the stone-workmanship about it. When the Saxon-court afterwards became Christian, and Northumberland-kings served God with more pleasure than the world, a church or chapel was built within it, consecrated by K. Oswald to St. Aidan.

It must have been a place of great strength, as it was the sanctuary of the Northumberland-kings, earls, and governors, on any imminent danger; withstood the fury of many sieges and blockades, and was the confinement of state-prisoners. K. Osfred, in his minority, and a nobleman under whose tuition he was, called Brithric, shut themselves up in it, on the death of K. Alfred, his father, in 705; to be safe from the violences of Edulph, a rebel lord, who had seized upon the crown. Edulph besieged it with his partizans. The young king and his governor made a brave and long defence, which gave his faithful subjects time to rise and hasten to his relief. The usurper had turned the siege into a blockade, but on their approach retired in confusion and hurry. He was pursued by Brithric, the royal orphan's guardian. Brithric followed him with all the ardour of a good general, and with a resolution to take vengeance on his sovereign's wrongs. Edulph was presently overtaken and seized. There being no need of the form and ceremony of a trial for so black a treason, he was instantly executed. Young Osred was securely settled in the throne, and this castle was no longer his prison, but his palace.

Walteof, the first of that name, Earl of Northumberland, being feeble and weak with age, and unable to oppose Malcolm, King of Scots, at the head of a numerous army, made this royal fabric his retreat, till he was freed from his fears by the valour of his son, Uchtred. Enraged to see his country invaded, Uchtred marched against them with a few troops, hastily raised. With these, disposed to the best advantage, animated by his undaunted bravery and courage, with the view of glory, and the taking ample vengeance of their enemies, he obtained a famous and compleat victory. A victory, from which he would have reaped a greater harvest of honour, had he used it with lenity, and not sullied it with an act of cruel inhumanity. He had among his prisoners several Scotch noblemen, generals and officers of rank. These he beheaded. Their heads he placed upon poles round the walls of the city of Durham. In this, he shewed he had more of the spirit of the tyrant, than of the hero, whose soul has just ideas of glory, and always extends a generous commiseration to the vanquished, and protects and applauds the faithful and brave General in an enemy. However, Uchtred's success, and not his cruelty, cruelty, was regarded at the court of his sovereign, K. Ethelred. Every body there talked of it in raptures. K. Ethelred himself in his transports was resolved to shew him one of the highest marks of his favour. He gave him his daughter, the princess Edgiva, in marriage, and with her, the earldom of Northumberland, and the county of Yorkshire, for a portion; old Walteof resigning this royal fortress, and his other castles, and government, to his son, thus allied to the throne.

In the year 642, it was besieged by Penda, the pagan king of Mercia, after his victory over K. Ofwald at Ofwestre, in Shropshire; a prince as remarkable for his zealous patronage of christianity, as for his bravery. Cruelty seems to have been the characteristic of Saxon paganism. The savage Penda, not content with a victory over that christian hero, barbarously mangled his body, and thought to have reduced this castle to ashes, for making a gallant defence. He laid vast quantities of wood under the walls, to which he set fire as soon as the wind was favourable, but no sooner was it in a flame, than the wind changed, and carried it into his own camp, and forced him to raise the siege, to his own great shame, and the praise of that Being, who sets bounds to the rage of merciless men.

In the reign of K. Egbert, Kenulph, Bishop of Landisfarn, being suspected at court of a crime, of which he was innocent, was a state-prisoner in this castle about thirty years, from 750 to 780.

It suffered greatly by the fury of the Danes in the year 933, but was soon repaired, and esteemed the strongest fortress in the county.

In the year 1095, Robert Mowbray, Earl of Northumberland, and his party, marched into it for security, on the approach of the royal troops to chastise them for their treason. The king, William II, besieged it in person. As traitors never think themselves safe any where, Mowbray secretly fled for sanctuary to St. Oswin's shrine at Tynemouth, where he was taken prisoner. His steward and kinsman, Morel, with a courage that would have done honour to a better cause, defended the castle in the absence of his unfortunate Lord. He defended it against all the forces of the king. The king had turned the siege into a blockade, and raised a fortress near it, called Malvoison, i. e. Bad Neighbour, some time before the earl fled. Morel, not terrified by so many bad neighbours, still held out, with an astonishing perseverance and resolution, to the surprize of the king, who beginning to be uneasy, tried to effect that by policy, which he could not do by force. He ordered the earl to be led up to the very walls, and a declaration to be made, that if the castle did not surrender, his eyes should instantly be put out. This succeeded to his wish. Morel no sooner beheld him in this imminent danger, than he consented to yield upon terms. For his fidelity and affection to his Lord, and his gallant defence, the king took him into his royal protection and favour. A godlike action, thus generously to reward a faithful enemy! For the servant's sake, probably, the incensed sovereign spared the life of the master, and only kept him a prisoner in Windsor-castle, where he remained thirty years.

In the year 1296, K. Edward I, summoned John Baliol, King of Scotland to appear before him at his castle, and answer for breach of faith. Baliol not appearing, he went on to Berwick, and put the Scotch garrison to the sword. From thence he directed his march to Dunbar, and in his way met with the Scotch army going to its relief. That army he attacked, and made a dreadful slaughter. Twenty-two thousand Scotchmen are said to have fallen victims to his resentment. Dunbar was reduced. Baliol was taken prisoner. The victorious Edward brought him to England, together with the stone-throne of the Kings of Scotland, kept at Westminster ever since.

In 4 K. Edward II, 1310, Peers de Gaveston, Earl of Cornwall, was placed in this castle by that king, to save him from the indignation of an injured nobility, who in 1312, dragged him to justice from the castle of Scarborough, in Yorkshire.

In the year 1463, it was taken and retaken by the Generals of kings Edward IV, and Henry VI. Sir Ralph Grey, Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, was governor of it for the latter a little before the battle of Hexham-field; but after that unfortunate action he was forced to surrender both himself and it to the Earl of Warwick, and the Lords Montacute, Fauconbridge, and Scrope.

Between these two contending princes it must have received violent shocks. After that period, it went speedily to decay. K. K. Henry VII, and VIII, out of policy did not repair any castles, but demolished many, looking upon them only as sanctuaries for rebels. It was in the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth (b). Sir Francis was high sheriff of Northumberland, 19 Q. Elizabeth (k); and a representative for it in parliament, 14th, and 27th of the same reign. He was killed on the borders, on a march-day, 27th June, 1585. His father-in-law, Sir John, lived to a great age; and was succeeded in his abbey of Bambrough, and his manour and abbey of Blanchland, by his son, Nicholas Forster, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 44 Q. Elizabeth (l); whose son and heir, Sir Claudius Forster, Knt. was high sheriff of Northumberland, 10 K. James I, and created a baronet, 17th of the same reign. and the greatest part of the coast between them. A stately tower, whose base is Doric, as before mentioned, is the only monument now left to speak its ancient grandeur. It was lately repaired by the trustees of Bishop Crew.

It gives its name to a large tract of country, called Bambroughshire, extending southwards to Warkworth-bridge.

Preachers.

Preachers (q). This is the fair college said by Leland to be “a little without Bamborow (r).” The site of it was granted to Thomas Reeve and Nicholas Pinder, 2 Q. Elizabeth (s).

The church of Bambrough was of K. Oswald's foundation, as well as St. Aidan's. K. Henry I. granted them both to the priory of Nostill (t).

It is a neat church, consisting of three broad isles. Within a nich of the south wall in the chancel, is the effigies in stone of a knight templer, in the usual habit and attitude.

On the north side of the chancel, is a small mural monument erected to the memory of Sir Claudius Forster, with this inscription.

Scio quod Redemptor meus vivit in Cœlis.

By this monument is another over the family of Sir William Forſter, with the following inſcription.

In the vault below lie buried the bodies of William, John, and Ferdinando, ſons of Sir William Forſter, of Bamburg, Knt. by Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Selby of Twizel, Bart. and by Eleanor, daughter of Ferdinando Lord Fairfax, of Denton.

William was born the 28th of July, 1667; married Elizabeth, daughter of William Pert, Eſq; died the firſt of Sept. 1700, without iſſue.

John was born the 29th Sept. 1668. Died the 15th November 1699.

Ferdinando was born the 14th of Feb. 1669. Died the 22d of Aug. 1701: both unmarried. They had another brother, Nicholas, who died young, and was buried in the church. of South Bailly in Durham; as alſo five ſiſters.

Eleanor, and

Dorothy, who died very young.

Frances, married to Thomas Forſter, Eſq; of Etherſtone, to whom ſhe had ſeveral children.

Mary,

Mary, who died unmarried. And

Dorothy, wife to the Right Honourable the Lord Crew, Lord Bishop of Durham, of whom their mother died. She being the only one remaining of the family, set up this monument in memory of her dear brothers, as the last respect that could be paid them for their true affection to the church, the monarchy, their country, and their sister, anno 1711. This being the burying place of their ancestors.

The son of Thomas and Frances Forster, of Etherstone, mentioned in this monument, of his father's name, being general of the rebel-forces in the year 1715, his manours and estates of Bambrough and Blanchland were forfeited to the crown. At the very time of his defection, he was one of the representatives in parliament for this county, and only in the 34th year of his age. He escaped out of Newgate to Rome, and died of an asthma at Bologne in France, in November, 1738 (u). Lord Crew, Bishop of Durham, his uncle, purchased his forfeited estates, and at his death left them to charitable uses. For the great esteem he had for an academical education, he gave by will, bearing date, 24th June, 1720, twelve exhibitions of 20 l. per ann. each, to Lincoln-College, in Oxford, to be disposed of by the rector and fellows to as many under-graduate commoners, natives of the diocese of Durham, or of Northallertonshire, or Howdenshire, in the county of York, or of Leicestershire, Newbold-Verdon in Oxfordshire, or of Northamptonshire, to be held for eight years, and no longer, unless for an extraordinary reason by leave from the rector; the diocese of Durham to have the preference. His lordship also for the aug-

(x) My trustees, John Montague, John Dolben, John Morley, William Lupton, and Thomas Eden, their heirs and assigns, shall out of the rents, issues, and profits of my manours, hereditaments, and premises, in the county of Northumberland, and Durham, for ever hereafter pay or cause to be paid the yearly sum of 20 l. to each and every of twelve exhibitioners of Lincoln College, in the university of Oxford, which I have already named and appointed, or which I shall hereafter name and appoint, and to each and every of twelve exhibitioners to be elected and chosen after my decease, as herein aftermentioned, who shall be undergraduate commoners in Lincoln-college aforesaid, and who are or shall be natives of the diocese of Durham, and for want of such natives, of Northallertonshire, or Hawdenshire, in the county of York, or of Leicestershire, and particularly of the parish of Newbold Verdon of the diocese of Oxford, whereof I was formerly Bishop, or of the county of Northampton, which is the county I was born in. And my will is, and I do hereby direct, that such exhibitioner and exhibitioners on any vacancy or vacancies of any exhibitioner or exhibitioners by me already named and appointed, or upon any other vacancy or vacancies whatsoever, shall be from time to time, and at all times, for ever after my decease elected and chosen by the rector and fellows of Lincoln-college aforesaid for the time being, or by the major part of them, and to enjoy the said exhibitions or annual payments for eight years (if they respectively continue so long in the college aforesaid), and no longer, unless they have leave from the rector of the college aforesaid for the time being to be absent, which I desire he will not grant but upon reasonable cause. And I do hereby direct, that as often as any vacancy or vacancies shall happen of such exhibitioner or exhibitioners, others shall be elected in their room within three months in manner as aforesaid. And upon this farther trust, that my trustees, John Montague, John Dolben, John Morley, William Lupton, and Thomas Eden, their heirs and assigns, do, and shall, out of the rents, issues, and profits, of the said manours, lands, and hereditaments, in the said counties of Northumberland and Durham, devised to them as aforesaid, for ever hereafter pay the annual sums hereafter mentioned, (that is to say) unto the minister of the said parish-church of Bambrough, in the said county of Northumberland, and his successors, the yearly sum of 40 l. and to the minister of the parish-church of Shotley, in the said county, and his successors, the yearly sum of 20 l.

They received annually five quarters of wheat from the manours of Tugball and Swinhoe (z). The corporation of Newcastle upon Tyne paid them an annual rent of 13 marks, and 10 s. (a). At the dissolution it was valued at 12 l. 17 s. 8 d. Dugd. and Speed. It was granted to the dean and chapter of Durham, 33 K. Henry VIII (b). It stood on the most romantic part of the island, on a pleasant lawn, edged with rocks, by a fresh-water spring. Near it was a fort, built for its defence by the last prior of Durham, but one, Prior Castle (c). On the north-east side are five other small islands, consisting of bleak, barren rocks.

A mile north from Bambrough, is

Henry V*, and protector and governor in France, with whom he was sixteen years in that kingdom, and was called Monsieur de Arches. He was a great favourite with his grace, and acquired great riches. On his return home, he built the castle of Stretlam (e). He was high sheriff of Northumberland, 6 K. Edward IV (f); his arms, ermin, three bows bent, gules. Their father, Sir George, was in the expedition against Scotland, 33 K. Henry VIII, 1544, under Edward Seimour, Earl of Hertford, by whom, with many others, he was knighted, at Leith, near Edenburgh (g). He was marshal of Berwick upon Tweed, 1 Q. Elizabeth, 1558, and had a share in the victory obtained over the Scots at Swinton, by Sir Henry Percy, brother to Thomas Percy the sixth Earl of Northumberland; the forces on both sides consisting of the neighbouring garrisons (h). He was one of her majesty's privy counsellors in the 14th year of her reign, 1571, and a representative in parliament for the borough of Morpeth (i). He was of the council of 1571, for the government of the northern counties, the year following; Henry Hastings, Earl of Huntington, then Lord President. His brother, Sir Robert Bowes, Knt. was Captain of Norham-castle, 33 K. Henry VIII, 1541. He was in that year in the grand cavalcade of the Yorkshire gentlemen, who, to the number of 200, cloathed

He was their speaker (k). He was taken prisoner the year following in an expedition against the Scots, and detained without ransom, contrary to the laws of the marches. He was released in 1543, by the favour of the Earl of Arran, then regent of Scotland (l); and made treasurer of the army sent into France (m). He was of the council at York, 29, 30 K. Henry VIII, and 4 K. Edward VI (n). Bernard-Castle being besieged, 23d November, 12 Q. Elizabeth, 1570, the two brothers defended it by their valour for eleven days, and then obtained an honourable capitulation (o). Sir William Bowes, Knt. was one of her majesty's commissioners for border-causes in Scotland, in the 40th year of her reign, 1597 (p). He was also her ambassador extraordinary in that kingdom, in 1599 (q). He was of the council at York, 41st of her majesty's reign, and 1 K. James I. The late George Bowes, Esq; was a representative for the county of Durham in several parliaments to the time of his death. His only daughter and heir married the right honourable the Earl of Strathmore, who by an act of parliament assumed the name of Bowes, and is one of the sixteen Peers of Scotland.

of the sea, on the south side of the Ostium of the river of Warn, which is accounted a tolerable harbour for small vessels of about eighty tons ; being about seven or eight feet water in full tides.

On Spinelfton-hill, near Budle, is an intrenchment, nearly round, with three deep ditches and high Valla to the north and south, and two at the west, with a slope to the east, entered by a very wide port ; two exploratory mounts, hard by, to the south ; and another to the north. It is Danish.

A little to the west of this intrenchment, is another, in the form of a crescent, very large, with the small harbour of Warn, to the north, and a romantic precipice to the south ; three ditches and Valla to the west and south-west ; the Valla of turf and stone, as usual, and still pretty high in most places ; the port to the north, the ground sloping to the harbour, a hollow way extending almost to it from the precipice. It has a most extensive sea and land prospect on all sides, of the two castles of Bambrugh and Holy Island, and of all ships passing and repassing. This is also Danish.

On the north side of the river, facing it, is

Ul-chefter (r), i. e. Castrum ulterius, the out-guard or fort to secure the pass of the river and the harbour. By its name it seems to be Roman. It was one of the manours of the barony of Wooler, of which it was held by Sir Robert de Ulchefer in the reign of K. Henry III, and 1 K. Edward I (s). He was one of the com-

It is a well built villa, on a gradual slope, within two miles of the sea, the prospect of which is intercepted to the east and north-east by the ridge of a hill. At the north-east end is the church, dedicated to St. Mary. It was built in 1700, and sealed in 1759. On the top of the hill is the ruin of the old chapel. Lindis-

Lindisfarn, or Holy Island, which was a bishop's see, founded by Oswald, King of Northumberland. Aidan, a Scotchman, was the first bishop, and had that whole kingdom for his diocese. Historians have given him an excellent character. By his prudent conduct, and the unwearied pains he took in the ministry, he acquired great esteem. His country-idiom not being understood by a Saxon-audience, the king himself became the interpreter of his discourses, which had such an influence, that crowds thronged to him for baptism. And no wonder, since, besides the advantages of his own eloquence, and personal good qualities, his humility and condescension, uncommon assiduity and humanity, he had the authority and example of a benevolent and good king, and the highest and best men of his court, to back him. For how captivating is religion, how persuasive her voice, when uttered from the throne, and her precepts explained in all the beauty and force of language? Aidan affected no state. He travelled on foot, not by necessity, but choice, (for he that was the favourite of a good king could not be in such circumstances) to win the Heathens to embrace and love Christianity. His care for the poor was such, that he was their solicitor with the rich, to become their patrons and benefactors; using all his interest to gain them favour, to get them relief, and to set them above misery and distress. May they never want such friends! After a life thus piously spent in his bishoprick for 17 years, he died, 31st August, 651. He was succeeded by

Finan, one of the same monastery. Finan had orders from Gregory, the Roman Pontiff, to remove his See to York, but Popes in those days having no influence in Northumberland, he continued it here, preferring the model of government in the Eastern churches to that of Rome. He built a cathedral-church, which he dedicated to St. Peter. He thatched it, after the Scotch fashion, with reeds. It was afterwards covered with lead by Bishop Eadbert. His pains and success in making converts to Christianity were very great. He was so fortunate as to gain two crowned heads to embrace it, Penda, King of Mercia, and Segibert, King of the East Angles. He is said to have baptized them at Wall-town, now Welton, twelve miles west from Newcastle. Their subjects following their example, also turned Christians, under the ministry and preaching of their Bishops, Diuna, and Cedd, ordained and set over them by Finan. Lindisfarn was governed by this bishop ten years. He died, 14th February, 661. His successor was

Coleman, a Scotchman also, who was bishop only three years. Chagrined at King Oswy's taking part against him with the Romanists in the point of Church-government, he resigned his See, and returned to Scotland. Thirty Englishmen, and all his countrymen in the island, devoted to a religious life, went with him. He lived to the year 676. His successors were such as adhered to the principles of the church of Rome, of whom the first was

Tuda. He came into England with Coleman. He died soon after his election. The next chosen to the episcopal dignity was

Chad, a modest and humble man, who accepted it rather to please others, than himself. He was styled, not Bishop of Lindisfarn, but of York, by the desire of his sovereign, King Alfred, who designed it for his governor or preceptor, Wilfrid. He was twice consecrated, first at Winchester, by Bishop Wine, on the vacancy of the See of Canterbury, and next at York, by Theodore, the new metropolitan. In complaisance to that prelate, and the two kings of Northumberland, Oswy, and Alfred, he retired to his monastery, and resigned his bishoprick in favour of

Wilfrid,

Wilfrid, who held it but a short while. King Oswey dying, and Alfred being dethroned, Egfrid obtained both their kingdoms. In his reign came on the great revolution of the diocese of Lindisfarn. In the time of Paulinus, York had been dignified with the title of an archiepiscopal See. Theodore was resolved to lessen its power, and to mortify and humble Wilfrid, with whom he was disgusted. He deposed him. He then obtained the royal licence to divide the kingdom of Northumberland into two dioceses, York and Lindisfarn; the first containing Deira, the latter Bernicia. Wilfrid, in high resentment, went to Rome, to procure his restoration by the Pope. The Pope stood his friend, held a chapter, and sent him home with their resolution in form, that he should be reinstated. This, with the pope's letter, he presented to the king, who, exasperated at his presumption, reproached him with procuring them by bribery, and cast him into prison, where he might have remained had it not been for the intercession of Ebba, the king's aunt, and on promise of his never entering Northumberland more. He retired to the monastery of Glessenburg, of which Berthwald was abbot, Nephew to Ethelred, King of Mercia. The abbot entertained him but a short while. He was forced to send him off by the commands of his uncle, Ethelred, to oblige King Egfrid. His next retreat is to the court of Adelwach, King of Suffex. Adelwach, on the conversion of his people, gave him the bishoprick of Selfey. Now Theodore, grown feeble and old, and desiring to be in friendship with him before his death, got him restored to the See of York, by his earnest intercession with King Alfred, Egfrid's successor. When he left it, it was divided into two dioceses, but now on his return he found it split into three; Hexham making the third. He attempted the re-union of York and Hexham, but with an importunity so disagreeable at court, that he was again expelled. He withdrew to the court of Etheldred, King of Mercia. He had the address to make that monarch his friend, and to get one of the four bishopricks in his kingdom, the bishoprick of Leicester, then vacant. His passion for pre-eminence, and immoderate love of power, hurt him in his new situation. The king, and his nephew, Berthwald, archbishop of Canterbury, being offended with him for some undue liberties, they resolved, in concert with Alfred, king of Northumberland, to clip the plumes of his ambition. They tried him by a synod, charged him with many things, and at length requested a formal resignation of his bishoprick. On his refusal, he was deposed. He was now 70 years of age, yet not so feeble, but he took another journey to Rome for redress. The pope convened a council, and sent him back with a decree for his restoration, with letters recommendatory to the two kings, and the archbishop. The archbishop, out of respect to the pope, and the king of Mercia having taken on him the habit of a monk, and the king of Northumberland falling sick, and relenting on his death-bed, received him again into favour. But another difficulty came in his way. Alfred, king of Northumberland, died before he could be replaced in his see of York. However, he acquired so much favour with his successor, the young king Osred, as to have a council held near the river Nidd (c). With great difficulty he obtained the bishoprick of Hexham, the third part only of the antient diocese of Northumberland (d). But to return to Lindisfarn.

Eata was made bishop of it. He was one of Aidan's scholars. Aidan, upon his first coming to this see, undertook the education of twelve Saxon children, whom he trained up to piety and learning. Before his death, he had the pleasure of seeing Eata preferred to be abbot of Melros; who left that monastery to be abbot of Lindisfarn, in 664. He presided over it fourteen years. He had not been long bishop before his diocese of Bernicia was divided into two, Landisfarn and Hexham, as before-mentioned. Tumbert was chosen to the latter. Being against Theodore's having any jurisdiction over the northern churches, he was deposed in a full chapter of bishops, convened by the archbishop of Teisford, by the river Aln, 684. They proceeded, after his degradation, to elect another in his room. The choice fell on Cuthbert, a monk of Lindisfarn. Cuthbert was with difficulty brought to comply to accept it, and, at length, only on condition that he might remain at Landisfarn. It was agreed therefore to give him the see of Landisfarn, and to translate Eata to Hexham.

Cuthbert had his education in the monastery of Melros, under Eata, who had brought him with him to Landisfarn, and settled him in that abbey. He was an exemplary, modest, humble, and good man, took great pains to make others so, would go for whole weeks and months into the most unfrequented and uncivilized parts of the diocese, moors and mountains, for that purpose, by himself and alone, where other learned persons would not come. He was handsome, had a graceful elocution, and a persuasive manner, which with his other good qualities, his extensive charity and good nature, were powerful and irresistible charms. Finding his health declining, and unable to sustain the weight of episcopal cares, he resigned his bishopric, after he had held it two years. He survived his resignation only two months, dying 20th March, 687, at his hermitage or solitude in the island of Farn, and for his eminent virtues was canonized.

The way of drawing and representing saints among the Saxons, may be seen in that curious piece of antiquity found near Ashelney, in Somersetshire, described and figured by two eminent antiquaries (e); of pure gold, weighing about three guineas, in enamel, covered over with chrystal, representing St. Cuthbert, as is supposed, sitting in a chair, with this inscription on a plane rising obliquely, in Roman or Gallo-Italic letters, except two.

AELFRED ME L HETT GEWYRAN.

Alfredus me jussit fabricari.

On the reverse are flowers. K. Alfred preferred these characters to the Saxon, and, when he swayed the scepter, brought them into use (f). This curious memorial of St. Cuthbert was found in the very place of that glorious monarch's retreat and deliverance from the Danes, fortified by him in time of war (g), and in time of peace converted into a monastery (h). Dr. Musgrave thinks this curious cimolium an undeniable instance of the use of images coming from the heathens into the Christian church (i).

On the vacancy of the see of Lindisfarn by the death of St. Cuthbert, it was governed for one year by Wilfrid, bishop of Hexham, on the expiration of which, Eadbert was chosen to succeed him. This prelate is recorded to have been a very pious man, to have understood the holy scriptures well, to have drawn them into his life and practice, and to have been a liberal father to the helpless stranger, the poor and indigent. In March, 698, he removed St. Cuthbert's body from the island of Farn to that of Lindisfarn. He survived that act of kindness for his venerable friend and predecessor but a few days, and was buried in the same tomb with him, having been a bishop ten years.

Egfrith, or Eadfrith, was elected to succeed him in the same year. He was a monk of Lindisfarn, of which his father was abbot. In that retirement he translated the Gospels into Latin, decorated after his death with gilding and jewels by his successor, with painting by Bilfrid, an anchorite, and with an interlineary Saxon version by Aldred, a priest. This book fell into the hands of Sir Robert Cotton, whom few such curiosities escaped, and is now in his library in the British Museum. He was eminent for his learning in the age he lived, and loved to encourage it in others. By his advice, Bede wrote the Life of St. Cuthbert in prose and verse, whose memory he so much revered, that one of his first episcopal acts was, the repairing of his chapel or oratory in the island of Farn. Yet, though he venerated that exemplary and pious prelate, he did not altogether imitate him. He attended not the cares of his high office so strictly as became him. For this he was warmly expostulated with by his friend Bede, in a letter full of spirit, piety, and good sense. He put him in mind of the weight of his charge, the duties of a Christian bishop. He earnestly pressed him to remember his Saviour's commission, how he was to admonish even the highest orders within his jurisdiction, and remind them of their duty; exhort them not to build.

build monasteries and churches to get a name and a reputation, but for the glory of God, and the increase of virtue; find out and punish dissembling priests, who had the form, but not the power of godliness; employ his episcopal leisure not in pleasing the world, but God; in studying his holy scriptures, and translating them into the Saxon language for the benefit of his own and other dioceses. The bishop, so far from being angry with this freedom of his friend, received his letter kindly, and returned an answer, calling it "An Answer of Gratitude." He set about translating several of the sacred books into the Saxon tongue. This shews, that, however remiss he might be in some things, in reproving the great for their ambition, or the little for their hypocrisy, he had the true spirit and temper of a Christian bishop, and might be led into an over-forgiveness and remissness; by an excess of humility and modesty, his natural candour and good nature. He was bishop twenty-four years, dying in 721. He was succeeded by

Ethelwold, abbot of Melros, a scholar, companion, and friend of St. Cuthbert. In his time king Ceolwulf divested himself of his royalty, to add to the number of the religious in the monastery of Lindisfarn. This bishop died in 740. The next was

Kenulf, chosen the same year. His episcopacy abounded with troubles. K. Egbert imprisoned him in the castle of Bambrough, on suspicion of a murder being committed with his knowledge and connivance on one of the royal line, named Offa, who had taken sanctuary within his jurisdiction. He did not get his liberty till the year 780, and then with difficulty. Sorrow and age had brought him so weak, that he turned over the burthen of his his office to another, and spent the remainder of his days in a course of strict piety and devotion. He died in 783.

Higbald, his coadjutor, was elected his successor. He was not long bishop before the Danish rovers made a descent upon the island, cruelly used the monks, knocked some on the head, drowned others, and robbed and burnt their monastery. The abbey-church was spared. The bishop, and some of his clergy, escaped unhurt. He lived a great while after in his see, unmolested, and free from such alarming accidents. He died in 803. His see was filled up by

Ecgbert, who was bishop eighteen years. He died in 821. The next was Heathured. He had this dignity nine years. He died in 830; and was succeeded by Egfrid, a gentleman of birth and fortune, of an enlarged benevolence, and a free and liberal spirit. He built the church of Norham, removed the tomb of K. Ceowulf to it, gave that village, and five more, viz. Gedwold, Gainsford, Ilcliff, Wicliff, and Billingham, to his see of Lindisfarn, which he governed sixteen years; dying in 845.

Eadbert was chosen in his place, of whom there is nothing memorable, but that he was bishop eight years, and died in 854. The same year

Eardulph succeeded him, who had a most troublesome time by another descent of the Danes in 875, under their General Halfden. In that year, Halfden made an entire conquest of Nor- thumberland, set a king or vice-roy over it, whom he dethroned the next year, and divided his kingdom among his officers, which had lasted 330 years, from the time of Ida, the first king. Bishop Eardulph, on the first news of their approach, fled, with his clergy. Desirous of having St. Cuthbert's bones preserved, they carried them, and what they could of value, with them. They wandered long from one place to another, without a settled habitation, for the tedious melancholy space of seven years. At length, they set themselves down at Chester-le-street, then called Craig, and by the Saxons Concestre, from its situation by the river Cone, five miles from Durham, and seven from Newcastle upon Tyne. Here Fardulph enlarged his diocese, by adding to it the vacant one of Hexham, in 883, which had been without a bishop for sixty-three years, from the time of Tidforth's resignation. Both now go under the name of the Bishoprick of Lindisfarn. He had no more troubles under his government of it. He was bishop forty-six years, and died in the year 900. His successors lived here very happily till the year 995. Aldwin was then bishop. The Danes infesting his diocese, he and his clergy thought it prudent to remove for their security, with St. Cuthbert's remains, to Rippon. There they stayed only four months, all being quiet again. Bishop Aldwin thought to have come back with them to Chestre-le-street, but by the occasion of a dream upon the road, settled at Durham (k), where his successors have continued to this day, many of whom have been as great lights to learning and religion, as their revenues were great and resplendent, derived from the pious munificence of those who held episcopacy in veneration. Its friends were very many, and liberal to a high degree, as may be judged by some of their gifts to this diocese. K. Hardiknute gave all the land lying between the river Tees and Tyne. K. Canute gave Staintborpe and Raby. K. Ethelstan gave South Weremouth, with eleven villages; besides many church-ornaments to his clergy. Stire, a nobleman, gave the lordship of Darlington, with its appurtenances, and two plowlands in Lumley. Swaculph, son of Kikell, gave the lordships of Bradburg, Morden, Griseby, cum Saca & Soena. K. William II, gave North Allerton, which bishop Pudsey built, and gave Sadberg, purchased by him of K. Richard. Bishop Walcher gave Farrow; and Tillered, abbot of Heffereham, gave South Roden; bishop Egfrid gave the church and village of Norham, &c. K. Egfrid gave Chester-le-street (l).

St. Cuthbert's shrine had this privilege, that whoever fled to it, should be safe for thirty-seven days (m).

Such were antiently the powers and revenues of this bishoprick, called St. Cuthbert's patrimony. It is still, perhaps, the best in England, being a principality, vested with large Regalia, erected in troublesome times for the security and defence of the borders.

I have been the more particular in my account of this bishoprick of Lindisfarn, and its bishops, because their history is a piece of antiquity, which shews the spirit and temper of the first professors of Christianity in Northumberland. The monastery occasionally mentioned, of Aidan's foundation (n), was under the government of the bishops (o). The abbot and monks were the cathedral clergy. The cathedral, and the neighbouring village of Fenham, the village and church of Norham, with other possessions, were given by William de Cavilepho to the monastery of Durham (p). Here was afterwards a cell of Benedictine Monks, subordinate to that priory. Its annual revenues, 26 K. Henry VIII, were valued at 48 l. 18 s. 11 d. Dugd. 60 l. 5 s. Speed. In the 33d of the same reign they were granted to the dean and chapter of Durham, in whose possession they now are (q).

The cathedral has been a splendid structure, of which there are still some remains. Two towers are standing, also three isles, with their beautiful pillars and arches. On the south side, are the foundations of the abbey; both built with red freestone.

On the west side, and within a few yards of the fine cathedral-ruin, is the parish-church, dedicated to St. John (r). It has three isles. On the north side of the chancel is a mural monument of white marble with the following inscription.

Here lyeth the Body of Ann Jones, some time Wife to Henry Jones, Esq; which Ann died the 9th of Feb. 1625.

The village is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. To the north-east of it is a garrison commanding the harbour. At ebb-tides both horse and foot may come from the main land to the island. It is well delineated by Speed (s). It has its name of Lindisfarn from its situation by the osium of Lind-rivulet, and the Celtic Fahren, Recessus. Egelwine, bishop of Durham, to escape the vengeance of K. William I, after the defection of Northumberland, retired to it with his clergy, the church-treasure, the jewels, and the body of St. Cuthbert, for security, in the year 1069; where they remained upwards of three months (t). It gives its name of Holy Island, to a considerable tract of country on the coast, called Holy Island-shire (u).

We next pass by the village of Fenwick, and Fenwick-Park, on the left hand of the post-road, in the jurisdiction of Lindisfarn; also the village of Beal, on a pleasant slope, half a mile from the shore (v), and in the same liberty. It has its name from the famous Irish female saint Begogh, the patroness of Kirkby Begogh, and of a town called Beal in Yorkshire (w).

Near the 7th mile-stone, on the left hand, by Lind-rivulet, crossed by a small bridge, is

His seat is the old tower in which K. Edward II. received the homage of Thomas Earl of Lancaster for the earldom of Lincoln, 1311 (y). It is kept in good repair. On the south-front is the family-arms, but no date. Hard by is the ruin of an old chapel. The gardens, in which is a conservatory, are bounded to the south by the slow running stream of Lind (z).

Seven miles from Haggerston, is the villa of Tweedmouth, so called from its situation by the ostium of the river Tweed; memorable for the general muster of the army that was to march against Scotland, 4 K. Edward I. Here the barons, knights, and tenants by warlike serjanties made their Profrum Serviciorum, the proffer of services, before Sir Bartholomew Badlesmere, lieutenant to the constable of England, and Sir Nicholas de Segrave, marshal of the king's host, on Thursday next after the Nativity of St. Mary, 10th September.

Here was an antient hospital, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, now called, the Spital, the mastership of which was in the disposal of the bishop of Durham (a).

We cross the Tweed by a strong and handsome stone-bridge, on the north side of which is the antient town of Berwick (b). It was given by Edgar, King of Scotland, to the see of Durham, with the lands of Coldingham to the priory of Durham, in honour of St. Cuthbert, for a victory obtained under his banner over his uncle Donald. Canulph was then bishop, by whose defection and disloyalty this noble jewel was lost to that see; the pious Edgar taking it from that ungrateful prelate into his own hands again (c).

On the convention held for the ransom of William, King of Scotland, in the reign of K. Henry II, at the round sum of 100,000 l. it was one of the four garrisons delivered up for security of the payment; the other three being Roxbrough, Edinburgh, and Striveling. K. Henry, in whom the antient royal Saxon line was restored to the crown of England (d), fortified it with a castle (e). The Scotch King did homage to him for his kingdom, as mentioned in another place (f). The ransom being paid, this and the other pledges were restored by K. Richard I. It remained as an appendage to Scotland, till the reign of K. Edward I. That victorious monarch, on the death of King Alexander, held a parliament at it for the election of his successor, 1292. Among the powerful competitors, were William de Vescy, baron of Athwick, William de Ros, baron of Wark, upon Tweed, John Baliol and Robert Bruce. John Baliol was chosen (g). He did homage to Edward for his crown at Newcastle, in the same year, 26th December, on St. Stephen's day (h). In a little time he broke his oath of fealty. Incensed at his perjury, K. Edward invested Berwick with a large fleet and army. His fleet consisted of twenty-four ships; his army, of 4000 horse, and 30,000 foot, besides 5000 horse, and 1000 foot, of the bishoprick of Durham. The townsmen burnt three or four of his ships, and forced the rest out of the harbour. By the bravery of his troops, and his manœuvres, he was an overmatch for his enemies, and made great slaughter. This victory he obtained in the 24th year of his reign, 1296. It is said about fifteen thousand Scotchmen were killed, at least, and not above twenty-eight Englishmen. A commercial building, called The Red Hall, belonging to a company of Flemish merchants, fortified in the form of a tower, was reduced to ashes, with thirty of them in it, on their refusing to surrender. He lodged in the castle fifteen days. He encompassed the town with a ditch, eighty feet broad, and as many in depth. The surrender of the castles of Roxbrough, Dunbar, and Edinburgh, soon followed. When he was before the latter, he met with a remarkable instance of honour in a Scotchman, the chief officer of the castle, who upon his majesty's letters to his council being brought to him by an unfaithful and treacherous messenger, named Lewin, a Welchman, delivered them back over the walls to the king unopened, and the Welchman to be punished, who was hanged on a high gallows, and quartered (i). A rare example in an enemy, worthy of being remembered by those poltrons who make a practice of opening the letters of others, to know their concerns!

K. Edward, in the above-mentioned year, 1296, having made a compleat conquest of Scotland, received the homage and fealty of all the Scotch nobility at this town, August 24th, in the presence of the English parliament, splendid and numerous. The oath of fealty was in the following terms, as translated from the old French of H. Knighton, canon of Leicester (k), in an ingenious modern history (l).

 “ noble prince, and our dear Lord, Sir Edward, King of England, “ Lord of Ireland, and Duke of Aquitain, we do faithfully pro“ mise, for ourselves, and for our heirs, upon pain of body and “ estate, that we will serve him truly and loyally against all man“ ner of people that may live and die whenever it shall be re“ quired or commanded by our said Lord the King of England or

 “ we can, and fet upon his enemies with all our forces where-“ ever they may be found. And to the end that we may firmly “ keep and hold these presents, we do bind ourselves, our heirs,
 “ and our goods; and we have sworn to this upon the Blessed “ Evangelists. Besides all we that are present, and every of us “ separately, have done homage to our Lord the King of England, “ in these words,

“ I will be true and loyal, and bear true faith and allegiance
 “ to Edward, King of England, and his heirs, and serve him with “ life and limb, and do him all earthly honour against all man“ ner of people that may live and die; and from henceforth I “ will not bear arms, nor be aiding in counsel, against him, or “ against his heirs, on any cause whatsoever. So help me God,
 “ and all the faints.

“ In witness of these things we have made these letters patents,
 “ and sealed them with our seals.

Among the Scotch peers thus doing homage in that august assembly, was Sir Gilbert de Humfravil, Earl of Angus, in Scotland, and Baron of Prudhow, in Northumberland.

Not only the barons or great tenants in capite made their submission in form, but on giving the Scots a new chancellor, a new great seal, new judges, and a new treasurer, the lesser tenants were called upon to make theirs by a written deed, to remain as a memorial of their being subjects by conquest to the crown of England.

The Scots revolting, King Edward reduced them by force of arms to obedience, in 1300; a year memorable for the renewal of the great charters, and the new statute made for their confirmation, intituled Articuli super Chartas, or articles upon the charters (m).

To hold the Scots in the greater subjection through fear, he ordered one half of the body of Sir William Wallase, after his execution, to be set over Berwick-bridge, in the 33d year of his reign, 1305; and the year following the Countess of Bowgham was set by his command on the walls of Berwick-castle in a wooden-cage, for putting the crown of Scotland on the head of Robert Bruce at Scone, in the absence of her brother, the Earl of Fife, then at his manour of Whitwick in Leicestershire (n).

By the policy and valour of Edward, Berwick was in the possession of the English twenty years. After his death, the Scots acquired it, 11 K. Edward II, 1318, on the 2d of April; not by bravery, but by corruption. Sir Pierce Spalding delivered it up to Thomas Randall, Earl of Murray, in consideration of lands given him in Angus, in Scotland (o). It remained in their possession till 7 K. Edward III, 1333; when it was recovered by a great victory obtained over them by his majesty on Hallidon-Hill, near the town, with very little loss; his enemies losing a prodigious number in the battle and the pursuit, 7 Earls, 900 Knights, 400 Esquires, and about 32,000 common men, and by their own confession 14,000. The castle surrendered the next day, being St. Margaret's (p).

The Scots regained the town, but not the castle, 29 K. Edward III, 1355, early in the morning of the sixth of November, by surprize. The king was then in France. In January following, 1356, he came before it with a fleet and army. He entered the castle by a mine, to the great joy of the English commander, and the whole garison. The miners were brought from the forest of Dean, in Gloucestershire, and other parts of England. The Scots, perceiving this, gave up the town. Upon its reduction, his majesty repaired the fortifications (q).

The castle was taken by surprize, by the Scots, 1 K. Richard II, 1377. They were dispossessed of it in the same year by the Earl of Northumberland, the Lords Lucy and Greystock, and others, who took it by storm, and put every Scotchman to the sword, except their captain, Sir Alexander Ramsay. The Earl of Northumberland entered Scotland with 3000 men of arms, and 7000 archers, and wasted the lands of the Earl of March for three days together, in resentment for burning Roxbrough (r).

The castle was taken by the Scots, by surprize in the night the year following, on Thursday before St. Andrew's day. The English constable of it was Sir Robert Bointon, who was slain. His wife, children, and servants, were permitted to depart on promise of paying 3000 marks within three weeks, or yielding themselves prisoners again; but on the ninth day after, it was retaken by the Earl of Northumberland, and his son, Henry Lord Percy, with 400 men in two hours. Sir Matthæw Redman, who married Johanna, the widow of William Lord Greystock, and afterwards of Anthony Lord Lucy, was made constable of it (s). Sir Matthæw's orders to guard the town were so strict, that even the great Duke of Lancaster was refused admittance on his return from an embassage in Scotland (t).

After the battle of Towton, 1461, King Henry VI, resigned it to James III, King of Scotland, as a reward for his protection; from whom it was taken, 22 K. Edward IV, 1482, August 24; and continued in the possession of the English crown ever since (u).

For setting the boundaries and limits of it, commissioners were appointed by K. Richard III, in the 2d year of his reign, and K. James III, of Scotland, 1484; when it was agreed, that the debateable ground should remain in its antient state, without culture, buildings, or inhabitants. The names of the English commissioners were Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, Lord Grey- flock, Lord Scrope of Masbam, Sir William Gascoign, Sir Robert Constable, &c. (v).

The lord warden of the east marches was governor of the town for the time being, and appointed the officers of the garison, for whose conduct he was answerable.

It was summoned to send two members to parliament by King Henry VIII. It is governed by a mayor, recorder, and four bailiffs, chosen annually by the burgessees, in number about 300. They elect the two members of parliament. The mayor and bailiffs are the returning officers (w).

By a treaty between King Edward VI. and Mary Queen of Scotland, dated at Norham, 10th June, 1551, it was made a county-town, or as the record expresses it, a free town, independent of the two kingdoms (x).

By the charter of King James I. granted 1602, the mayor, recorder, and four bailiffs, or any three of them, the mayor always to be one, are impowered to hold in their Guild-hall, or Tollbooth, one court of pleas every Tuesday in every second week throughout the year; to have four serjeants at mace, and no more, and a coroner; a merchant's guild with hanse, and all other liberties, privileges, and free customs belonging to that guild; to prohibit merchant-strangers to dispose of any goods within their precincts, except in gros or by wholesale.

They have full power and authority to frame, constitute, ordain, make, and establish, from time to time, such laws, statutes, ordinances, and constitutions, as shall appear to them, or the greater part of them, the mayor always to be one, good, profitable, wholesome, honest, and necessary, for the good government of the town.

They may purchase manours, messuages, lands, tenements, rectories, tithes, rents, reversions, services, and other possessions, and hereditaments whatsoever, which are not held immediately of the crown, provided that the same do not exceed the clear annual value of 60 l. per annum, the statute of laws and tenements not to be given in mortmain, or any other act, ordinance, proviso, or restraint thereof had, made, decreed, or provided to the contrary notwithstanding.

They are exonerated or quit for ever of all Toll, Pentage, Passage, Murage, Paunage, Cranage, Lassage, Cariage, Kaigge, Vinage, Alebate, and Reckate, through his Majesty's dominions, with Seck, and Sack, and Toll, and Theam, Ward and Ward-Penny, and all other customs to be performed of their own proper goods and merchandise, also of all payment of subsidies, taxes, impositions, tenths, fiftenths, and exactions whatsoever; also of Prisage of Wines, Butlerage of Wines, and of all other impositions, called the imposts, Butlerage and Prisage of Wines, for any wines carried, unloaden, or put to land within their own port of Berwick, or in any other of the members or creeks of it.

The corporation have a power to impose a reasonable tax or tallage upon the rents and other things of the inhabitants, without molestation or hindrance from the king's officers, provided they apply it only to the chamber's use.

They

They have two weekly markets, on Wednesday and Saturday ; also an annual fair ; with a court of Pycpowder, Tolls, Tallages, Picage, Fines, Amerciments, and all other customs, liberties, profits, and emoluments whatsoever belonging to such markets, fairs, and courts of pycpowder. The mayor is clerk of the market.

They have a Court Lect and view of Frank Pledge of all the burgesſes, inhabitants, and reſidents, within their juuriſdiction.

The mayor has the cuſtody of the gates, poſterns, and wickets, and the cuſtody of the keys of the gates.

The mayor, recorder, bailiffs, and burgesſes, or any three or more of them, the mayor and recorder always to be two, may do judgment of Inſangthiefe, and Outſangthiefe. They have the power of aſſize over the priſoners ; authority to enquire, hear, and determine all Felonies, Murders, Homicides, Robberies, Aſſaults, Riots, Routs, Forces, Outcryes, into lands or tenements, treſpaſſes againſt the crown, unlawful Conventicles, Ambidexters, Conſpiracies, Contempts, Concealments, and alſo of all other Miſpriſions, Offences, Miſleeds, Defaults, Negligences, Cauſes, and Articles, within the liberties of the corporation.

The coroner makes return from time to time of all juries, inquisitions, pannels, attachments, and indentures, taken before the mayor, recorder, &c. He attends them in all gaol-deliveries, and does the office of a ſheriff. All fines, ransoms, iſſues, amerciments, forfeitures, profits and perquiſites of the mayor's courts are levied and raiſed under his authority, and go into the town-chamber ; alſo all goods and chattels whatsoever waved, Deodands, Chattels of Felons, Fugitives, and Outlaws, convicted and attainted.

The

The mayor and corporation have all the Seignory, Manour, Borough-Town, and Soke of Berwick upon Tweed, with all and singular their rights, members, and appurtenances; all the houses, edifices, buildings, stables, store-houses, lands, tenements, cottages, waste-grounds and soil whatsoever which belonged to the crown within the Signory, Manour, or Borough; all the crown-lands and fields adjoining to the town, commonly called the Bounds and Fields of Berwick; also all those crown-lands, tenements, meadows, pastures, feedings, commons, demefne-lands, messuages, mills, houses, edifices, barns, stables, out-houses, orchards, gardens, wastes, heaths, furz, moors, marches, fruits, profits, waters, fishings, fishing-places, suit, soke, rents, reversions, and services, as well of free and customary tenements, fermes, fee-fermes, annuities, knights-fees, wards, marriages, eschaets, releases, herriots, fines, amerciments, rights, jurisdictions, franchises, privileges, and hereditaments whatsoever, of whatsoever kind, nature, or degree, or by whatsoever names they be known, lying or situated within the Signory, Manour, and Borough of Berwick.

This Signory or Manour is thus abuttelled; beginning at the port or haven, and extending northwards by the shore of the sea, and the sea-banks, to a certain path or way, commonly called, The brown rod, and by the same brown rod westward to the rivulet of Witteter, and from the other side of it by the same brown rod to the river Tweed, and from thence by the banks of the Tweed eastward unto the port or haven of the borough of Berwick.

The crown hath reserved to itself the castle, built on the town-wall; all the edifices, and buildings belonging to it; the water-mill near the wall, commonly called, The castle-water; all the lands, tenements, closes, and other hereditaments, known, or called by the several names of the Inner castle-hills, enclosed, and the Outer castle-hills, not enclosed, the New water-haugh, and Lumsden's avery, Gayn's-law, Gouk-Haugh, the Sunk, and the Maudlin-field, the Coney-garths, the Marshalls meadow near Lammerton, the meadow, called, The Horsman's bat, the Horsman's meadows, the Yellow-Gowdon-meadow adjoining near or upon Latham, and extending to the eastern and western Mortinton; all the fishing and fishing-places, beginning at Finche's-bowgh, and extending in and by the river Tweed to the deep sea; all those lands and meadows commonly called or known by the several names of Broad's-haugh, Borrey-Avery, and Ethermouth-Avery, being within or nigh the town; also two wind-mills within its precincts.

The Seignory, Manour, Borough, Town, and Soke of Berwick are held of the crown in free and common burgage, by the payment of 20 l. annually into his majesty's exchequer, or into the hands of his bailiffs or receivers, at the feast of the annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and of St. Michael the Archangel, in equal portions for ever, for all other rents, services, exactions, and demands whatsoever due to the crown (y).

A monastery was founded in Berwick by Sir John Grey, A. D. 1278, for white friers, Fratres Carmeli Monte, one of the four orders of friers mendicants. They officiated in the king's chapel belonging to the castle, for which they had the usual salary given by the crown (z).

Another monastery was founded by the bridge, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. It is said by Leland to have been dissolved by Anthony Beck, Bishop of Durham (a); but that learned antiquary must be under a mistake, as that prelate died, 5 K. Edward II, 1311, and mention of it is afterwards made as existing, 2 K. Edward III, and of its being founded pro Ministro et Fratribus Sanctæ Trinitatis Pontis Berwici (b).

There was also one founded for the Grey Friars, or Friars Minors, who had a grant for twenty marks per annum out of Wetherburn, for the payment of which K. Edward III. gave orders in the 13th year of his reign (c).

Mention is made in the Fischaet-rolls of Northumberland, and by Bishop Tanner, of an hospital, or free chapel, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, situated near Berwick, but not precisely said where (d); to which was united an Hermitage, at a place called Segdon (e).

The town stands chiefly on the brow of a hill; the river Tweed to the south; the sea to the east; large barracks for soldiers at the upper part of it, by a handsome area, called, The Parade, where they exercise; the fortifications strong, well furnished with cannon. In the reign of K. Charles I, it was put into a good state of defence by the parliament, who held it against his majesty. They repaired the town-walls, on which thirty pieces of ordnance were planted. On the mount over-looking the sea, and commanding the harbour, were ten brass pieces (f).

The church is on the north side of the parade, in which Joan, the sister of K. Edward III, was married on St. Mary Magdalen's day, 1328, to David Bruce, son of Robert Bruce, King of Scotland. Their nuptials were celebrated with royal pomp and magnificence. Her mother, the Queen Dowager, was present, with the Lords Mortimer and Warren, the Bishops of Ely and Norwich, and an abundance of other great Lords. The Lord Mortimer's retinue alone consisted of ninescore knights, besides esquires, gentlemen, and yeomen. The Scots acquired by this marriage the re-delivery of their charters and patents, and of that famous one called, Ragman, whereby their kings became feudaries to the crown of England; also many jewels that had been taken from them; for which, in return, they complimented their new queen with the title of Joan Make-peace (g). It was rebuilt under the Auspices of Colonel George Fenwick, of Brinkburn, in the service of the parliament (h). It is dedicated to the Holy Trinity (i). The minister of it at the Restoration was Mr. Nicholas Wressell, who was ejected for not complying with the act of uniformity. He taught school at Stockwell for some time, and ended his days at London, about the year 1695 (k).

In this town is a free Grammar school, of Q. Elizabeth's foundation; who also built the bridge over the Tweed. It was carried away by a great flood, 2 K. John, 1200. It was then of wood, and rebuilt by William, King of Scotland (l).

The Town-hall is a neat modern structure, of white freestone and hewn work.

The Town-Arms are, A dog passant by a tree; in fesse point, two escutcheons with the arms of England and France quarterly, tied together by an arch; in chief, a king sitting on an arch, with a scepter in his right hand, and a mound in his left (m).

FROM Berwick we go westward for six miles on a good turnpike-road to the pleasant villa of Norham, i. e. the North Hamlet, the antient Ubbanford (a), which was built by Egfrid, Bishop of Lindisfarn, A. D. 830; and gives its name to a large tract of country called Norhamshire. Egfrid built a noble church in it, to which he removed the royal remains of Ceolwulf from Lindisfarn, the first of our princes who retired from a throne to a monastery. He gave the impropriation and advowson of it, and the whole villa, also the village of Shoreswood, and other villages before mentioned, to his see (b). It stands on the north side of the village. The middle isle is only now standing. The foundations of a building were lately discovered at the east end, and a stone found with the following inscription.

IHSINGAUL

Above it, in a niche, is the effigies of St. Peter, with the keys; also of St. Cuthbert, and King Ceolwulph, holding a scepter; the three patrons of Norham-church. On the reverse is this inscription.

MRJNTH. MEL

On the ravage of Lindisfarn by the Danes, St. Cuthbert's body was removed hither, where it remained till the time of King Ethelred. The village consists of one long and wide street on the banks of the Tweed, to the east of which, on a rocky eminence, is Norham-Castle, which was built by Ralph Flambard, Bishop of Durham, 22 K. Henry I. 1121 (c). The Tweed fetches a circuit under it round a little island, called the Shingles, in most delightful murmurs. Alexander II, King of Scotland, made his personal submission in it to King John, 1209, at the price of a great sum of gold, leaving for pledges two of his daughters. He came before it with a mighty army, 1216, with which for the space of forty days he attempted to take it, but in vain, being forced with disgrace to raise the siege. After his death, a parliament was summoned to meet at Norham, 10th May, 19 K. Edward I, 1291. The king resided in the castle. The nobility, prelates, and knights of both kingdoms, assembled before him on a green plain, on the banks of the Tweed, directly opposite to the castle, says the record, to consider of the successor to the Scotch scepter, to which he put in his claim; his title being historically declared and published by the Bishop of Durham (d).

In the following reign it was besieged by the Scots, who erected two forts against it, one in the church of Norham, and the other at Upfitlington, but by the bravery of its captain, Sir Thomas Grey, of Heton, and the arrival of the Lords Percy and Nevill with a body of forces to its relief, they were forced to desist from their enterprize, and retire (e).

They laid siege to it again in the same reign, and took it. K. Edward came before it with a large army, 1322, and recovered it, after a siege of ten days (f).

It was besieged by James, King of Scotland, 13 K. Henry VII, 1497, but was rescued by the Earl of Surry, with an army of 20,000 men (g).

It was seized by the Scots in the following reign, but was recovered by the prowess and policy of Mr. Franklin, archdeacon of Durham, for which he had a coat of arms given him, 22 K. Henry VIII, 1530 (b).

It was repaired by bishop Tunstal in the reign of Q. Mary. It is now through age and neglect become a perfect ruin. Some of the vaults and prisons remain, part of a side-wall of the chapel, and a large tower at the north-east of it; under which a pleasant fountain issues out of the rocks.

The manours of Norham and Norhamshire, with the fisheries in the river Tweed, and all their franchises, were granted to Q. Elizabeth by Richard Barnes, bishop of Durham, who made no scruple to rob St. Cuthbert, to make round portions for his daughters (i). Her majesty granted the castle, the tithes, and demesns of Norham to Sir Robert Cary, Earl of Monmouth, for his own life, and the lives of his two sons. His lordship sold them for 6000 l. and the furniture of the castle for 800 l. to George Hume, Earl of Dunbar; a nobleman, says Lord Orrery, of an excellent character (k).

The manour of Norham is now in the possession of Sir Thomas Haggerston, of Haggerston, Bart. The castle, and its demesns, consisting of 1030 acres, as surveyed about the year 1751, and extending eastward on the banks of the Tweed near two miles, be-

A fishery in the Tweed, near the castle, called Halywell, for one night and one day in a legal manner, was adjudged by the commissioners appointed to settle all claims and differences on the borders, 1553, to be the property of Lord Hume, his heirs, and assigns (1).

A mile below Norham, the Tweed forms an island of fourteen acres, by a den, called St. Thomas's Den; the Tweed musical by a fall from a mill-dam, in the border-idiom, named The Call, from its murmurs, as from a cascade.

A little to the west of it, is a lofty terrace above the Tweed, where it forms a kind of serpentine canal; the feat of James Ker, of Ker's-field, Esq; on the other side, and a craggy cliff, inaccessible by human feet, the solitary recess of Cormorants, and several species of Hawks, particularly in the breeding-season.

Near half a mile further down the river, on the left hand of the road, two small Urns were found in a gravel-pit, called The Crooks, and several human bones by them. One of them is now in the possession of Francis Blake, of Twizell, and the other of Henry Collingwood, of Cornhill, Esqrs.

line from it, and a pleasant mount with a course of stone-steps round it, an antient sepulture, or barrow. The crosses were erected by the road formerly leading from Tilmouth-chapel to the villa, church, and castle of Norham.

Half a mile from the Crook, is Twizell (m), which was the lordship and villa of Sir William Riddell, 4 K. Edward III, who had also the hamlets of Dudhow and Grindon, which he held of the bishop of Durham by the annual rent of twenty marks, and doing suit and service to his court at Norham (n). It was afterwards in the possession of a branch of the antient family of the Selby's; of Sir John Selby, a commissioner for enclosures of the east marches, 6 K. Edward VI (o), and deputy-warden of the east marches under Henry Lord Hunsdon in the reign of Q. Elizabeth (p); Sir William Selby, of Grindon, being at the same time master of the ordnance at Berwick (q). Sir John claimed a fishery in the river Tweed, called Tilmouth-haugh fishery, but by the commissioners appointed to adjust and settle all claims and differences on the borders, 1553, it was adjudged to be a Scotch fishing, belonging to the priory of Coldstream, leased to Alexander Hume of Maders-town, and that the lord of the manour of Twizell had only a right to use and occupy a ring-net, and to stand on a place, called Fillispotte, upon the south side of the river (r). Under the house is a range of rocks, cavernose, fringed with various petrifications of moss, and other small plants, formed by drippings of water from the roof and crevices; a natural alcove in one part of it, the moss-plants on its sides variegated and gilded by those petrifying drops, a short, upright stone in the center in party-coloured lapideous cloathing, and hollow at the top by their continual falling; a fine view, through the arch of the bridge, of a sloping bank of hawthorn, in blossom beautiful; the north-west side of the bridge adorned with large quantities of Pellitory of the Wall; an upright rock, of a great size, and tapering to the top, about twenty feet high, a little below the bridge, on the edge of the Till; a fountain near it, consecrated to St. Helen, and by it an antient sepulture, said to have belonged to the family-chapel.

the same castle in the reign of K. Edward III, taken prisoner in too eager and forward a pursuit of the Scots, 1355 (e); of Sir Thomas Grey, a representative in parliament for Northumberland, 1 K. Henry IV, and captain of Wark-castle, taken by the Scots in his absence, who, after plundering it, pulled it down to the ground; the borders then afflicted with a great mortality (f). He was in great favour with K. Henry V, the glory and pride of the English nation, and the scourge of France, for conspiring whose death he was executed. His confederates were Richard Earl of Cambridge, Edward Duke of York, and Henry Lord Scrope of Mosham, who were also executed. The largest share of disgrace fell upon Sir Thomas and Lord Scrope. Sir Thomas was a privy counsellor. Lord Scrope was lord treasurer, and admitted into the highest confidence, and nearest intimacy with the King. The solemn gravity of his countenance, the attractive graces of a modest and chaste conversation, full of zeal for virtue and goodness, so won the king's heart, that he placed him the nearest of all men to his bosom and person, and was for the most part swayed by him in every thing of moment (g).

Heton afterwards came into the possession of Sir Ralph Grey, who, with K. Henry VI, Henry Lord Percy, the Earl of Westmorland, and others, was invested with the high and honourable Order of Knight of the Garter by the Duke of Bedford, regent of England (h). He was captain of the castles of Wark and Roxbrough;

the last of which he defended with an eminent courage for twenty days, 15 K. Henry VI, 1436, against the forces of James, King of Scotland, till the arrival of succours under Henry Percy, the second Earl of Northumberland, on the sight of which the Scots fled with precipitation; many of them slain and taken prisoners (i). He was appointed captain of Bambrough-castle by the house of Lancaster, in which he was taken prisoner after his retreat from the battle of Hexham, and beheaded at Doncaster, his sword being first broke over his head, &c. for breaking his oath of fealty to the house of York (k).

In the reign of K. Henry VIII, it belonged to Sir Edward Grey (l); and afterwards to William Lord Grey of Wark (m). It is now in the possession of the Earl of Tankerville. The castle was a strong building, nearly square; a court on the west side, called The Lyon's Court; on the north side, a vault that 100 horse might stand in. It is now in ruins. King James IV, of Scotland, invested it with his army before the battle of Flodden-field, but could not take it. In digging for stones, two wells were discovered by the workmen, in which were found four pewter plates, with part of the arms of the Greys engraved upon them; also one bow made of yew. They came into the possession of Mr. Gregson, of Wark upon Tweed.

Below Tilmonth, by the confluence of the Till into the Tweed, is Tilmonth-Chapel; small, and in ruins; the altar-window remaining, and a basen in a nich of the south wall; on the north side, the foundations of the minister's house conspicuous; the situation most delightful, on a small peninsula sloping to the two rivers.

On the west side of the chapel, on the banks of the Tweed, is a remarkable curiosity, a stone-boat, of as fine a shape as a boat of wood, in which St. Cuthbert is said, by tradition, to have failed down the Tweed from Melrofs to this chapel. It is ten feet long within; three feet and a half in diameter, in the middle; eighteen inches deep; four inches and a half thick.

Half a mile west from Tilmouth, on the left hand of the Berwick-road to Cornhill, is a stone-cross, called Tilmouth-Cross; below which, on the north side, is an intrenchment, nearly square, called The Haly Chesters; a great part of it overgrown with furz.

Opposite to Linnel-House, and about a quarter of a mile from Cornhill-bridge, on the brink of the Tweed, is the vestiges of a fort, trenched round, called The Castle Stone-Nich; a guard to the ford crosses the river.

The bridge over the Tweed is a modern structure, consisting of six arches, of white freestone; the first foundation-stone laid in May, 1763, by Lord Home; 4000 l. given towards building it by the parliament.

At a small distance from the bridge, is Cornhill, which was the villa of William de Cornhill, 1 K. Edward I (n). It now belongs to Henry Collingwood, Esq; high sheriff of

In digging up the old foundations two small urns were found by the workmen, the genuine contents not certainly known, being shuffled out in a struggle by the finders of them, thinking they had got a treasure.

In the church-yard is the following inscription on the tomb of an old man, an empyric, at Twizell.

Eheu! quis mortis jam retardabit falcem?

The street from the church forms a wide avenue, at the foot of which is Mr. Collingwood's seat; on the top of a large slope; the gardens to the west; a fine view from a terraced lawn of the fertile vale below it, through which the Tweed takes its course in a winding current; of the market-town of Coldstream, on its opposite banks, at which Margaret, the Queen Dowager of Scotland, sister to K. Henry VIII, was met by Lord Dacres, lord warden of the marches, and conducted to Harbottle-castle, 26th August, 1515 (o); of the handsome modern seat of Mr. Pringle, with an octangular tempiato, on the banks of the river; of the baronial villa and castle of Wark, of Mr. Compton's seat by his villa of Carbam, and Shidlaw; Sunney-laws, Prestfen, Learmouth, Old Many-laws; the whole bounded by a semicircular range of hills, of the Hir-fel-law, Hume-Castle, both the property of the Earl of Hume; Stich-bill, the seat of Sir Robert Pringle, Bart. Eilding-hills, within about a mile of the famous abbey of Melrofs, Hofe-law, Limpot-law, Stand-alone-hill; the hills of Yetholm, Hare-law, and Cheviot, i. e. the chief of all the hills for height and magnitude, overtopping all the rest, giving a most extensive and beautiful land and sea-prospect on a clear day.

A quarter of a mile south-east from Cornhill, is an incampment, the most remarkable of any north of the Roman wall, for extent, variety of military works, covered ways, large and spacious, with numerous curvatures, defended by ranges of terraced hills, and a morass at several angles and sides of the hills; many of them exploratory and sepulchral, of the usual figure, conic; the hollows remaining, and filled with water, from which the earth was taken for raising them. They were the funeral repositories of great chieftains; the common men being buried without any such distinction, many of their remains being dugged up on the ridge of a hill, called Bleak Lands, opposite to the medical spring.

Wark-Castle, which was the barony of the antient family of Ros (p), barons of Helmfsley in Yorkshire. Robert de Ros, in the reign of K. Henry II, married one of the daughters of William

His son and successor (q), Robert de Ros, and John de Baliol, were guardians of the new married pair, Alexander, King of Scotland, and Margaret, eldest daughter of K. Henry III, 1251. For their undue behaviour towards their royal charge in denying them social intercourse, they were punished, on the information of a physician sent from the English court. Robert de Ros had his lands seized for the King's use. John de Baliol came off by a compliment of money. K. Henry and his Queen took a journey to Edenburgh, to see them in possession of all their wishes (r).

William de Ros, successor to Robert (s), on the death of Alexander, King of Scotland, was a competitor for his crown, with William de Vescy, Baron of Alnwick, Florence Earl of Holland, Patric de Dunbar, Robert de Pinkeny, Nicholas de Sauls, Patric Golightly, Robert Bruce, and John Baliol, 20 K. Edward I, 1292 (t). He was one of the three barons of Northumberland in the famous list of British Lords who made that noble stand against the papal usurpation, in claiming the kingdom of Scotland as a fief to the see of Rome, 29 K.

from the king, if he prevailed, by going on such an errand, refused. He was sent to the Tower for his disobedience. His commission of lieutenant general was taken from him, after a final and positive declaration that he was not able to go on account of his health. He was released soon after, without a petition, but his commission not restored. He acquired so much favour as to be speaker of the upper house, and to be entrusted with the court of the Dutchy of Lancaster, jointly with Lenthall, the other speaker, 21 K. Charles I., 1645. In 1647, he was made keeper of the Great Seal of England, jointly with Sir Thomas Widdrington, with a salary of 1000 l. per annum. His brother, Colonel Grey, was killed in the same year at Munster, in Ireland, in the service of the parliament (e). His lordship died, 29th July, 26 K. Charles II., 1674. He was succeeded in honour and estate by his son and heir, Ford Grey, who was created Viscount Glendale, and Earl of Tankerville, 7 K. William III., 1695. He married Mary, the fourth daughter of George Earl of Berkley, by whom he had one daughter, Mary, married to Charles Bennet, Lord Offulston. He died, 1 Q. Ann., 1701; and with him the Earldom and Viscountship. The barony and estate came to his only brother, Ralph Grey, governor of Barbadoes. He died 20th June, 1706 (f). Lady Offulston, his niece and heir, died in May, 1710. She had three sons, and three daughters, by Charles Lord Offulston (g). the Garter, 26th February, 1720-21. His son, the late Charles Earl of Tankerville, was lord lieutenant of the county of Northumberland, and of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, and Knight of the Order of the Thistle. He died in March, 1753; and was succeeded by his son, Charles Earl of Tankerville, the present possessor of Wark-castle, &c. his seat at Chillingham. His lordship married Elizabeth the daughter of Sir John Astley, Bart. in October, 1742.

The castle is at the west end of the village, on a high mount of difficult access, circular, seemingly raised by art with earth and stone; part of the foundations still remaining, and a fragment of the building, looking at a distance like a column; some courses of the outer-wall entire on the north side, of ashler-work; under it a walk, called, The Maiden-walk; i. e. the Military way, or walk under the Maiden or fortrefs; five yards broad, and forty-eight yards long. It is a beautiful terrace, edged with a steep precipice, shaded with trees; the Tweed gliding under it in deep and hollow murmurs.

On the west side are the outworks, now called the Kemb; i. e. the camp of the militia designed to kemb or fight an enemy; Kemb being a word often used by the borderers when they threaten in a passionate tone to beat an assailant—They will kemb him—i. e. drub him heartily.

This intrenchment is half a mile long, measured; the breast-works and covered ways still fair and conspicuous, the ditches deep, and the rampier high, of earth and stone; two small mounts at nearly an equal distance, one about midway, and the other at the extremity, a linear trench through them at top; another other mount of the same form between the last and the river. Near the first mount is part of the foundations of a chapel, now called, Gilly's Nich, from its situation by a port-way, and its dedication to St. Giles; many grave-stones about it, some standing, and others flat; one large flat one, of freestone, over a Knight Templar, a cross sculptured upon it between two swords.

On the south side of the rampier, near the castle, is a piece of ground, called, The Battle-place. Opposite to it is a terraced hill, called, Gallows-hill, the place of execution of criminals; a circular mount near it to the west, called, The Gallows-hill-know; the burial-place after execution; a human skeleton found a few years ago in digging for limestone, interred within a few feet of the surface.

The castle was burnt by the Scots, 7 K. Richard II, 1383.

It was besieged by the Scots under the command of the Duke of Albany, 15 K. Henry VIII, 1523. Sir William Lisle was then governor. They crossed the Tweed in the night, to the number of two or three thousand, on Saturday the last of October, with heavy cannon, battering it to the second of November, when entering the breaches, and being masters of all the wards, but the inner one, called, The Dungeon, Sir William and his garison slew three hundred of them, besides such as died of their wounds and were drowned; the Duke repassing the Tweed; the Earl of Surrey being at hand to the relief of the garison. It was reputed a strong fortress in that reign (b). A few years ago, a cannon was found among the rubbish.

Near a mile west from Wark on the banks of the Tweed, is Carham-Hall, the seat of Anthony Compton, Esq; a modern building, to which he hath made large and handsome additions, and great improvements about it by planting.

A little higher up the river, and in sight, is his villa of Carham; at the west end of which, almost on the brink, by a flexure of the Tweed, and at the east end of the church, was an abbey of Black Canons, subordinate to the priory of Kirkham, in Yorkshire. The villa, lordship, advowson and impropriation of the living, belonged to that priory; as did the villa and manour of Titlington, two parts of the tithes within the lordships of Mindrum and Bolton, a mansion-house in Wark, the advowsons and impropriations of Ilderton and Kirk Newton, &c. They also laid the villa of Prestfen in ashes. Other villages in the neighbourhood met with the same fate, which caused K. Edward, who then lodged at Coldstream, to come to Wark-castle (k). He afterwards took severe vengeance on their leader, Sir William Wallace. In 44 K. Edward III., 1370, the Scots being on the point of crossing the Tweed at this village laden with English plunder, were attacked by Sir John Lilburn, and his brother. The engagement was long and obstinate. At length, Sir John and his brother were defeated, and both taken prisoners. Here was a small tower in it, which is mentioned by Leland, who calls it "a little tower of defence against the Scots (l).” The village is small, but well built; many plantations of young forest-trees about it, thriving and vigorous; the church small, lately repaired.

The minister's house is at the north-east end of the village; neat and convenient; of stone, and partly hewn work; built by the present incumbent, Mr. Richard Wallis, A. M. late fellow of Queen's College, in Oxford. At the east end of it is a small, but fertile glebe.

On the south side of the village, is a small hamlet, belonging to Mr. Compton, on a hill, called

A mile above Carham, a streamlet, called, Ryding-burn, empties itself into the Tweed, which is the boundary between the two kingdoms of England and Scotland to the west.

We now turn southward on the Etall-road from Cornhill, about two miles from which, on the right hand, in Brankston-west-field, is a large upright pillar, of whinstone, six feet, seven inches high, and thirteen feet in diameter towards the base; a memorial of the great victory obtained over K. James IV, of Scotland, by the Earl of Surrey, on Friday, 9th of September, 5 K. Henry VIII, 1513.

This battle is called, The battle of Brankston, from the chief scene of action being near that village; also the battle of Floddon, from the Scotch intrenchments being on Floddon-hill, out of which they were drawn forcibly, as it were, to an engagement, by the Earl of Surrey's cutting off their retreat homewards. Among the slain was their sovereign, with his natural son, Alexander, Archbishop of St. Andrews, who had the learned Erasmus for his tutor; also two other Scotch prelates, four abbots, twelve Earls, seventeen lords, a great number of knights and gentlemen, and about eight

eight thousand, or as some say, twelve thousand common men. According to Sir John Froisart, K. James fell near Brankston, where he was found the next day by Lord Dacres. On the highest part of Floddon-hill, near it, is a natural rock, called the King's chair, from which he had a good view of his own, and of the English army, and of the country round him.

In the time of the battle the thieves of Tynedale and Tiviotdale were not idle. They rifled the English tents, and took away many horses, and other things.

The day after the battle, the standards, and twenty-two pieces of ordnance, taken from the Scots, were carried by the victors to Etall, among which were seven, for their handfomeness, called, The Seven Sisters. The general, Sir Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey, was created Duke of Norfolk the year following for his service (m).

We next pass through the village of Crookham, where the Dissenters have a handsome meeting-house, and crossing the river Till at the Willow-Ford, come to

Etall, a pleasant villa, one of the manours of the Barony of Wooler, of which it was held by the antient family of Manners, ancestors of his Grace the Duke of Rutland; by Sir Robert de Manners, 1 K. Edward I (n), who was captain of Norham-castle, 1 K. Edward II, and the scourge of the Scots on their invasion of the borders under the command of the Earls of March and Sou- therland, 14 K. Edward III (o). He was in that year a representative in parliament for Northumberland, with Sir William Felton (p). The year following he built the castle of Etall. He married the daughter and heir of Sir Henry Strother of Newton, in Glen-dale; by whom he had Sir Robert de Manners, who was upon an inquest at Morpeth, 10th March, 22 K. Richard II (q), and upon another at Bambrough, with Sir John de Fenwick, and Roger de Horsley, before Sir Thomas Grey, of Wark, 31st March, 13 K. Henry IV (r). His successor, Sir Robert de Manners, was upon an inquest at the castle of Newcastle, with Sir William Lumley, and Bertram Harbottle, 29th October, 33 Henry VI (s); and upon another at the same castle, with Sir John Swinburn, Sir William Bowes, Robert de Nevill, and Robert de Folbury, in June, 4 K. Edward IV; in which year he was high sheriff of Northumberland (t). He was a zealous friend to the house of York. He marched at the head of 400 men to oppose the landing of Queen Margaret and her friends at Bambrough, whom he compelled to alter their course for Berwick upon Tweed, before the fatal battle near Hexham. He married Eleanor the eldest daughter and coheir of Thomas Lord Ros, by whom he had two sons, and two daughters, viz. George, Edward, Elizabeth, and Cæcilia. George married Ann the daughter of Sir Thomas Sellinger, by Ann Dutcheffs of Exeter, sister of K. Edward IV; by whom he had five sons, and five daughters, viz. Thomas, Oliver, Anthony, Richard, John, Elizabeth, Catharine, Eleanor, Cæcilia, and Ann (u).

Sir Thomas Manners, Lord Ros, of Etall, was created Earl of Rutland, 17 K. Henry VIII, 1526 (v).

Sir Roger Manners, Kt. of this antient family, an ornament of the court of Q. Elizabeth, gave four scholarships to Corpus Christi college, in Cambridge, famous for its library over the chapel, the donation of one of its learned sons, Sir Nicholas Bacon, Kt. keeper of the great seal and privy counsellor to Q. Elizabeth; an excellent repository of antiquities, the library of the monastery of Stoke-Clare, in Suffolk, being preserved and placed in it by Archbishop Parker, its venerable warden, and an eminent antiquary.

Etall, was found by an inquisition to be in the possession of the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth (w). It came afterwards into the possession of Sir Robert Carr, Kt. second son of Sir William Carr, of Greenhead, Bart. on whose death it was under sequestration by the parliament for eleven years and a half, but was restored to his son, William Carr, and Mrs. Margaret Carr, by composition, 15th February, 1653 (x).

(x) Upon the application of Mrs. Margaret Carr, and William Carr, and upon the perusal of several warrants and orders of the committees of sequestration in the time of the late usurped powers, as also on the report of Sir Peter Balle, Kt. her late majesty's attorney general, to whom the business was referred, it appears, That the said manour of Etall was under sequestration for xi years and a half, and was not discharged thereof until the 15th of February, 1653, and that on the payment of the whole composition-money, being 539 l. 8*s.* 7*d.* and considering the whole matter both as to the legality and equity thereof, it is thought fit,

It is now the villa and feat of William Carr, Esq; father-in-law of the right honourable the Earl of Errol; by a countess of whose family the county of Buchan, in Scotland, is described, and all its remarkables accounted for (y). His feat is at the east end of the village, lately rebuilt, after a genteel design; the south front appearing to great advantage through an avenue of trees on the approach to it from the castle of Ford; a flower-garden, lawns, gravel-walks, edgings of flowers and shrubs before it, encompassed by a dwarf-hedge of holly; the street of the villa forming an avenue from it westward to the ruins of the old castle on the banks of the Till, part of two large towers still remaining, the coat-armorial of the builder, Sir Robert de Manners, above the entrance of one of them, obscured by the weather and age.

The vale by the Till appears in great beauty to the south and south-west, many hills and mountains in sight; the hills of Brankston and Floddon; the two mountains consecrated to the Saxon god Torr, and carrying his name; the hill called Yevering-Bell, from its bell-like shape; the two Cheviots, Akeld, and Humbleton-hills.

and accordingly ordered, That the said Mrs. Carr, and William Carr, together with the said manour of Etall, be, and is henceforth acquitted and discharged, and his majesty's auditor is hereby desired and required to discharge the said manour of the said composition, and, to grant a Quictus for the same unto the fee-fermer thereof: Is discharged, and the aboye named Mrs. Carr and William Carr, together with the said manour of Etall, and the tenants of the same, from the payment of the said arrear of 539 l. 8 s. 7 d. are accordingly freed and absolutely acquitted, xxi April, 1673.

MS. penes Gulielmum Carr, Arm. de Etall.

Within the manour of Etall are coals, freestone, slate, marle; also limestone, and a small machine, moved only by an inch and a half of water, to preserve it from drowning; great improvements, by enclosing and planting, by Mr. Carr; the plantations in a variety of situations, nine on eminences; oaks remarkably vigorous and healthy on a sandy slope, east of the village.

Four miles east from Etall is a remarkable hill, called The Watch-Law, exploratory, as the name imports, to observe the motions of an enemy, and to alarm the country by fire from a beacon; of a regular and pleasant slope on all sides; a sea and land prospect from it very extensive, to all points, particularly of Scotland; part of five Scotch counties seen from it on a clear day, and ships at sea at a great distance.

A mile east from the Watch-law, is Barmore, which was the villa of William Muschampe, 1 K. Edward I (2); of George Muschampe, 10 Q. Elizabeth, high sheriff of Northumberland, 38, 42 of the same reign (a); and of William Muschampe, high sheriff of Northumberland, 20 K. James I (b). It was lately in the possession of Colonel Bladon, the ingenious translator of Cæsar's Commentaries, and uncle to Sir Edward Hawk, first lord of the admiralty.

His son, Sir William Heron, built the castle of Ford, 12 K. Henry III. He acquired a grant from the crown of a weekly market and an annual fair at Ford; also liberty of free warren in this and his other lordships. The village stands on an eminence, on the east side of the Till; consisting of one irregular street, the castle on the north side, lately repaired after a handsome manner; a variety of good views from the battlements, particularly of the winding course of the river below it, the bridge over it, and the improvements made on its banks, and the neighbouring plain, by inclosures, tillage, and planting on little eminences; also of the several ranges of the neighbouring hills and mountains, with the ancient karns and intrenchments on their tops.

At Broom-ridge, a mile south from the village, and in the parish, are the lines and intrenchments of the brave Saxon king Athelstan, who obtained a compleat victory over the confederate forces of Constantine, King of Scotland, Eugenius, King of Cumberland, and Anlaf, the Dane, 928. In this battle K. Athelstan lost his two near kinsmen, Elwin and Ethelstan, valiant young noblemen. Constantine escaped into Scotland, and Anlaf to Dublin.

At a place, called Haltwell-Sweire, near Fenton, half a mile south from Broom-ridge, Sir Henry Percy, brother to Sir Thomas Percy, the sixth Earl of Northumberland, was defeated by the Scots under the command of the Earl of Bothwell, 5 Q. Mary, 1558; the Scotch forces consisting of 1000 horse. Two English captains of light horse, Carr and Errington, were taken prisoners.

We cross the Till at Ford by a stone-bridge of one large and strong arch, and come to

before

before the battle of Brankston, by Sir William Bulmer, of Bramspeth-castle, who commanded the forces of the bishoprick of Durham. The Scots had concealed themselves among the broom. Five or six hundred of them were killed, and four hundred taken prisoners. They afterwards called the road through the plain, The ill Road (q).

About two miles south-west from Milfield, on the north side of the rivulet of Glen, is

Copeland-Castle, or North-Copeland, which was the seat of the ancient family of the Wallaces; of Edward Wallace, or Wallase, in the reign of K. Edward II *; of William Wallace, in the beginning of the reign of Q. Elizabeth, son-in-law of John Swinburn, of Edlingham-Castle, Esq; (r); of George Wallace, 17 K. James I, 1619, who in that year rebuilt the castle; the date of the year, and the initial letters of his own and his wife's name on one of the chimney-pieces in it; of the late Ralph Wallace, Esq; store-keeper of the gar-rison of Berwick upon Tweed, who sold it to the late Sir Chaloner Ogle, Knt. an admiral in the British navy; and is now in the possession of the Rev. Yevering, Yevering, a mean village, which that learned antiquary Dr. Gale, imagined was the Roman station Glanoventa (t), but no Roman antiquities have ever yet been discovered at it, of any kind, to favour such an opinion; which is grounded only on its situation by the Glen, which gives its name to the vale of Glendale. It was a royal manour of the Saxon kings, called, by Bede, Ad Gebrin, at which they sometimes resided, till they removed to Melmin or Milfield (u). It was the residence of King Edwin and his Queen Ethelburga for thirty days after their conversion to the Christian faith by the address and preaching of Paulinus, who attended them hither, and converted great numbers of their people, who were baptized in the neighbouring river. Edwin was slain by two tributary princes, Penda and Cedwall. His queen fled for refuge by sea to her brother, Eadbald, King of Kent, who took her under his protection, and made Paulius bishop of Rockester.

At this village the Scots, after a long engagement, were defeated on St. Mary Magdalen's day, 3 K. Henry V. 1415, by Sir Robert Hamfrayvil, captain of Roxbrough-Castle; the Earl of Westmorland then lord warden of the marches. Above sixty Scotchmen were slain, and one hundred and sixty taken prisoners. A thousand of them were pursued upwards of twelve miles (v). On the south side of the village, midway between the hill and the road from Kirk Newton to Wooler, is an unwrought column of whinstone erected in memory of it, of a vast magnitude; in height fourteen feet, and four inches; in diameter at the base as many; and towards the middle, eleven feet, and seven inches.

About two hundred yards west from this column, is a high hill, called Yevering-Bell, from its bell-like shape ; the top of an oblong figure ; a karn on the east side, with a circular trench ; many circular foundations of buildings upon the sides or slopes of both ; the whole encompassed with a wall of whinstone of a great breadth and length, fallen down by age and tempests ; the work seemingly of the pagan Danes, for their priesthood and nobles to assemble on, for legislation, for devotion, and for sepulture.

Half a mile south-west from Yevering-Bell, is another karn, composed of a large conic heap of small whinstones. It is called Tom Tallon's Grave. Hard by, to the east, is a cluster of broken rocks, called Tom Tallon's Crag, from its situation near the karn.

On the top of Newton-Torr, East Torr, or Green Torr, just by, is another karn ; also one on the top of West Torr ; hills sacred to the pagan god Thor, or Jupiter. There is also a karn on the western point of Cheviot ; also another upon the hill, called Whitelaw, a mile to the south-east from Yevering-Bell, from which it is in sight ; as are all the rest.

A mile west from Yevering, is

Kirk-Newton, a small village, one of the manours of the barony of Wark, of which it was held by the antient family of the Strothers ; by Sir Henry Strother in the reigns of K. K. Edward II, III ; by William Strother, in the reign of K. Edward VI ; by Mark Strother, Esq ; high sheriff of Northumberland, 1 K. George I. It now belongs to John Strother Kerr, of Fowbury, Esq.

Two miles west from Kirk-Newton, is

Paston,

Paston, the feat and manour of Gabriel Selby, Esq; of the antient family of the Selbys of Twizell. It stands on the south side of the rivulet of Bowmont, on a rising ground, well sheltered with tall forest trees.

On a hill to the south-west of Paston, called The Hare-law, i. e. the hill or station of the army, is a circular intrenchment, with a double rampier and fofs. Under the hill, on the west side, is a hamlet which takes its name from it. It gives a fine view of a narrow vale westward, through which the Bow-mont takes its course, so called from its bending or winding course under the mountains, joined by the streamlet of Shotton, within about ten yards of the boundary between the two kingdoms of England and Scotland.

Two miles south from Yevering, by the road to Wooler, is Humbledon (w), a small village, on an eminence, under which a great victory was obtained by Henry Lord Percy, and George Earl of March, over the Scotch under the command of Archibald Earl of Douglas, on Holmood-day in the harvest, 3 K. Henry 2. Earl Douglas's forces consisted of 10,000 men. He possessed many castles, but Lord Percy, surnamed Hotspur, cutting off his retreat to his own land with the plunder he had acquired in Northumberland, he was forced to come to an engagement on the plain. With him were most of the barons, knights, and gentlemen of Fife and Lothian, who escaped by flight, 22d of June, the year before, from the battle of Nisbet, in the Merse, in which fell most of the Lothian-youth. A great part of them were either slain or taken prisoners. Among the latter were the Earls of Fife, Murrey, Angus, Atholl, and Montcith. Earl Douglas received five wounds, and lost an eye. Five hundred Scotchmen in the pursuit were drowned in the Tweed. The field of battle is called Red-Riggs, from the blood spilt on it (x). By the side of the road, under Humbledon-Banks, is an upright pillar of whinstone erected in memory of it; in height, six feet, six inches, and a half; in diameter, twelve feet.

On a hill, called Humbledon-Hugh, is a circular intrenchment, and a large karn; both Danish.

A poor woman of this village, wife of Thomas Rutledge, a day-labourer, was delivered of four children, three girls, and one boy, on Saturday, 31st March, 1764; all baptized. She had two children at a birth the year before.

Two miles south from Humbledon, is Wooler (y), a small market-town, which was the barony of the Muschampes; of Robert de Muschampe in the reign of K. Henry III

It was afterwards the manour of the Greys, of Wark; and now belongs to the Earl of Tankerville. It stands on a rising ground to the east of Cheviot, above a small trout-stream. It consists of several freets and lanes, viz.

Teucer-Hill,	Ramsay's South Lane,
Windy-Row,	Scotch-Gate,
Temple's-Hole,	Cheviot-Bank.

The market-place is in the center; the market on Thursdays. It hath two annual fairs, 26th April, and 6th of October. The church was lately rebuilt by a brief. The minister of it at the reformation was Mr. John Lomax, M. A. of Emanuel College, in Cambridge; who not complying with the act of Uniformity was silenced, and retired to North Shields, where he practised physic and surgery, and kept an apothecary's shop, there being none there at that time (b). The mother-church is said to have been at Fenton, a village on the east side of the river Till, now in ruins; and in this parish, though enclosed by the parish of Chatton, on

A mile south from Horton-castle, on the western banks of the Till, is Fowbury, a small village, which was the manour and seat of William de Fowbury, 1 K. Edward I (b); of Sir Robert de Fowbury, 6 K. Edward IV, in which year he and Sir George Lumley were representatives in parliament for Northumberland, who are stiled in the writ, Milites gladiis cincti (i); of William de Fowbury, 16 K. Henry VIII, 1524. In that year his son and heir took two hundred Scotchmen prisoners on their return from plundering the country-people going to Berwick-fair, on Trinity Sunday, 20 May (k). In the 24th of the same reign the Scots plundered the village (l). It afterwards came into the possession of the Strothers of Kirk-Newton. It now belongs to John Strother Kerr, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 1741.

Two miles south from Fowbury, is Chillingham-Castle, which was the seat and manour of the Greys of Wark (m); and is now in the possession of the right Honourable the Earl of Tankerville. It stands on a rising ground, and is kept in good repair. In one of the ground-rooms is a marble

In the same room is a painting of it, from which the late Mr. Warburton took a drawing, and prefixed to it the following verses.

The church is on the north side of the castle, dedicated to St. Peter. At the north-east end of the chancel, behind the Earl of Tankerville's seat, is a beautiful raised tomb of alabaster over one of the knightly family of the Greys and his lady, with their effigies, recumbent, and in a praying posture; curiously ornamented with sculptures of the holy family, in niches. Above it, on blue marble, is his coat armorial, with the following motto, in French.

De bon vauloir, server le roy.

On a rocky eminence, at the head of Chillingham-park, is a circular double intrenchment, called, Ros-Castle.

At the bottom of Hebburn-wood, a mile south from Chillingham, is another, of the same form.

A mile from New Town, is West Lilburn, which was the villa and seat of the antient family of the Lilburns; of John Lilburn, 18 K. Edward II (n); of Sir John Lilburn, who was twice taken prisoner by the Scots; first, with his brother in an engagement at the village of Carham, 44 K. Edward III, 1370 (o); and afterwards at the battle of Otterburn, 12 K. Richard II, 1388 (p): of Sir Thomas Lilburn, a representative in parliament for Northumberland, 12 K. Henry VI (q). In later times it was possessed by the antient family of the Clennels, of Clennel; by Percival Clennel, Esq; 1 K. George I; by the late Thomas Clennel, Esq; and now by his nephew, Henry Collingwood, of Corubill, Esq. It stands on the east side of the Wooler-road, and in sight, on a rising ground, on the north side of a small stream. At the west end is the ruin of an old tower, also of a chapel. At the east end is Mr. Collingwood's seat, a neat, modern building.

Three miles from Lilburn, on the right hand of the road, on a hill, is Ilderton, a small village, one of the manours of the barony of Wark, of which it was held by the antient family of the Ildertons;

On Rosedon-edge, on the south side of Ilderton, is a large square intrenchment.

There is also another in sight from it on Berwick-hill, on the east side of the rivulet of Bramish, semicircular, with a double foss and vallum; a steep precipice to the west; an extensive prospect from it on a clear day. A hollow way leads to it from the south, twelve feet and a half broad, edged on one side with large ragstones, set edgeways in the earth.

December, 1750, at New York, in North America, at the age of twenty-one years, and nine months, and was buried there. The feat-house is modern and handsome, on the south side of a deep gill, on an eminence ; an agreeable prospect of the vale under it.

On Hedgley-Moor, on the left hand of the road, is a wrought stone pillar, fixed in a pedestal, called, Percy's cross, from its being erected to the memory of Sir Ralph Percy, who was slain in an engagement with Lord Montacute, 3 K. Edward IV, 1463, before the battle of Hexham-field (c). The Percy and Lucy arms are cut upon it in relief, still very fair.

On Glanton-hill, on the right hand of the road, is Glanton-Pike, a mount so called from its conic form, exploratory; on which was also a beacon to alarm the country by fire in times of public danger; an extensive prospect from it; the hill, called Dun's Law, in Scotland, being seen from it on a clear day.

In a place, called, The Deer-street, by Glanton-west-field, as a mason, by the order of Mr. Mills of Glanton-pike was digging for stone in the year 1716, he discovered a stone-chest, upwards of three feet in length, and two in breadth, with a stone cover, with nothing in it; but as his son, now living, was working down an uneven piece of ground, he discovered three more such chests with covers, containing fine earth and two urns in each, with some charcoal, and human bones carrying the marks of fire. Near them were two more urns, one large, and the other very small. On being exposed to the air they all fell to pieces, except one, which Mr. Mills preserved, since broke. They were of very ordinary pottery.

A quarter of a mile north from Glanton-west-field, Mr. Mills's servant, as he was making a fence a few years ago, turned up a British Securis or Celt at the bottom of a clod, well preserved; now in my possession. It is of the old mixed brass.

Few instruments have more exercised the thoughts of antiquaries than this; some contending for its being a weapon of war

war' (m) and others not. Mr. Hern fancies it to be a Roman chissel, used in making their Aggeres, and that it was preferred to iron from the reputed sacredness of the metal of which it was made. From there being no mention of it by Bonani (n), by Monsieur de la Chaussée (o), or by Spon (p), and no vestiges of it among the Roman arms on the Trajan or Antonine pillar, or among the ruins of Herculaneum, the ingenious Cornish antiquary, Mr. Brlase, is inclined to think it not of foreign transmarine origin, but the work of British-Romans, or artists taught by them, for an offensive misfifive weapon (q). According to the late learned and sagacious Dr. Stukeley, it was used by the Druid priesthood in their Sacra, being their hatchet, fixed to the end of a staff, with which they cut the Mistletoe for Yuletide, our Christmas, and Oak-boughs for their festival of the autumnal equinox (r).

From Glanton-hill we have a fine prospect of the vale of Whittingham, wherein on the left hand of the road, and on the north side of the rivulet of Aln, is

Bolton, a small villa, where was an hospital founded by Robert de Ros, Baron of Wark, before the year 1225, for a master, and three chaplains, thirteen leprous men, and other lay-brethren; dedicated to St. Thomas the Martyr, or the Holy Trinity; subordinate to the abbey of Ryewal, and the priory of Kirkham, in York-

It was afterwards the feat of Sir Edward Widdrington, Bart. who raised a regiment of horse for the service of K. Charles I, by whom he was created a Baronet, 8th August, 1642. His estate was sequestered by the parliament, 1652. His eldest daughter and coheir, Mary, married Sir Edward Charleton, of Hezleyside, Bart. She died, 8th April, 1703, aged 71. His third daughter and coheir, Catharine, married Richard-Francis Sherburn, only son of Sir Nicholas Sherburn, of Stoniburft, in Lancashire, Bart. She was born on Sunday, 3d December, 1693; died on Monday, 8th June, 1702 (c). Lady Charleton founded and endowed a small almshouse in the village, for four antient poor widows in the parish of Rothbury. The manour-house is an old tower, now possessed, with part of the villa, by Giles Allcock, of Newcastle upon Tyne, Esq; It stands on an eminence, from which, four miles to the north-west, we have a good view of.

Bittleston (d), which was the feat and villa of Sir Walter Selbye, governor of Lidell-Castle on the borders, 16 K. Edward III, 1342; in which year, on the 5th of October, it was taken by David King of Scotland, in his march into England with an army of 40,000 men, one half consisting of veterans, and the other half of militia, raised by the towns and boroughs, for their inexperience, called Hoblers; Sir Walter being beheaded after it was taken for refusing to surrender (e). In 6 K. Edward VI, his villa was in the possession of Percival Selbye, who was one of the commissioners for the enclosures upon the middle marches in that year. It now belongs to Thomas Selbye, Esq. His seat is at the head of a gradual slope; a streamlet behind it, falling at irregular distances from large rocks in a winding course through a deep gill, overlooked by the high hills of Sowndon, Silverton, and Hardon, from the two last of which is a view of the sea on a clear day; a garden to the east, with a flew-wall of brick, 110 yards in length; a fine prospect from it of the pleasant vale of Coquet, terminated to the south-east, the south, and south-west, by a semi-circular ridge of hills; Simonfide-hill standing nearly in the center, overlooking the rest, of an oblong figure.

Three miles from Bittlefdon, on the banks of the Coquet, is Clenell, the seat and manour of the antient family of the Clenells; of Thomas Clenell, 18 K. Edward I; in which year he obtained a grant of free warren in this manour, and his manour of Elfdon (f); of William Clenell, 12 K. Henry VI (g); of Percival Clenell, 6 K. Edward VI (h); of Luke Clenell, high sheriff of Northumberland, 1727; of the late Clenell, Esq; on whose death it came to his two daughters and coheirs.

Harbottle-Castle (i), which was held by the Humfravils, Barons of Prudhow, by the service of keeping Reedfdale free from thieves and wolves (k); by which service they also held the castle and manour of Otterburn (l). This service was adjudged to be the service of Great Serjeanty, 17 K. Henry IV. In that year, the court of eschequer ordered a search to be made in the rolls, to find their yearly value. Upon which it was found by an escheator's inquisition, that they were then worth 6*l.* 19*s.* 8½*d.* per annum; whereupon Walter Tailboys, heir to Robert Humfravil, was adjudged to pay the king that sum annually (m). They were both in the possession of the crown, 3 K. Edward IV, by the attainder of Sir William Tailboys, after the battle of Hexham-field. They were also in the crown, 10 Q. Elizabeth. The castle and manour of Harbottle are now in the possession of Percival Clenell, Esq. The castle stands on an eminence, overlooking the river Coquet, now in ruins. It was so strong, 24 K. Edward I, 1296, that the Scots in their march through Reedfdale to Hexham in that year besieged it in vain for the space of two days (n). It was also a good castle, 6 K. Henry VIII, 1515; in which year, Margaret, Queen Dowager of Scotland, daughter to K. Henry VII, mother to K. James V, grandmother to Q. Mary, and great grandmother to K. James VIth of Scotland, and 1st of England, retired to it by the appointment of her and is now in the possession of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland. It is in a low, but romantic situation; the Coquet passing by it on the south side, crossed by a neat stone-bridge of three arches; a beautiful vale opening gradually to view to the west, enclosed almost with hills and ridges of broken rocks. It consists of three irregular streets, viz..

Ratten-row,
Market-street,
Church-gate.

The Market-cross is nearly in the center. It hath three annual fairs; on Whitson-Monday, 21 September, and on Thursday before All-Hallows day. The church is in the form of a cross, dedicated to All Saints; a large clock and two bells in the tower; the floor within the communion-rails of chequer-work, of white freestone, and blue marble; the altar venerable. Against a pillar by the south door is the effigies of a man in armour cut in stone, standing, and in relief, with a pistol in his right hand, and a powder-bag at his belt; his head broken off. Near it is a funeral monument to the memory of George Fletcher, Esq; high sheriff of Northumberland, 1710, who died within the year, 25th January. He left to the parish of Rothbury 6*l. per annum*, for ever, out of his lands at Spital, for maintaining a school at Rothbury. On the north side of the chancel is a mural monument of blue marble with the following inscription.

Near this monument lyeth the body of the truly virtuous Matron, Mary, wife of John Thomlinson, rector of Rothbury, who departed this life, Oct. 30th, 1710. Aged 70 years.

Also,

on her right side, is interred the body of the said Reverend Mr. John Thomlinson, a worthy benefactor to this parish, who was rector above 41 years, who departed this life, May 23d, 1720. Aged 69 years.

Below it is the following inscription, on a small mural stone of the same kind.

On the brow of a hill on the south side of the river, is

Whitton-Tower; the Humfravil-arms on the west side; now the rectory-house. It was repaired by its late rector, the learned Dr. Thomas Sharp, archdeacon of Northumberland, son of Dr. Sharp, archbishop of York, and father of Dr. John Sharp, the present arch-

Three miles below Rothbury, is Brinkburn-Priory, founded in the reign of K. Henry I. and dedicated to St. Peter (a), by William de Bertram, baron of Mitford, with the approbation of his Lady and his three sons.

His lordship placed in it Black Canons or Canons Regular, of the order of St. Austin, from the monastery of St. Mary de Insula, and endowed it with lands out of his wastes, confirmed both by his Lady, Hareys and Roger, his eldest son and heir. He gave it Thornbaugh, Forderbaugh, Papwirthbaugh, Heley, and Over-Heley, and the woods belonging to them, also a wood to the east of Heley, extending from Linchburn to the river Coquet. To this gift he added another, viz. an annual present of twenty fishes out of his fishery of Coquet (b).

His grandson, Roger, gave it 140 acres in his waste-lands in Evenwood, with a large share of his wastes near Framlington, also liberty to cut timber out of his woods in the forests for its necessary uses, with the privilege of having game. Prince Henry of Scotland, Earl of Northumberland, gave it a salt-work at Warkworth. He and his son, William de Warren, of the family of the Earls of Warren, by the mother's side, and named after them, confirmed

In the reign of K. Charles I, it belonged to Colonel George Fenwick, in the service of the Parliament, and governor of Berwick upon Tweed. He was presented with a 1000 l. for his service in Ireland, 1647. The next year he, and Colonel Lilburn, and Mr. Sanderfon, defeated Sir Richard Tempest, and took several officers and gentlemen of note prisoners. I William of the wastle, Am now in my castle,
And awe the dogs in the town

Breeches were made in his castle, and many rich goods were spoiled. Gallant William was forced to surrender; the soldiery ordered to share his goods, except some furniture and bedding for the accommodation of his Lady.

The Colonel was a member for Berwick, and one of the parliament-commissioners to treat with the Scots. He, and Sir Arthur Heselrige, Bart. Thomas Bowes, Henry Tempest, and James Clavering, Esqrs; were five of the ninety-six members not suffered by Oliver Cromwell to sit in his packt parliament, 1656.

On the sale of the lands of the Bishoprick of Durham by the parliament, he purchased the borough of Sunderland, and the manour of Houghton le Spring, 9th November, 1649, for 2851 l. 9s. 6d. and parcels of land in Riehope, 1st June, 1650, for 2091 l. 16s. 3d. (i).

In the church of Berwick, a monument is erected to his memory with this inscription:—

A good man is a public good.

The last male-branch of this family was George Fenwick, Esq; whose daughter and heir, Elizabeth, married Roger Fenwick, of Stanton, Esq; by whom he had four children, the eldest of which, John Fenwick, marrying Margaret one of the daughters and co-heirs of William Fenwick, of Bywell, Esq; occasioned the union of the two antient houses of Brinkburn and Stanton to that of Bywell, now all three possessed by William Fenwick, of Bywell, Esq;

Brinkburn-Priory stands under a hill, on the extreme point of a peninsula, by the north margin of the river Coquet, which in murmuring rills washes part of it, and the garden-walls; edged on the other side with a semicircular ridge of shaggy rocks, covered with ivy, and a variety of plants and shrubs; among them the mountain-ash, and wild guelder-rose, which with their white flowers, and scarlet fruit, add greatly to the beauty of this agreeable solitude.

This venerable pile, and part of the church, in the cathedral form, have been entirely demolished, and the stones converted to build a dwelling-house, now also in decay. The large square Tower of the church, a small spire or steeple, many noble pillars and arches, some of the side-walls, and the dormitory, lately converted to a cellar, are still standing. The church-bell was removed to Durham. The walls are fringed with various plants, with Pellitory of the Wall, and the greater Celandine, and among them the tall flowering Elder lives and flourishes in strength and vigour*.

Six miles south-west from Rothbury, we cross the rivulet of Font by a stone-bridge of one arch, and from the brow of the hill, above the small hamlet of Ewslee, on the left hand, we have a prospect of

Nether-Witton, the seat and manour of the antient family of the Thorntons; of Roger Thornton, the celebrated patron of the corporation of Newcastle upon Tyne (k), who died, 8 K. Henry VI, 1429, after building his castle or Tower of Witton (l); of Sir Roger Thornton, his son, who married Elizabeth the daughter of John Lord Greystock, Baron of Morpeth (m), and was high sheriff of Nor-

The old castle is now in ruins. The present seat is a genteel modern structure, of white freestone, with a flat roof; the gardens to the west; a plantation on a large slope to the east and north-east; a grass-lawn before the south front; the parochial chapel by the south-west corner, dedicated to St. Giles; a paddock of deer between the foot of the lawn and the trout-streams of the Font, on the north side; both sides of the rivulet beautifully shaded with wood; the village small, and irregular.

At the foot of Liniet-Law, on the right hand, is a semicircular lake, between two young plantations; a rill entering it from the north, called, White Den-Sike.

The park is full of deer and game. By the road-side, at a small distance from the Tower, is Rothelay, a small, but well built, pleasant villa, on a rising ground, belonging to Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. who built the Tower, raised the plantations, and formed the semicircular lake before-mentioned, in imitation of nature.

From Rothelay, two miles to the east, we have a view of Long Witton, an irregular villa on an eminence, at the east end of which is the seat of William Swinburn, Esq; brother of John Swinburn, of Newcastle, Esq; who was high sheriff of Northumberland, 1755. It is a neat structure, well sheltered to the north by tall forest trees; a plantation and shrubbery on each side; a grass-lawn before it, to the south, from which is a most beautiful and extensive prospect; a pleasant walk from it southward by a gradual descent for about a mile to a neat garden, under a bank of oaks by a rivulet; a small rill crossing it towards the middle, called, The Den-Burn; a grass-terrace by the rivulet, the opposite banks covered with brushwood; about 150 yards of fire-wall in it, producing excellent fruits; a gardener's house overlooking it from the brow of a hill by the road, fashed, and of grotto-work. Below it, to the north-east, is a winding-path through the bank of oaks to a ridge of rocks, under which are three medical fountains, called, Thurston-wells.

A little lower down, the rivulet is crossed by the Roman caufway, vulgarly called, The Devil's caufway, a branch of the Hereman-street;

street; very fair for a considerable length in a pasture by the roadside above the hill.

On the south side of the rivulet, by the causeway, is a bank of wood belonging to the vicarage of Hartburn, cut into many agreeable walks. On the edge of the rivulet is a grotto, cut out of a rock. Some pleasing objects are let in here and there through the trees, the Latebræ dulces (x); as a falling stream, the gothic Tower and the church at Hartburn, the rocks by Thurstonwells, and Mr. Swinburn's seat of Long Witton. This romantic solitude was formed by the present incumbent, the Rev. Dr. Sharp, archdeacon of Northumberland.

We now pass on from Rothley to Harterton-burn, crossed by a new stone-bridge of one arch, and come to Camhoe (y), i. e. the camp or fort on the hill, which was the villa and seat of Sir Robert de Camhoe, high sheriff of Northumberland, 28, 29, 30 K. Henry III (z). It is now in the possession of Sir Walter Calverley Blacket, Bart. It is a small, well built, pleasant villa, with gardens and enclosures before it on gradual slopes, and a prospect from it of the sea.

Near a mile from Camhoe, is

He was taken prisoner the year following, with some other gentlemen, thirty horse, and arms, and a sumpter with rich clothes, between Northampton and Banbury, by the forces of the parliament, then called, New Nodles, from their establishing their armies on a new model. His son, John Fenwick, was slain in the same year at the battle of Marston-moor. In the year 1645, he was high sheriff of Northumberland, and at the head of the militia for the parliament, having made his peace with them. The royalists are said to have had an intention of giving him correction, by surprizing him and the militia, but were prevented on his receiving private notice of their design (b). He was readmitted to his seat in parliament for Northumberland, 26th June, 1646, by a majority of 124 voices against 73 (i). He married the right honourable Lady Mary eldest daughter of Charles Howard Earl of Carlisle, who after his execution for treason on Tower-hill, 28th January, 8 K. William III, 1696, erected a monument with the following inscription to his memory in the cathedral church of York.

This monumental pillar is erected and dedicated by the right honourable the Lady Mary Fenwick, eldest daughter to Charles Howard Earl of Carlisle, as a testimony of respect to the memory of Sir John Fenwick, baronet, of Fenwick-castle in the county of Northumberland, her deceased husband; by whom she had four children, one daughter, and three sons: Jane, her eldest, died very young, and was buried in a vault in the parish church of St. Nicholas, in Newcastle upon Tyne. Charles, having attained the age of fifteen years, died of the small pox: William was six years old, and Howard a year and a half, when they departed this life. These three sons do all lie with their father in the parish church of St. Martin in the Fields, London; near the altar, where he was interred January 28th, 1696, aged 52.

Lady Fenwick died, 27th October, 1708, in the fiftieth year of her age (k).

Sir John sold this, and other lordships, to the second Sir William Blacket, of Newcastle upon Tyne, Bart. who was high sheriff of Northumberland, 1689. He was succeeded by his son, Sir William Blacket, Bart. who died, 29th February, 1728. ley Blacket, Bart. 27th August, 1729. Sir Walter was high sheriff of Northumberland, 1732; and a representative in parliament for the corporation of Newcastle upon Tyne from February 1734, to the present time. His seat is a modern genteel structure, of white freestone and hewn work; a large garden to the east, in which is a pinery; also shrubberies, pieces of water, plantations, and other ornaments; a park-like field before it to the south, with a gradual slope to the rivulet of Wansbeck, crossed by an elegant stone-bridge of three arches; an islet above it; the rivulet falling below it in broken murmurs from artificial slopes of pebbles, forming a serpentine canal between them for a considerable space, in imitation of nature, beautifully rural.

From Wallington, a mile and a half to the south-west, on the southern banks of the Wansbeck, we have a view of

It came afterwards into the possession of the Aynsley's of Shaftoe (n); and is now the seat and lordship of Garwen Aynsley, Esq; who was high sheriff of Northumberland, 1749. There is a square piece of ground in the villa with a double trench; in length 120 yards, and in breath 80; a raised port-way leading to it. It was the keep or fort for the security of the town, which tradition says was antiently so large, that it consisted of 200 houses, slated.

lane,

lane, from that discovery. They secreted all the coins, and sold them. The sacra, or sacrificing vessels, were of silver. They sold most of these likewise, after breaking the bottoms out of some, and the handles and ornaments off others. They presented these following to Sir John, now in the possession of Sir Edward.

1. A Sympalum, weighing 26 ounces.
2. The bottoms of three others; one weighing a little more than a pound, the other half a pound.
3. The handles of three more, with beautiful figures in relief, and gilt. Upon one is like the bust of a Roman emperor; two smaller figures on each side, one a shepherd holding a crook in his left hand, two or three sheep lying by his side; the other resembles a poor man looking towards the emperor in a supplicatory attitude, his body bending, and resting upon a staff, seemingly with both hands, with something like a bundle on his back. Below, on the middle of the handle, is a winged Mercury, in a sitting posture, with a Caduceus in his right hand, his left inclining on a bench or seat, grasping something like a ball, with a cock under him, in the attitude of crowing. At the bottom are two other deities, standing; one a Diana, in a loose robe, holding a spear in her right hand, a dog looking up in her face, her left hand resting on her hip; the other is a Silenus, naked to the feet, holding a bunch of grapes in his right hand, and a nymphaea or water lilly in his left, with a canthera or jolly flaggon by him, swelling with the grape at the brim.

On another handle are the figures of three animals slain for sacrifice; one a lion, another a stag, and a third a wild boar.

On the third handle is the figure of a priestess before an altar sacrificing, holding incense in her right hand, and a Thyrſus in her left; above her head, is like the head of a bearded emperor, and at the bottom two other smaller figures.

4. Part of a handle, whercon is a figure of Mars, in armour; and below, a Flamen before the altar of a temple in a grove sacrificing; gilt, and in relief.

5. A figure of Hercules and Antæus wrestling——

finely executed; the lyon's skin and club lying by them, on the left hand.

6. A Neptune, naked to the waist, in a reclining posture, holding his trident in his right hand, and an anchor in his left.

The lane, in which these antiquities were found, is only about a mile from the Roman caufway. They seem by the workmanship to be as antient as the time of Agricola, who made the grand roads in Britain, and in whose time the Romans wore beards, as expressed in the two figures; it not being the custom for that polite people to wear any from the 454 year of the city till the emperor Hadrian (k). The Roman Hercules, and his two rival heroes in gymnastic feats, Theseus and Perithous, are set in no very favourable light by the virtuous Mantuan, who represents them as trying their strength in Pluto's regions, and doing acts of violence there; intimating, that the spirit and temper men die in, attend them beyond the grave (l).

Near the Roman caufway, in fight from the road by Shortflat, and from Cap-Heaton, is Harnbam, or Hernbam, i. e. the hamlet by the military way; Harn or Hern being a contraction of the Roman Hermen, from Hermes, Mercurius, the god of travellers, and Custos Manium and high-ways; and of the Saxon Hereman or Hareman, a military road. It stands on an eminence, and has been a place of great strength and security; a range of perpendicular rocks of rag-stone on one side, and a morafs on the other; the entrance by a narrow declivity to the north, which in the memory of some persons now living had an iron-gate. The manour-house is on the south-west corner of the precipice, built on to an old tower. In the reign of K. Charles II, it was the feat of Colonel Philip Babington, governor of Berwick upon Tweed. He married Catharine the widow of Colonel George Fenwick, of Brinkburn (m). She was the eldest daughter of Sir Arthur Hezelrigge, of Nofely, in Leicefterfhire, Bart. by Dorothy Greenville, fifter to Robert Lord Brook. She was born at Brooke-house, in London, in November, 1635. She was interred in a lead-coffin, the next day after her death, in a vault cut out of the folid rock below the old tower, now belonging to Mr. Thomas Leighton, by whose favour I faw the fepulchral grot, in company with the Rev. Mr. George Fenwick, vicar of Bolham, 1760; moft of the coffin then remaining, and fome of the bones. On a pane of glafs in the middle window of Mr. Leighton's houfe her name and the colonel's, with the date of the year, are written with a diamond.

It is said, she was denied Christian burial by an excommunication for contempt of ecclesiastical censure, which was the reason of her sepulture in the curious grot in the rock. The colonel survived her, and marrying again, had several children; the youngest of whom he named after her, Catharine, who married a gentleman in Yorkshire, in whose possession is the pedigree of his family, wherein are portrayed the chiefs of it in full length, and among them Sir John Babington, one of the six young knights chosen by K. Henry IV., when in France, to go upon a desperate enterprize, which by his own petition he undertook himself, using these words on his taking leave of the king, Foy est tous, i. e. Faith is all, brandishing his sword. Having performed it, beyond all human expectation, the king gave him for his crest, a flaming dragon's head, with this motto, Foy est tous, proceeding from its mouth; with which he stands distinguished among his family-chieftains, in armour.

At the west end of the church is a gallery. On the front is the following inscription in gold letters.

Mr. Richard Coates died January 3d, 1719.

And left his whole effects at or about 70 l. per ann. to the parish of Pont Island for a charity-school; the Rev. Mr. Byne, vicar of Pont Island, the Rev. Mr. Forster of St. John's in Newcastle, and Mr. Charles Clark, attorney in Newcastle, being (with their successors) left trustees for ever to see it justly applied.

On the south end of the gallery is another inscription in black letters.

Mrs. Barbara Coates built the school-house, and erected this gallery, at her own charge, after her husband's decease.

I am informed, that 27 l. per ann. is all that is applied to the use of this school; and that the late vicar and archdeacon, Dr. Robinson, filed a bill in chancery against the trustees, who, after an expence of upwards of 50 l. dropt his suit; and gave it as his opinion, that the abuse could only be remedied by a commission of charitable uses, which might extend to the whole diocese.

On the north side of the chancel is a flat sepulchral stone over Cuthbert Ogle, of Kirkley, Esq; who died, 14th January, 1655.

Within the communion-rails, near the altar, is a flat funeral stone, of blue marble, with this inscription.

THIS indenture made the seventeenth day of June, in the first year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord James the Second by the Grace of God of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, King, defender of the faith, &c. Anno Dom. 1685, between John Shaftoe of Nether Warden in the county of Northumberland, clerk, of the one part, and William Shaftoe of Cary-Coates in the said county, gent. nephew of the said John Shaftoe, John Armstrong of Wood-Shields in the said county, Gent. John Bacon of Starward in the said county, Gent. Farrer Armstrong, son of the said John Armstrong, Nicholas Maughen of Whinnetly in the said county, Yeoman, and John Atkinson of Haydon-bridge in the said county, Yeoman, and Ralph Shaftoe, of the other part, Witnessth, that the said John Shaftoe for the settling of the messuages, lands, and tenements hereinafter mentioned to the honour and glory of ALMIGHTY God in the education and instruction of youth in the knowledge of his word, and for and towards the maintenance of poor distressed protestant families, and for putting out to apprentices poor children, and for divers other good causes and valuable considerations him the said John Shaftoe hereunto moving, hath granted, alienated, sold, released, and confirmed, and by these presents doth for himself and his heirs, grant, alien, sell, release, and confirm unto the said William Shaftoe, John Armstrong, John Bacon, Farrer Armstrong, Nicholas Maughen, John Akinfen, and Ralph Shaftoe, their heirs and assigns for ever all that his manor, lordship, or capital messuage of Musphen, alias Mousen, with the appurtenances, and also all those towns, villages, and hamlets, of Mousen and Newlands, with all lands, tenements, hereditaments, and appurtenances whatsoever, to them and every of them belonging, or in any wise appertaining, situate in the parish of Bambrough and county of Northumberland aforesaid, and all the tithes of corn, grain, pig, goose, calf, and all other ecclesiastical right within the manour, lordship, or capital messuage of Musphen, alias Mousen, and Newland aforesaid (the tithe of wool and lamb, and the water-corn-mill there, called Mousen-mill, only excepted) together with all and singular houses, edifices, buildings, barns, byers, stables, dove-coates, orchards, garths, gardens, lands, tenements, meadows, leasones, feedings, pastures, commons, and common of pasture, and turbary, wastes, wast-grounds, heaths, moors, whinnes, quarrys, woods, underwoods, and trees, water, fishings, rents, reversions, services, easements, ways, paths, passages, profits, commodities, hereditaments, and appurtenances, whatsoever to the said manour, lordship, or capital messuage, messuages, townships, villages, and hamlets belonging or in any wise appertaining, or to or with the same now or at any time heretofore held, used, occupied, or enjoyed, or accepted, reputed, taken, or known to be as part, parcell, or member thereof; and the reversion, and reversions, remainder, and remainders, of all and singular the premises, and every part and parcel thereof, and all his the said John Shaftoe's estate, right, title, interest, use, possession, claim, property, and demand whatsoever of, in, and to the premises, or any part, or parcell thereof (the said William Shaftoe, John Armstrong, John Bacon, Farrer Armstrong, Nicholas Maughen, John Atkinson, and Ralph Shaftoe, being in actual possession of all and singular the premises, by virtue of a deed or bargain and sale bearing date the day next before the date of these presents, whereby the premises are demised to them, their heirs, and assigns, for the term of one whole year, to commence from the day next before the making thereof, and of the statute for transferring uses into possession, to the end that they might be enabled to take a grant, release, or confirmation thereof to them, and their heirs for ever; to have and to hold the said manor, lordship, or capital messuage, towns, townships, villages, or hamlets, messuages, lands, tenements, and premises, and all and singular other the premises above, herein, and hereby granted, alienated, released, and confirmed, or mentioned, or intended so to be, with their and every of their appurtenances, unto the said William Shaftoe, John Armstrong, John Bacon, Farrer Armstrong, Nicholas Maughen, John Atkinson, and Ralph Shaftoe, their heirs, and assigns, for ever to the several uses, intents, and purposes nevertheless in these presents mentioned, exprest, and declared, and upon the several trusts hereinafter mentioned, and in them, and their assigns, reposed; (That is to say) to the use and behoof of the said John Shaftoe, and his assigns for and during the term of his natural life, without impeachment of or for any manner of waste, and from and after his death and decease, then all and singular the above-mentioned premises unto the said William Shaftoe, John Armstrong, John Bacon, Farrer Armstrong, Nicholas Maughen, John Atkinson, and Ralph Shaftoe, their heirs and assigns, and the survivour or survi-

vours of them who shall be living at the death of the said John Shastoe, to these several intents and purposes, and upon the several trusts and confidences hereafter mentioned in them reposed; (That is to say) upon trust and confidence in them the said William Shastoe, John Armstrong, John Bacon, Farrer Armstrong, Nicholas Maugben, John Atkinson, and Ralph Shastoe, and the survivors of them, and their assigns, reposed; That they the said trustees, and the survivors of them, or the major number of them, or the survivors of them who shall be living at the time of the decease of the said John Shastoe, shall with all the convenient speed that may be after the death of the said John Shastoe, sett, lett, or demise all and every part of the said premisses for any number of years, as to them shall seem meet, reserving the full improved rents at four quarterly payments; and that they, or the survivors of them, or the major part of them, shall annually elect, and choose one of them which shall be thought most fit to receive and pay the said rents and profits, according to the disposition and appointment hereafter expressed, which person so elected shall enter into bond to any one or more of them the said trustees, or survivor, or survivors of them, in double the computed yearly value of the said premisses for the true payment and disposing of all the said rents and profits of the said premisses to the uses and purposes herein after mentioned, and give a just account thereof to the rest of them the said trustees, or the survivors of them, or their assigns, within one month after demand thereof, retaining for the trouble therein for the year twenty shillings, and twenty shillings more to defray his and the other trustees expences one whole year in meeting or otherwise concerning the trust in them reposed. And upon trust and confidence in them the said trustees, and the survivors of them, and the heirs and assigns of the survivors of them, who shall be trustees, reposed, That they the said trustees, and the survivors of them and their assigns, or the major number of them, shall with the one moiety of the said rents and profits of the said premises, as soon as there is sufficient, purchase a convenient parcel of land in Haydon-Bridge aforesaid to themselves, and settle the same in like manner as the above said premises shall be vested at the time of the purchase thereof, and the uses herein mentioned, and shall thereupon erect and build a house for a free grammar school-house, and keep an English school, and a dwelling-house for the master of the same school, and shall by a note by them, or the survivors of them, or the major part of them, signed, elect, and choose, by the advice and examination of some reverend divines, an able scholar, being an University-scholar, of the degree of Master of Arts, and of good life and conversation, approved by the Bishop or Archdeacon of the diocese, by signing the same note; and one usher, to be approved of by the Minister of the parish of Warden, who shall teach and instruct any number of boys, girls, and young men, who are or shall be born within the chapelry of Haydon, or at Wood-Shields in the chapelry of Newbrough, both in the parish of Warden, and county of Northumberland, and shall pay unto the usher of the same school yearly ten pounds, and no more, out of the moiety of the rents and profits of the said premises at four quarterly payments, and the residue of the moiety of the rents and profits of the same premises, the moiety of the necessary charges of gathering and receiving the same deducted, shall pay yearly to the masters of the said grammar-school, at four payments, as the same shall be had in, and received, for their maintenance and salary: and upon the like trust and confidence, that they the said trustees, and their assigns who shall be trustees, and seized of the said premises, do take security to some two of them at the least, from such to keep the said house and school-house in good and sufficient reparation, and leave it so in repair. And that if such master or usher, as shall at any time be chosen, shall wilfully and obstinately neglect the duty of their or either of their places, or shall become unfit for the same by any means whatsoever; that then the said trustees, and those who shall at any time hereafter be trustees and seized of the said premises, or the major number of them, shall and may, by writing under their hands shewing the cause thereof, declare such master and usher to be unfit, and put him or them out, and thereupon, and upon the death of either of them, to elect another in manner aforesaid. And that the said trustees, and such who shall at any time hereafter be trustees, and seized of the said estate, shall not permit the under-master or usher to take for the teaching of any boy or girl, who shall be born within the chapelry of Haydon and Wood-sheels aforesaid, above one penny for every quarter of the year for teaching and instructing them in the Latin and Greek tongues, upon pain of forfeiting and being turned out of their said places: and upon further trust in them the said trustees, and those who shall be trustees, and seized of the said premises, reposed, That if by the death of the said master and usher, and either of them, or other vacancy, the salary or stipend of the said masters, and either of them, shall lie and remain in the hands of such receiver or trustees to be chosen as aforesaid, that they shall from time to time, as often as such accidents happen, in such vacancy of a master, therewith or with part thereof, repair, new-build, or amend, the school-house, and dwelling-house, to be built as aforesaid, and the clear overplus of such sums so as aforesaid coming unto the said grantees or trustees hands, shall be by them distributed amongst the poor hereafter mentioned, and as is hereafter directed. And upon this further trust and confidence in them the said trustees, and such other persons who shall be trustees, and seized of the said premises, reposed, That they, or the major number of them, do, and shall pay and distribute the other moiety of the other remaining moiety, or the fourth part of the whole clear rent of the premises (a fourth part of the necessary charges for receiving the same being deducted) for ever half-yearly among poor protestant families within the said chapelry of Haydon and Wood-sheels afore said, according to their several necessities, and the discretion of the said grantees or trustees, or those who shall at any time be trustees or grantees, or the major number of them: and the other fourth part, the remainder of the rents and profits of the said premises, to be disposed of yearly for putting out to trades poor protestant children, born, or to be born, within the chapelry of Haydon, or any of the owners tenants or farmers at Wood-sheels afore said, at the discretion of the said trustees, or those who shall be trustees, or the major number of them: Provided always, and it is the true intent and meaning of these presents, and of all the parties hereunto, and these presents, are upon the further trust and confidence in them the said trustees, and survivor or survivors of them, and in all and every other person or persons who shall be trustees and seized of the said premises, reposed, That as soon as it shall happen any three or more of the said grantees or trustees, or of any other trustees who shall at any time hereafter be seized of the above-mentioned premises, shall dye, then the surviving grantees or trustees shall, with all convenient speed, that may be, elect and choose three or more to make up the number of seven to be trustees, and fill up the vacancy of those who are dead, and shall convey over the premises to some person, or persons by them, or the major part of them, agreed on, the fee and inheritance of the said premises, who shall immediately reconvey to the old trustees, and such new trustees as shall be elected, electd, the said premisses, to the use of themselves, and the said other grantees or trustees to be electd, and for the uses and benefits above in these presents mentioned and declared, and so from time to time when only four trustees are surviving. They, or such as shall survive, shall continually and with all speed join with themselves three or more other grantees or trustees of the premisses in manner and form aforesaid, as by the counsell learned in the law may be advisd; to the intent, that the fee and inheritance of the said premisses, and the rents, issues, and profits, may for ever hereafter be disposed of to the uses, intents, and purposes, and in such sort, manner and form, as is above in these presents mentioned, expressed, and declared: And, lastly, upon this further trust and confidence in them the said trustees, and their assigns, who shall be trustees, reposed, That if it shall at any time hereafter happen any difference shall arise concerning election or putting out of the schoolmaster, usher, scholar, poor, or objects of charity, or concerning any matter whatsoever by them to be done as trustees by virtue thereof, so that they the said trustees are divided in their votes, that then the bishop or archdeacon of the diocese shall have the casting vote, and then that they the said trustees shall do and perform according as either of them shall approve of: In witness whereof the parties aforesaid to these presents interchangeably have set their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

An Anecdote annexed to the said Deed.

JOHN Shaftoe, clerk, granted to Patrick Crow, Gent. all that messuage, hamlet, village, or tenement, with its rights, members, and appurtenances, commonly called and known by the name of Newland, situate, lying, or being in the said county of Northumberland, and now or late in the possession and occupation of or

Gilbert Swinoe, or his under-tenant, or assignes, together with seven stints or beast-gates, and liberty of depasturing at all times in the year for seven beasts, or stints, in and throughout the demesne-lands, of Musfen, alias Mousen, in the said county of Northumberland; together also with two horses grafs, and thirty sheep's grafs, or liberty of depasturing, feeding, and going at all times in the year for two horses or mares, and thirty sheep, in and throughout the town-fields of Musfen, alias Mousen, afore said, in the said county of Northumberland; and also all that water-corn-mill, with its rights, members, and appurtenances, situate, standing, and being in Musfen, alias Mousen, afore said, commonly called or known by the name of Mousen-mill, now or late in the possession or occupation of the said Gilbert Swinoe or his assignes; and also one cow's grafs, with a calf, or follower, and two horses, or liberty of depasturing and feeding one cow, with a calf, or follower, and two horses or mares, at all times in the year, in and throughout the said town-fields of Musfen, alias Mousen, afore said, in right of, and as belonging to the said water-corn-mill.

Vol. II. No. 3.

Mr. Shaftoe's Will.

IN the name of God, Amen. I John Shaftoe, of Nether Warden in the county of Northumberland, clerk, being in good health of body and of sound and perfect mind and memory, praise be therefore given to ALMIGHTY GOD, do make and ordain this my present last will and testament in manner and form following; (that is to say) first and principally I commend my soul into the hands of ALMIGHTY GOD, hoping through the merits of the death and passion of my Saviour JESUS CHRIST, to have full and free pardon and forgiveness of all my sins, and to inherit everlasting lasting life, and my body I commit to the earth to be decently buried at the discretion of my executors hereafter named, and as touching the disposition of all such temporal estate as it hath pleased ALMIGHTY GOD to bestow upon me, I give and dispose thereof as followeth. First, I give and bequeath to the chapelry of Haydon one annuity or annual rent of twenty pounds per annum for ever, to be paid out of my lands, tenements, and hereditaments of Moufin in the county of Northumberland, at the feasts and terms of Martinmas and Pentecost yearly by equal portions, the first payment thereof to begin at such of the said feasts as shall next happen after the death of me the said John Shaftoe, and not before, for the use of a Grammar-School to be kept at Haydon-bridge, and maintenance of poor families in the said chappelry of Haydon, equally to be divided (viz.) ten pounds per annum to the said school, and ten pounds per annum to the said poor families. Item, I give and bequeath to the said chappelry of Haydon, in the said county of Northumberland, one other annuity of twenty pounds per annum for ever, to be issuing or going out of these engagements or mortgages I have of the lands and estate of Sir John Heron, Bart. late deceased (viz.) ten pounds per annum thereof towards the keeping of the said grammar school, and the other ten pounds to the use of the said poor families in the said chappelry, at the feasts of Martinmas and pentecost yearly by equal portions, the first payment thereof likewise to begin at such of the said feasts as shall next happen after the death of me the said John Shaftoe. Item, I give and bequeath an augmentation of ten pounds for ever to the parish church of Slaley in the said county of Northumberland, to be paid out of the said engagements or mortgages of the said Sir John Heron's estate, at the feasts and terms aforesaid, and I do hereby ordain and appoint Mr. Archdeacon, and Mr. John Rowell, and their successors, executors for all the said monies for the aforesaid charitable and pious uses, and I do hereby nominate and appoint John Bacon, of Staward, in the aforesaid county, Esq; John Atkinson of Haydon-Bridge, and Nicholas Maugham of Tedcastle, both in the aforesaid chappelry of Haydon, yeomen, trustees and governors of the said money bequeathed by me for the said school and poor of Haydon chappelry, and when any of them shall die, the survivors to elect a third person with them in, and at all time and times after my death to provide a sufficient schoolmaster for the said school, and distribute the said monies so bequeathed to such needful and poor families as they shall think fit in the said chappelry. Item, I give and bequeath to my nephew Mr. Ralph Shaftoe, of Carycoats, the sum of eight hundred pounds out of engagements and mortgages of Sir John Heron's estate, the interest thereof to be paid him at feasts and terms above-said. Item, I give and bequeath unto my nephew Mr. John Shaftoe, son of my brother Mr. Charles Shaftoe of Carycoates the sum of two hundred pounds out of the said engagements or mortgages of Sir John Heron's estate, the interest thereof to be paid him at the feasts and terms aforesaid. Item, I give and bequeath to my said brother Charles Shaftoe's five daughters, that are now unmarried the sum of eight hundred pounds in manner and form following (viz.) Five hundred pounds thereof out of the said engagements or mortgages of Sir John Heron's estate, the interest thereof to be paid them at the feasts and terms above-mentioned; and other three hundred pounds to be paid by my son Daniel Shaftoe, his heirs or assigns, out of my lands and hereditaments of Moufyn, the said eight hundred pounds to be disposed of among them as their father and mother think fit. Item, I give and bequeath unto John Atkinson of Haydon-bridge, my clerke, and servant, the sum of four hundred pounds for the use of his children that are now unmarried (viz.) Two hundred pounds thereof upon a mort-

mortgage of Gabriel Read's estate of Trough-end, Esq; with all my title and interest to the same, and one other hundred pounds, part thereof upon a mortgage of Mr. Ralph Ferwick's of Bavington, with all my title and interest to the same; and one other hundred pounds to be paid him or them by my son Daniel Shaftoe, his heirs or assigns, out of my lands and hereditaments of Moufin, immediately after my death. And my will and pleasure is, that the said John Atkinson shall distribute all the said four hundred pounds amongst his said three children, (viz.) John, Mary, and Margaret, as he thinks fit and convenient. Item, I give and bequeath to my son Daniel Shaftoe, and to his heirs for ever, all my lands, tenements, and hereditaments of Moufin aforesaid, he and they paying and discharging all such legacies as I have bequeathed and given in this my last will and testament, to the uses and persons aforesaid, to be paid out of the said estate of Moufin. And I give to the said John Bacon, Esq; and John Atkinson, my trustees aforesaid for the said pious and charitable uses, each of them a guinea for a token, to be paid by my executors. Item, all the rest of my goods and chattells, ready money, bills and bonds, and all debts whatsoever, in whose hands soever, I give to my loving brother Charles Shaftoe of Carycoates, and John Shaftoe of Bavington, Esq; equally to be divided betwixt them, whom I make my joint executors of this my last will and testament, and of the execution of the same—excepting only for the pious and charitable uses. And I do revoke and disannull, and make void all former wills and testaments, as witness this thirteenth day of May, in the year of the reign of our sovereign Lord and Lady William and Mary, by the grace of God King and Queen of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, defenders of the faith, &c. Annoq; Domini 1693.

Signed, sealed, and delivered by the said John Shastoe, as and for his last will and testament, in the presence of us }

Thomas Shastoe,

John Shastoe, Junr.

William Errington, Junr.

Be it known unto all men by these presents, that whereas I John Shastoe, of Nether-Warden, in the county of Northumberland, clerk, have made and declared my last will and testament in writing, bearing date with these presents, I the said John Shastoe do by this Codicil confirm and ratify my said last will and testament, and do give and bequeath unto Ann, the daughter of Wil- liam Errington of Bradley, in the said county, yeoman, the sum of one hundred pounds of good English money, and my will and meaning is, that this Codicil be adjudged as part of my last will and testament, and that all things contained and mentioned be truly and fully performed, as full and amply in every respect as if the same were declared and set down in my said last will and testament within written. In witness whereof I have here-unto set my hand and seal the day and year within written, 1693.

Giles Heron's Will.

In the name of God, Amen, I Giles Heron, late of Lee-hall, and now of Wark, in the parish of Simonburn, and county of Northumberland, yeoman, being well of body and of perfect mind and remembrance, do willingly and with a free heart render and give again, into the hands of my Lord God and Creator, my spirit, which he of his fatherly goodness gave unto me, when he first fashioned me in my mother's womb, making me a living and reasonable creature, nothing doubting but for his infinite mercies set forth in the precious blood of his dearly beloved Son JESUS CHRIST, our only Saviour and Redeemer, he will receive my soul into his glory, and place it in the company of the heavenly angels and blessed spirits; and as concerning my body, even with a good will und free heart I give it over, commending it to the earth whereof it came, nothing doubting but according to the articles of my faith and the great day of the general resurrection, when we shall appear before the judgment seat of CHRIST, I shall receive the same again by the mighty power of God wherewith he is able to subdue all things to himself, not a corruptible vile and weak body as it is now, but an incorruptible strong and perfect body in all parts like unto the body of my Lord and Saviour JESUS CHRIST; and as touching the disposition of all such temporal estate, as God of his great goodness hath given unto me, I do by this my last will and testament give and dispose thereof as followeth. First, I think it a good work of charity, and commendable before God, to distribute the greatest part of the same to pious and charitable uses, and it is rather my desire desire to see some part for such uses settled in my lifetime, than to leave it by and according to the direction of any other person or persons to be done after my death, and considering the great necessity of a free school for the education of children of all and every the inhabitants within the said parish, and the inhabitants of Chipchace, Birtley, and Birtley-Sheels within the parish of Choller-ton, I do therefore give and bequeath unto the parish of Simonburn the sum of two hundred pounds now in the hands of William Charleton of Hesleyside, and Cuthbert Charleton of Lee-hall, in the said county, Gent. received by them of me for the use abovementioned, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever. And my will and pleasure therefore is, that my trustees, namely George Heron, John Reed, Thomas Dobson, Thomas White, and Edward Robson, all of Humshaugh, William Smith of Westerhaughton, Robert Elliot of Haughton-Strother, William Liddle of Long-Rigge, and Nicholas Ridley of Eals, do immediately in my name (in case the said William Charleton, and Cuthbert refuse to pay the said sum of two hundred pounds) prosecute and implead the said William Charleton, and Cuthbert Charleton, and their sureties or any of them, for the said sum, in any court of common law or chancery, and upon the receipt thereof that they my said trustees and Christopher Charleton of Hetherington, Reginald Charleton of Motehill, and Edward Dodd of Esh, or the major part of them, together with the parson of Simonburn-parish, for the time being, do choose and appoint an able and sufficient schoolmaster, such as shall be approved on by the lord bishop of the diocese of Durham, and so from time to time upon the death or removal of such schoolmaster, such another to reside and teach a free school at the town of Wark in the said parish for ever; and that the said trustees shall make the best advantage and profit of the said sum, they upholding the principal as a stock, and the profits and interest thereof they shall receive at two terms in the year year (that is to say) by half yearly payments, and at the said terms by equal portions, they shall pay the interest so received unto the schoolmaster of the said free school for the time, that he shall discharge the duty of an able schoolmaster in manner as aforesaid; and my mind is, that the parson of Simonburn, for the time being, and his successors with my trustees aforesaid, and Christopher Charleton, Reginald Charleton, and Edward Dodd, and the survivors of them, shall be the governors of the said free school, and shall have the presenting of a schoolmaster as aforesaid, and that all bonds or securities to be taken for the said monies shall be taken in their names, and in case of the decease of them or any of them, then the parson and the survivors of them the said trustees, shall, in convenient time, elect and choose one or more of such able and fit inhabitants of the said parish of Simonburn, to supply the place or places of such dying trustees, who shall succeed them therein. Item, all the rest and residue of my goods and chattels, as well real as personal, and my ready money, mortgages, rent charges, bills, bonds, book-debts, debts due upon simple contract, in whose hand or hands soever they be, I give unto the said trustees first before named merely in trust for the use of the poor of the said parish of Simonburn (that is to say) that they may to the best of their skill make the best, surest, and greatest advantage and profit thereof upon good security for interest, and the said advantage and profit they shall receive, pay and distribute among such poor, needy and indigent persons of the same parish of Simonburn, as they shall judge most necessitated and proper for it, at two feasts or terms of payment, (that is to say) All Saints Day and Good Friday, by even and equal portions, but the principal to be always kept intire and upheld as a stock for the end aforesaid; and my will and pleasure is, that if there be any indigent persons within the said parish of

Simonburn of the name of Heron, or coming from any other parish to inhabit or reside in the said parish, that they shall have a proportion of the said distribution in the first place. And further my will and desire is, that if there happen to be any surplussage remaining of the said profits, interest or consideration-money, that then the same shall be employed on or towards the binding of some one or more of the children of some of the poor inhabitants of the same parish of Simonburn, to be apprentices to such trades and in such places as the said parson and my trustees or the major part of them shall think fit, and if any of the said children shall happen to be of the name of Heron, that they shall be first provided for; and my will is, that my said trustees shall yearly make an account of their distributions and payments aforesaid, and of the rest of their trust, to the parson and churchwardens of the said parish of Simonburn at Penticost, which shall be registred in the parish book. And I do hereby name and appoint the said George Heron, John Reed, Thomas Dobson, Thomas White, Edward Robson, William Smith, Robert Elliot, William Liddle, and Nicholas Ridley, my executors in trust for the uses aforesaid, for the better performance of the said trusts, and I revoke all former wills. As witness my hand and seal this three and twentieth day of September, in the one and thirtieth year of the reign of our sovereign Lord Charles the second by the grace of God, King of England, &c. Annoq; Dom. 1679. Signed, sealed, published, and declared by the within named Gyles Heron, as and for his last will and testament, in the presence of us Robert Delaval, George Ridley, Thomas Teasdaile, Tim. Pye, Peter Barrell.
